President Indorses Camp In Georgia Senate Race; Talmadge 'Threat' Grows

Roosevelt Flatly Backs District Attorney to Unseat George.

Aids New Dealer In Surprise Talk

Receives Degree Today From U. of Georgia; Senator Silent.

By the Associated Press.

Warm Springs, Ga., Aug. 10.—President Roosevelt gave a flat indorsement today to Lawrence S. Camp, Atlanta Federal district attorney, who is seeking to unseat Senator Walter F. George in the Georgia senatorial primary.

Camp has pledged 100 per cent loyalty to the Administration. Along with Gov. E. D. Rivers, also a New Deal supporter, he was a luncheon guest of the President at the Warm Springs Foundation today.

In a brief informal address, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"We are very much honored today in having as guests of Warm Springs Gov. Rivers, who is an old friend of ours, and also a gentleman who I hope will be the next Senator from this State, Lawrence Camp."

Speech Is Unexpected.

Besides George and Camp, former Gov. Eugene Talmadge and W. G. McRae, Atlanta attorney, are seeking the senatorial nomination.

George has frequently opposed major Administration measures, and generally has been regarded as a conservative in the Senate.

The speech was unexpected. It was made before an assemblage of the patients at Warm Springs in the breeze-swept dining hall of the foundation.

The President had talked at length with Rivers and Camp during luncheon, apparently going over the Georgia political situation. Camp sat at his left and Rivers at his right hand.

White House authorities said Rivers and Camp would rejoin the President at Athens, Ga., tomorrow, when the President will receive an honorary degree from the University of Georgia.

From Athens, the Chief Executive will move on to Barnesville, Ga., where he is expected to reassert his indorsement of Camp, intimate criticism of George, and possibly touch on the Southern economic situation.

In Atlanta, Senator George said he had no comment on the President's speech. George, along with Camp, is slated to sit on the platform at the President's Barnesville speech. Mc-

Garner 'Logical' 1940 Candidate, Burke Declares

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Aug. 10.—Vice President Garner will be the logical candidate for President in 1940, said Senator Burke, of Nebraska, Democratic critic of the Roosevelt policies in general and of the national labor relations act in particular, before he sailed today on the United States liner Manhattan.

Off to attend the Interparliamentary Congress at The Hague were Senators Burke, Schwellenbach, of Washington, and Shipstead, of Minnesota, and Representative Caldwell, of Florida.

New Dealers Lose 1, Win 2 Senate Tests

Clark Defeats Pope in Idaho; Mrs. Caraway, Bulkley Nominated.

By the Associated Press.

The defeat of Senator Pope by a conservative Democrat in Idaho's Democratic primary gave Administration officials a jolt yesterday, but they were gratified over the success of Senators Bulkley and Caraway in Ohio and Arkansas, respectively.

The contest between Pope, ardent Administration supporter, and Representative D. Worth Clark, who proclaimed that he was no Administration "yes man," had been described by some as a test of the New Deal's popularity in Idaho.

Clark had 40,729 votes to 37,189 for Pope in 664 of the 802 precincts.

During the campaign, Postmaster General Farley made it clear in an address that the Administration hoped Pope would be returned to the Senate.

Critic of Administration.

As a House member, Clark opposed the Government and court reorganization bills. He also has criticized Administration foreign policy.

While Pope had the indorsement of Administration aides, he had not received any direct indication of favor from President Roosevelt as had Senators Bulkley and Caraway.

On his recent Western train trip, the President praised Bulkley in Ohio and in Arkansas referred to Mrs. Caraway as his "old friend."

Bulkley won renomination by a two to one majority and Mrs. Caraway held a substantial lead over two opponents in late unofficial tabulations of the Arkansas vote.

John Hamilton, G. O. P. national chairman, said in a statement that Pope's defeat was "another repudiation by American voters of President Roosevelt's demand for the

'Can't Lick Me,' Candidate Cries

Ridicules Both Rivals in Roaring Drive for Senatorial Toga.

By Sidney Olson.
A Staff Correspondent.

Waycross, Ga., Aug. 10.—From the mountains to the sea over Georgia's gaudy landscape "comes astompin'" Eugene Talmadge, Crackerland's familiar demon, the red-gallused harpy from Hahira.

He is giving both the New Deal and Senator Walter F. George the "shootin' fits" and only the last vote count will rule finally on his Senatorial candidacy. For Gene Talmadge, who looks up to no man and down on no man, is marching through Georgia like a popular Sherman, laying waste the other candidates' programs and burning up each crossroads with oratory as hot as a blazing pitch-pine.

Hotel room politicians in the State's big cities will tell you he hasn't a chance. They may know something, but the fact remains that literally hundreds of average men interviewed at random throughout the State have been almost unanimously in favor of giving Talmadge a fling at Washington politics.

Draws Huge Audiences.

Over the hell-red earth and brilliant green meadows of Georgia from the hooked-rug and bedspread salesmen, whose brilliant wares make the northern section's highways look like flag-day on Fifth Avenue, down through the corn and cotton country to this rich tobacco land, Talmadge is roaring his familiar "Now my countrymen" to the largest audiences any politician (barring only President Roosevelt) is drawing in this campaign.

Today in Tifton, Ga., in the very midst of the tobacco harvest season, a town whose normal population is only 3,390, Talmadge packed fully 3,000 citizens around a newly whitewashed platform to hear him lambaste Senator George and Lawrence B. Camp, the young attorney who is the New Deal's 100 per center.

Talmadge does not waste time. He comes down with both feet running. And for a full hour and a half he drips raw acid on his opponents and on the New Deal. The crowds love it. They talk back to him to spur him on. They bring up old scores just to cackle with delight as he romps rough-shod over his

Turnage Wins Court Acquittal Of Liquor Charge in Collision

United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage was yesterday acquitted of charges of driving an automobile while "at all" under influence of intoxicants, and was ordered to pay fine and costs of $16.45 on a charge of driving to the left of the center of a road in Colmar Manor, Md.

Justice of the Peace William A. Bobb ordered the fine after Turnage had denied that he was driving under the influence of alcohol, but admitted he was probably at fault for trying to drive with a broken pair of glasses.

Turnage was arrested the night of July 16 after his automobile had collided with one driven by Clarence W. Weaver, of Silver Spring Md.

Maryland State Policeman N. W. Scarboro testified in Colmar Manor Courthouse that Turnage was stumbling about after the crash, unable to recognize friends, and that Turnage had admitted having a couple of drinks. In reply Turnage said that he was unable to see without his glasses because of astigmatism, but did not recall telling the officer he had had the drinks.

Turnage said he had played golf at the Beaver Dam Country Club and had one Tom Collins before and one after playing.

Numerous prominent persons in Prince Georges County and Washington were on hand to testify to Turnage's character, but following a conference with State's Attorney Alan Bowie, Justice Bobb announced that the court was convinced of Turnage's good character and dismissed the witnesses.

Ho... hum—the end of Douglas Corrigan's busy day in Washington.

Corrigan's Reception Here, Including One Wrong-Way Trip, Leaves Him Pretty Weary, But He Really Seems to Like the Capital.

(Additional Pictures on Pages 7 and 12.)

By Edward T. Folliard

Douglas Corrigan, a most unorthodox hero, came to Washington yesterday and conquered it utterly.

Wearing his leather windbreaker, grinning roguishly and standing pat on the greatest whopper of the age, the New York-to-Dublin flier did what no other visiting hero ever did. He made all Washington laugh in a temperature of 90 degrees.

Guided by 26 motorcycle policemen, who had strict orders not to let him go astray, Corrigan traveled a route reserved for the Nation's great, down Constitution avenue and up Pennsylvania avenue, along which thousands cheered and laughed.

Just to maintain his record for bewilderment, Corrigan went the wrong way again last night. He missed an engagement to call at the Irish Legation. There were indications, however, that the official committee, not his compass, was to blame.

Wherever Corrigan went there was laughter—not at him, but with him—rich, lilting laughter, such as the Irish sing about. It rippled all over the town, infecting the poor, Storm Fires Dynamo in Agriculture Building, Darkens Homes.

Lightning, which climaxed Washington's most humid day of the summer, last night struck the roof of Union Station, splintered a flagpole on the Treasury Building, set fire to electric wiring in the Agriculture Building, and shocked a detective sergeant at police headquarters.

Airliners headed for Washington were grounded at Baltimore and Richmond when lightning put all lights and radio communications out of service at Washington Airport. No planes landed at the airport after 7 p. m.

Half of the Southwest area was without lights for several hours after the storm, during which .73

Scientist Wants Public to Count Perseid Meteors

Philadelphia, Aug. 10 (AP).—The public has been asked to count meteors tonight, tomorrow and Friday nights by Dr. C. P. Olivier, director of the American Meteor Society.

The astronomers would like to have the count of meteors by the hour, seen by any one observer, at any place. The counts should be mailed to Dr. Olivier, at Flower Astronomical Observatory, Upper Darby, Pa.

The meteors—in the north and northeast sky—for the next three nights, are the annual shower of Perseids, so named because they come from the direction of the constellation Perseus.

The reports will be used in calculation of the density of this meteor stream.

Two Walrus Pups, Narwhals Caught For Zoo, Institute

Reports yesterday from Elsmere Land in the Arctic indicate the Washington Zoo will soon be enriched with the rare addition of two walrus pups.

Capt. "Bob" Bartlett, aboard the schooner Morrissey, declared he had obtained the prize mammals, and in addition, a narwhal collection for the Smithsonian Institution.

"The Zoo has never had a walrus," Ernest P. Walker, assistant director, said last night. "I very much doubt that any American zoo now has them in captivity."

Declaring that many hazards of transportation and diet must still be surmounted before Bartlett's walrus pups are frolicking in Rock Creek Park, Walker cautiously added, "I never count my chickens until they're in the cage."

U.S.-Ecuador Treaty Spurs Latin Trade

Pierson, Export Chief, to Make Tour; Roper Sees Business Upturn.

By William V. Nessly.

Two significant moves to increase United States trade with South America came yesterday simultaneously with continued gains in domestic business.

The State Department announced the signing of a reciprocal trade agreement with Ecuador, the eighteenth such agreement in Secretary of State Hull's program to boost the country's foreign trade.

At the same time Warren Lee Pierson, president of the Export-Import Bank, announced he is departing today for an extensive tour of Latin-American countries to "explore the possibilities for financing bigger sales of American goods in the South American market."

Secretary of Commerce Roper, just back from Europe, declared economic statistics here showed that "the improved business morale which was in evidence a month ago has been translated into definite business progress" with definite "indications pointing to further momentum through the fall."

Trade Mission Planned.

Roper also revealed he is working on plans to send a large American trade mission of leading businessmen and industrialists to South America to promote goodwill and business. The group would be selected by the Business Advisory Council.

The automotive industry began rehiring workers, forecasting operations that are expected to swell in volume next month until most plants are operating at top speed. At Detroit, the county relief administrator said 1,260 families had been taken off the relief rolls there in the past 24 hours.

Progress in the PWA program to get men back to work was reported by Secretary Ickes, who said "ground has been broken and walls are rising on a number of jobs. Men are at work and orders for materials are being placed in mill and factory."

The new trade treaty was signed at Quito, Ecuador, last Saturday by Boaz Long, United States Minister, and Senor Dr. Don Luis Bossano, Ecuadorian minister of foreign affairs. In general, it is similar to

Japanese Feel Hankow Lines For Weak Spot

Blows in Three Directions Regarded as Prelude to Major Drive.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, (Thursday) Aug. 11.—Japanese troops were reported today to have struck at Chinese Yangtze River lines in swift attacks designed to find a weak spot for Japan's advance against Hankow.

These exploratory forays were regarded as a prelude to the first decisive battles on the outer fringes of Chinese defenses guarding approaches to the provisional capital.

One Japanese column attempted to pierce Chinese lines west of Kiukiang. Japanese advance base 135 miles downstream from Hankow. This detachment drove against Juichang, approximately 19 miles west of Kiukiang.

Stalled in North.

Another Japanese force landed on the southern shore of Lake Chiu, north of Juichang, but was said to have been repulsed.

A third force pushed south along the 90-mile railway to Nanchang, Chinese airbase. This column reached Stahochen and prepared to attack Huanglaomen, 10 miles south of Kiukiang. Huanglaomen is 12 miles north of Mahuiling, where it was believed one of the first decisive battles would be fought.

3 Floors in Factory Cave In; 50 Escape Death, One Injured

Three floors at the Columbia Specialty Box Co., 228 First street northwest, collapsed under thousands of pounds of paper yesterday and more than 50 employes narrowly escaped death.

Only one man was injured when the floors gave way, sending tons of plaster, wooden beams and merchandise crashing from the top of the four-floor building to the second floor.

Raymond Grieves, 38, 1613 D street northeast, suffered a fractured arm when he was pinned under the falling debris. An unidentified fellow-employe pulled him out of the wreckage.

When firemen arrived nearly a score of men and women employes were at the windows of the collapsed section screaming for assistance. The bottom section of the ladder to the fire escape had been taken down for repairs Tuesday, officials of the company stated.

Rescue workers erected ladders against the side of the factory and brought the people to safety. Several collapsed afterward from the shock.

Mrs. Thelma Simmons, of Alexandria, Va., an employe, was taken to Casualty Hospital with hysteria.

George M. Smith, superintendent of the plant, was on the third floor and was walking through a line of machines when he noticed the beams holding up the fourth floor caving in.

He shouted a warning and flattened himself against the wall as Compromise Will Leave Basis of Settlement to Negotiators.

Reds Push Salient Into Manchukuo

First Admitted Invasion Precedes Agreement at Moscow.

By the United Press.

Moscow (Thursday), Aug. 11.—Russia and Japan have declared an armistice on the Manchukuoan-Siberian border, it was announced today, providing for a cessation of hostilities effective at noon (approximately 9 p. m. Wednesday E. S. T.).

A joint commission will negotiate a re-demarcation of the disputed frontier south of Vladivostok where the Soviet Ussuri maritime province adjoins Japan's Korean and Manchukuo dependencies.

The official announcement said:

The Soviet Union and Japan, as the outcome of a long conference between Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff and Ambassador Mamoru Shigemitsu, which lasted —with one short interruption— from 7 p. m. to midnight (Wednesday), agreed to end hostilities on the Soviet-Manchukuoan frontier at noon, August 11, and to select a commission to be composed of two representatives appointed by each side to negotiate a re-demarcation of the frontier.

At the time appointed for the cessation of hostilities the troops of Japan and the Soviet Union will remain on the lines which they occupy at midnight, local time.

Only two points of argument disturbed the negotiations, namely a proposal by Litvinoff for appointment of an impartial, disinterested arbitrator on the re-demarcation commission, to which Shigemitsu objected and upon which Litvinoff did not insist.

The second disagreement concerned the basis of the work of the commission and arose from a proposal by Shigemitsu to add to the basic points which, up to the present, never had been presented to the Soviet government, which consequently had not been able to consider them.

For this reason a joint proposition was adopted, namely to leave the basis of the work to the decisions of the accredited representatives.

There were three conditions to the agreement:

Both sides agree to cease hostilities at noon Thursday local Far-Eastern time.

Tydings Opens Senate Drive in Lewis' District

Attacks Representative's Support for Black in Cumberland Talk.

By the Associated Press.

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 10.—Senator Millard E. Tydings made his first campaign address tonight in the home territory of his New Deal opponent for the Senate nomination, Representative David J. Lewis, by recounting Lewis' record in the confirmation of Hugo L. Black to the Supreme Court.

In a broadcast address, Senator Tydings said he voted against Senator Black's appointment to the high court because Black had "for years belonged to an organization which fomented religious, racial and national prejudice and hatred."

He said after Senator Black's radio speech, in which he admitted having been at one time a member of the Ku Klux Klan, but was not one now, Lewis issued a statement which Tydings quoted as saying, "I was perfectly satisfied with his speech—in fact, I was satisfied without it."

"Very Much Angered."

"Thus Mr. Lewis discloses that he sees no harm in putting a member of such an organization on the Supreme Court bench," Tydings said. "I understand he was very much angered because I would not go along and vote for Senator Black's confirmation. That is one of the reasons he is running against me.

"Do you want me to vote for each and every measure proposed, regardless of its merits, like a cowardly image who reacts at the other end of a string that may be pulled, or do you want your Senator to vote upon the merits of measures and as they are in the interest of, or opposed to the interest of the people of this State and Nation.

"Things have come to a pretty pass in this country, when men elected by the people become so totally lacking in consideration of bills affecting the people's welfare that they vote for everything, regardless of the merits of the things proposed, and even though it is not in the interest of all of the people of the Nation, as was clearly the case in the confirmation of Mr. Black.

"Want to Encourage Them."

"Now everyone employed and unemployed, must in the face of these facts be hoping for business recovery. That is the one way out of the depression; therefore, I am for business and by business I mean all business—agriculture, mining and quarrying, manufacturing, communication, transportation, such as the railroads, and other businesses.

"I want to help them get going again. I want to encourage them, not discourage them. I do not want to see them taxed any more than is necessary to provide for the needs of the people and the Government.

"I want to do everything in my power to aid business because when business is prosperous, workingmen are employed with steady jobs and at high wages. Then the farmer is better off because there is a wider demand for farm products, and consequently better prices for farm products.

Must Revive Business.

"To me, therefore, the man who helps to revive and restore business of all kinds is helping most the working man and the farmer. That is your problem and my problem—to get business going again. That is the problem of our National Government. It is the biggest problem before America.

"I cannot see how I can help the working man or the farmer, except by helping in every way I can to revive, encourage and stimulate all business of the country—big and little—for in all these businesses of the country the 48,000,000 people who are either working or who want work must look for a job."

Girdler Replies Today to C.I.O. Strike Charges

Republic Steel Chairman to Testify Before Civil Liberties Inquiry.

By the United Press.

The Republic Steel Corporation was ready last night to defend before two Federal agencies its labor policies during the "Little Steel" strike in 1937.

Tom W. Girdler, chairman of the board, will respond before the Senate Civil Liberities Committee today to charges by Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, that there was a conspiracy between the corporation, citizens committees and local officials to "break" the strike.

At the same time, Republic attorneys will assert before the National Labor Relations Board that its proposed findings, holding the corporation in violation of the Wagner act, abridge the corporation's constitutional rights.

Climax of Hearings.

Girdler's appearance before the Civil Liberties Committee will climax a series of hearings in which it was asserted by various witnesses that Republic and other corporations opposed efforts of the Committee for Industrial Organization to unionized the steel industry. Use of armed force and subversive influences through citizen and vigilante groups was charged.

The Labor Board, in preliminary findings, held Republic caused the "Little Steel" strike by "unfair labor practices." It directed the firm to reinstate 5,000 C. I. O. strikers with back pay beginning five days after their application for reinstatement and to disestablish alleged company unions at five Ohio plants.

Republic denies its labor policies precipitated the strike.

Defending the right of Girdler and other Republic officials to express opinions concerning the C. I. O., the corporation's attorneys said:

"We contend that the national labor relations act, as construed by the board in this connection, is unconstitutional as abridging freedom of speech by the respondent."

Meanwhile Ohio National Guard officers told the Civil Liberties Committee Guardsmen in civilian clothes were used in an espionage system to report on union activities during the 1937 strike.

Union Accuses "Police."

By the Associated Press.

C. I. O. men told the Civil Liberties Committee yesterday that two of their colleagues were killed and at least four more wounded when special police attacked their Massillon (Ohio) headquarters.

Matthias B. Cronk, professional strike guard, testified the officers knew beforehand a clash was to occur.

The shooting took place July 11, 1937, during the "Little Steel" strike. A block from the union hall stood a Republic Steel office building which housed, according to the testimony, mill guards, Pennsylvania Railroad police and "ammunition." The special police, it developed, were nonstriking employes of Republic, paid for their policing by both the corporation and the city.

They, while deputized by Chief Stanley W. Switter of the Massillon police, were actually under the orders of Maj. Harry C. Curley, described as a retired Army officer. Two of the special police testified Harry Adler, Lieutenant of Republic's company police, told them in advance to expect trouble on the night of July 11.

Chairman La Follette produced a coroner's report covering the death of Fulgencio Calzada and Nick Vatchias, each of whom was shot. In Calzada's case the coroner dismissed the death as excusable homicide.

T. F. Patton, general counsel of Republic Steel, announced last night he had given the La Follette Committee an affidavit attesting the authenticity of photographs of weapons "taken from strike sympathizers by Youngstown, Ohio, police during the steel strike."

Barkley Vote Confirms Poll

By Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Aug. 10.—The victory of Senator Alben W. Barkley in the Kentucky primary last Saturday confirms a pre-election survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion which, four days before the election, showed Barkley leading by 59 per cent.

GALLUP.

Unofficial election returns indicate that Barkley won by approximately 57 per cent of the total vote, which makes the institute's error two percentage points. The survey closed the Tuesday night before election. At that time it found a trend toward Senator Barkley's opponent, Gov. A. B. Chandler, which had been continuing since March.

The Kentucky survey was the fifty-fifth time out of 61 tries that the institute has correctly foreshadowed the winner of a State or local election. The institute's reports are published exclusively in The Washington Post.

election this year of 'yes men' subservient to his will."

He asserted it was "the most stunning blow the New Deal so far has received" and added:

"Instead of spending his time in the South seeking the defeat of Senators of independence and courage, the President had better hurry to the assistance of his 'yes men' in other parts of the country."

"President Just as Strong."

For the most part, Administration supporters were silent. Senator Logan (Democrat), Kentucky, said, however, that it should be recalled that it was "the first time any member of Congress has been defeated this year simply on a New Deal issue."

The Kentucky Senator asserted that Pope's defeat did not indicate that the President has lost any popularity.

"The President is just as strong as he ever was," he declared.

Senator Holt (Democrat), West Virginia, a frequent Administration critic, said the results showed that Idaho voters wanted "a man who can say either yes or no."

"Postmaster General Farley went to Alaska for cool weather and found it in Idaho," he added.

At Salt Lake City, former President Herbert Hoover scanned the election returns and observed:

"These primary returns indicate to me that more than 50 per cent of the Democrats are against the notion of rubber stamps in Congress."

Gloom was evidenced particularly at the Agriculture Department. The Idaho Senator was a close friend of Secretary Wallace, helped draft the new farm act, and was one of its sponsors.

In Idaho, Pope's friends said many Republicans entered the Democratic primary to vote against him.

Besides the Senate races, Washington politicians followed closely the Democratic gubernatorial contest in Ohio, where Gov. Martin L. Davey, seeking renomination, was defeated by Charles Sawyer.

There was speculation about how great a part the C. I. O. played in the defeat of Davey. The labor organization lined up behind Sawyer, because of Davey's use of troops in the "little steel" strike of last summer.

Sawyer's vote was 449,324 to Davey's 419,095 with only one precinct out.

Administration leaders found reason for satisfaction in the size of the Democratic vote in Ohio, compared to the Republican. Indications were that the Democratic primary vote was larger for the first time in history.

Bulkley had 523,715 votes to 199,716 for White.

Taft Opposes Bulkley.

The Republican leadership confidently has listed Ohio among the States in which it expects to make congressional gains this fall.

Robert A. Taft, Cincinnati lawyer and son of President William Howard Taft, was nominated by the Republicans to oppose Bulkley, winning over Arthur H. Day, Ohio Supreme Court justice, with 320,760 votes to 248,201.

Senator Caraway, in Arkansas, in 1,958 of 2,002 precincts, had 138,341 votes to 130,482 for Representative John L. McClellan, and 2,918 for J. Rosser Venable.

Nebraska Democrats renominated Gov. R. L. Cochran for an unprecedented third term in the day's fourth primary. Charles J. Warner, farmer and speaker of the Legislature, won the Republican nomination.

Other results in Tuesday's voting, in brief, were:

IDAHO.

While Representative Clark was winning the Senate nomination, his uncle, Gov. Barzilla W. Clark, slowly fell behind in the race for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

Votes from 647 precincts gave Gov. C. Ben Ross 25,392; Clark, 24,117; Lieut. Gov. C. C. Gossett, 18,306, and W. P. Whitaker, of Pocatello, 10,689.

Two First District congressional candidates were unopposed. They were Congressman Compton I. White, Democrat, and Dr. Rex T. Henson, Republican.

Of nine Democrats seeking Second District Democratic nomination, former Attorney General Bert H. Miller was leading in returns from 346 precincts.

Henry Dworshak, Burley publisher, defeated Z. Reed Millar, Boise lawyer, for the Republican Second District nomination.

C. A. Bottolfsen, Arco and Blackfoot newspaper publisher, defeated R. H. Young, Parma, in the Republican gubernatorial race.

ARKANSAS.

Gov. Carl E. Bailey, Roosevelt follower, swelled his lead for renomination, late returns showing him 11,000 votes ahead of R. A. Cook, Little Rock businessman, in 1,941 precincts out of 2,002.

On unofficial returns, two of the State's veteran Congressmen were in seesaw battles with young members of the State Senate.

E. C. Gathings, of West Memphis, held a 1,200-vote lead over Representative W. J. Driver, dean of the Arkansas delegation. The tabulation from 226 out of 274 precincts gave Gathings 19,453, to 18,184 for Driver.

In the Third District, State Senator Clyde Ellis, of Bentonville, had a 10-vote lead over Representative Claude A. Feller, of Eureke Springs.

Returns from 253 of 278 precincts gave Ellis 12,700 and Fuller 12,770.

Representative David D. Terry, of the Fifth District, and Representative Ben Cravens, of the Fourth District, held commanding leads.

In the Second District, where the post was left vacant by election of Representative John E. Miller to the Senate, County Judge Wilbur Miles, of Kensett, held a comfortable lead over former Prosecuting Attorney Roy Richardson, of Walnut Ridge.

State Senator W. F. Norrell, of Monticello, was far ahead of two opponents in the Sixth District, where McClellan left an open field to make his Senate bid.

NEBRASKA.

Surging into third-term nominations with Gov. R. L. Cochran were all five of the State's Congressmen—Henry C. Luckey, Lincoln; Charles F. McLaughlin, Omaha; Charles G. Binderup, Minden, and Harry B. Coffee, Chadron, all Democrats, and Karl Stefan, Norfolk, Republican.

Senate Group To 'Study' Fund Plea by Guffey

Letter Asking Campaign Contributions Sent WPA Workers.

Senator Sheppard, of Texas, chairman of the Senate Committee to Investigate Campaign Expenditures, said yesterday that his committee would "study" the letter sent out from Harrisburg, Pa., over the signature of Senator Joseph F. Guffey, asking campaign contributions from Democrats. The letter was addressed to a list which included all workers in Pennsylvania.

At first Chairman Sheppard expressed the opinion that Senator Guffey was within his rights in so doing—that the money paid to workers was theirs to do with as they saw fit and that political candidates were within their rights in soliciting funds from Government workers. The resolutions governing his committee, he said, did not cover such cases, unless coercion were involved.

Promises Investigation.

Later, when shown the civil service statute on the subject of Senators, Congressmen, or candidates soliciting funds from other Government officers, or employes, Senator Sheppard expressed himself as being not so sure. It would have to be looked into, he said, by the committee and by the counsel for the committee, John Talbert Haslett.

The Federal statute involved is section 208 of the criminal code, title 18.

"It is unlawful," the statute reads, "for any Senator or Representative in or delegate or resident commissioner to Congress, or any candidate for, or individual elected as Senator, Representative, delegate or resident commissioner, or any officer or employe of the United States, or any person receiving any salary or compensation for services from money derived from the Treasury of the United States, to directly or indirectly solicit, receive, or be in any manner concerned in soliciting or receiving, any assessment, subscription or contribution for any political purpose whatever, from any other such officer, employe or person."

"Cruel Shakedown."

Representative J. William Ditter (Republican), of Pennsylvania, declared:

"This cruel shakedown directed against those on work relief presents a shocking exhibition of political racketeering. It well illustrates the spirit of desperation which has seized the Democratic high command in Pennsylvania as it faces the voters."

Corn Forecast Makes Quotas Unnecessary

Yield Is Below 'Excessive' Level, Agriculture Department Says.

By the Associated Press.

The Agriculture Department announced yesterday an official forecast of a 2,566,221,000-bushel corn crop made unnecessary a farmer referendum on the application of marketing quotas.

The department said indicated supplies did not reach the "excessive" supply level which would make a poll mandatory under the new crop control law, put by the department at 2,913,000,000 bushels.

It said this year's indicated supply, taking into account estimated surplus of 320,000,000 bushels from last year, was 2,886,000,000 bushels, or 27,000,000 bushels below the supply requiring a referendum.

Growers Free to Sell.

As a result, corn growers will be free to sell or feed all the grain they produce this year. Under quotas, if two-thirds of the growers voting had approved, they would have been required to store their share of the surplus or pay a penalty tax of 15 cents a bushel.

The Department estimated the combined winter and spring wheat crops at 955,989,000 bushels.

A month ago the Department forecast 2,482,102,000 bushels of corn and 967,412,000 bushels of wheat for this year.

Corn production totaled 2,644,995,000 bushels last year and averaged 2,306,157,000 during the ten years, 1927-36.

Combined wheat production was 873,993,000 bushels last year, and 752,891,000 average during the ten years.

Winter wheat production is 688,458,000 bushels this year, according to the department's preliminary estimate. A month ago 715,425,000 bushels were indicated. Production was 685,102,000 bushels last year. The ten-year average was 546,396,000.

Spring wheat production is indicated as 267,531,000 bushels, compared with 251,978,000 a month ago, 188,891,000 last year, and 206,494,000, the ten-year average.

The durum wheat crop, included in spring wheat, is indicated as 41,148,000 bushels, compared with 33,376,000 a month ago, 27,791,000 last year and 40,085,000, the ten-year average.

Indicated production of oats is 1,041,009,000 bushels, compared with 1,093,829,000 a month ago, 1,146,285,000 last year and 1,042,461,000, the ten-year agerage.

Auto Kills D.C. Woman, 82; 2 Cyclists Hurt

Mrs. Marranzano, 82, Hit Crossing Florida Ave. Near Her Home.

An 82-year-old woman, Mrs. Tennie Marranzano, was killed yesterday when she was struck by an automobile while crossing the street in front of her home at 1108 Florida avenue northwest. The woman was pronounced dead at Casualty Hospital.

Police said the automobile was driven by Alfred C. Hayden, of 1216 Maryland avenue northeast. Mrs. Marranzano was the grandmother of Tina Marranzano, a reporter for the Washington Times.

Two soldiers from Fort Myer were injured when the motorcycle they were riding was hit by an automobile whose driver escaped after his car had run into another auto and he fled on foot following a chase by civilian bystanders.

The injured soldiers are Roger W. Davis, 20, and Blake Bothell, 20. They were taken to Casualty Hospital after the accident, which occurred at Fourth and H streets northeast.

Leaped Fence and Escaped.

According to the police, the driver of the car which struck them drove immediately from the scene and when only a block away crashed his machine into a parked auto. Abandoning his car, he ran into an alley and was cornered by citizens. He leaped a fence and escaped.

John Quarles, colored, 7, of 515 Fifth street southeast, received multiple lacerations to the scalp when he was struck at G and Eighth streets southeast by a car operated by Robert B. Smith, 39, of Alexandria, Va.

Treated at Casualty Hospital, the child later returned home. The case will be presented to the corporation counsel's office next Wednesday.

Edward Roche, 11, of 210 Sixteenth street southeast, fell from his bicycle at Fifth street and Indiana avenue northwest, suffering minor bruises and lacerations. He was treated at Gallinger Hospital.

Bus and Car Collide.

A Capital Transit Co. bus operated by James A. Thompson, 41, 1158 Fourth street northeast, collided with a car yesterday at Virginia avenue southeast and South Capitol street, injuring Thompson and five passengers in the automobile.

Thompson received lacerations about the face and head and was treated at Emergency Hospital. Injured occupants of the car, all colored, were treated at Providence Hospital. All were released later.

Others injured were Elijah Williams, 40, 1007 Lincoln street southeast; Leon Dockett, 32, 3200 Twelfth place southeast; Clyde Settler, 26, 2437 Nichols avenue southeast; Edward A. Berry, 27, 2808 Wade road southeast, and Randolph Tanner, 27, of Anacostia.

40 D. C. Guards Put Out Fire On Pa. Farm

Handle Hose, Form Bucket Line as Heat Melts Steel Machinery.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Indiantown Gap, Pa., Aug. 10.—Forty District National Guardsmen today manned pumps and formed bucket brigades to save the $5,000 home and property of a Pennsylvania farmer, Abe Fox.

Damage of $2,000 was estimated as the combination work and butcher shop of Fox was completely destroyed along with valuable machinery and farm implements.

Flames were so hot that steel machinery melted like lead. Guardsmen were forced to cover their faces with handkerchiefs and bend down the flaps of their field caps for protection. A number were treated later for minor cuts and first-degree burns of the face.

The troops, members of Company B, 104th Quartermaster Regiment, were on a practice motor convoy trip from Camp Ritchie, Md., to Uniontown Gap.

Lieut. Edward D. Mulvanity directed the actual fire fighting, while Lieut. William D. Putnam supervised the bucket line. Staff Sergt. John H. Schercinger, Regular Army instructor, directed the salvage of property.

Sergt. Hugh A. Allen, Arlington County rescue squad member, treated for minor injuries Lieut. Boudinot, Sergt. Jack Crandall, Corp. Eugene Petrenko and Privates Campbell Ramsey, Joseph Cleaveland, Raymond Buddington, George Gordon, Robert Brown, Henry Waggoner, Herman Bailey and James Sadler.

The men encamped at Indiantown Gap for the night and will return to Camp Ritchie early tomorrow.

Herbert D. Tribby Wins Divorce on Desertion Ground

Herbert D. Tribby, wealthy real estate operator, was granted an absolute divorce yesterday by Justice Oscar R. Luhring in District Court from Mrs. Mae V. Tribby, on grounds of desertion. They were married in 1931.

Tribby asked annulment on the grounds his wife was not legally divorced in Alexandria, Va., from her first husband, William R. Mahon. Justice Luhring held, however, that the Alexandria divorce was valid. He dismissed the annulment suit and Mrs. Tribby's crossbill for limited divorce. Tribby accused his wife of threatening to attack hm with a carving knife.

Mrs. Tribby was granted $200 a month alimony. Papers in the action estimated Tribby's assets at $750,000 to $1,000,000.

Living Cost Drops .2% In July, Report Shows

New York, Aug. 10 (AP).—The cost of living of wage earners in the United States declined .2 per cent in July, according to a report made public today by the National Industrial Conference Board, an organization chiefly supported by large industries.

Living costs in July were 20.6 per cent higher than the 1933 depression low, 13.8 per cent lower than in July, 1929, and 2.7 per cent lower than in July a year ago.

The current change showed moderate decreases in all groups of expenditures except fuel and light, which increased slightly.

Narrows, Va., Aug. 10 (AP).—Henry S. Skeens, 91-year-old Confederate War veteran who brought back the first news of Lee's surrender to Giles County, died today.

Skeens, who served as dispatch bearer and mail runner under Gen. McCaustis in the Civil War, suffered a paralytic stroke yesterday after his return from a visit with a sister.

He attended the recent reunion of Civil War veterans at Gettysburg.

Costa Rica to Seize Utility's Property

San Jose, Costa Rica, Aug. 10 (AP). Congress passed by a vote of 40 to 1 today a measure authorizing the government to expropriate properties of the Electric Bond & Share Co. and pay indemnity. A commission said this was the only way to end difficulties with the corporation.

N. Y. Is Spending $5,000,000 in War Against Mosquito

New York, Aug. 10 (AP).—In order that New Yorkers, who live in a town of virtually screenless windows, may sleep in peace and safety, the WPA here is spending $5,040,000 this year on mosquito control.

That's more than 75 cents per person for the city's 7,000,000 residents. Of the fund, $3,161,986.15 already has been spent, WPA reported today.

Below-the-Bubble Camera Shots Stir Sally Rand's Anger

Los Angeles, Aug. 10 (AP).—It isn't that Sally Rand minds being photographed. It's the angle that matters, the fan and bubble dancer contended today. She was sued for $2,622.70 by a Los Angeles couple who claims she "bit, scratched and tore" at them. The pair, C. R. Stanford and Hazel Drain, snapped pictures of her from the front row.

Sally's reply declared the photographs "were taken from the floor of the theater at an angle" and "were not intended to be photographs depicting the defendant's artistic dance interpretation."

D. C. Woman Dies Of Spotted Fever On Maryland Visit

Damascus, Md., Aug. 10 (AP).—Rocky Mountain spotted fever caused the death today of Mrs. Myrtle E. Tregoning, 24, of Washington, at the home of her parents near here.

It was the second death from the strange disease reported here this summer.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Luhn said she was bitten last Tuesday by a tick. Mrs. Tregonning had been employed in Washington.

Couple Identifies Slain Bandit as Assaulter of Girl

Lebanon, Pa., Aug. 10 (U.P.).—Earl Young, 27-year-old bandit killed in a gun battle with Hot Springs, Ark., police, was buried here today after Marjorie Smith, 19, and Jason Carle, 20, viewed the body and identified it as the man who tied Carle to a tree, assaulted the girl and fled in Carle's automobile last June.

629 July Deaths in D.C. 5% Below '37 Figure

Deaths in Washington in July were 5 per cent lower than in the same month last year, the District of Columbia Life Underwriters announced yesterday. Total deaths from all causes, the underwriters said, were 629 last month, as compared with 661 in July, 1937.

August deaths last year totaled 685 in the District, though national records show July to be the deadliest month of the year. If the District maintains a comparable death rate for August this year, deaths should add up to about 663, the underwriters estimated.

Berry Marble 'Retrial' Looms In TVA Inquiry

Biddle Defeated in Effort to Limit Scope of Quiz on Lease Case.

By the Associated Press.

Knoxvile, Tenn., Aug. 10.—A virtual retrial of the celebrated Berry marble case appeared likely tonight before a Congressional committee investigating the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Indications were the committee was prepared to dig deeply into the background of the case and charges by TVA officials of bad faith, involving Senator Berry (Democrat), Tennessee, and his associates, who purchased mineral and marble leases in the Norris Dam reservoir.

A lively argument developed when Committee Counsel Francis Biddle objected to broadening the scope of the hearing by calling a witness not originally scheduled to be heard.

Representative Wolverton (Republican), New Jersey, insisted all prospective witnesses be called and succeeded in having Biddle overruled.

Last year a Federal commission ruled the Berry holdings "commercially worthless." The case is pending on appeal to a three-judge Federal court.

Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, deposed TVA chairman, charges TVA counsel "softpedaled the bad faith accusations" in the trial of the Berry claims.

Biddle contended Dr. Morgan's charges constituted the sole reason for investigation of the Berry case.

This line of testimony led back to the fact that TVA directors David E. Lilienthal and Harcourt A. Morgan agreed to conciliate the Berry claims after suspicions of "bad faith" had been voiced by several TVA officials.

3 Factory Floors Crash; 50 Escape Death, One Hurt

Collapse

the fourth floor descended. He said when the top floor struck the third floor, the force sent the third floor crashing down to a machine room below.

All of the rooms over which the ceilings fell were occupied with workers. Many dived under machinery or pressed themselves against the walls. No one was caught under the floors.

Mary Galipo, 25, of 8 Quincy street northeast, who was working on the third floor, said she saw the ceiling crack and begin to fall. She was near the outside wall, she said, and was unable to get out of the room in which she was working. She pressed herself tightly against the wall and the floor above crashed at her feet.

She fought her way clear of the debris and was helped out of the building by firemen. Afterward she aided other employes recover their clothes and helped quiet those who were badly shaken.

Edward J. Fay, of Baltimore, manager of the factory, said he was in the office when the floors caved in.

"It happened so fast I didn't know what to do. There were more than 50 person working. Only one was hurt. Thank God."

Four and 6 inch wooden beams found broken in the wreckage were either dry rotted or had been eaten away by termites, District building inspectors said.

Don't Keep on Having Constipation!
If constipation's got you down—so you feel heavy, tired and dopey—it's time you did something about it. And something more than taking a physic! You should get at the cause of the trouble.
If you eat only the things most people do, the chances are that a very simple fact causes your constipation—you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean heavy food. It means a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a bowel movement.
If this is your trouble, eat crisp crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast every day and drink plenty of water. All-Bran is not only rich in "bulk"—it also contains the natural intestinal tonic, vitamin B1.

Mrs. Taliaferro Wills Husband Most of Estate

Leaves Him All of Realty Holdings, Part of Her Securities.

Mrs Elizabeth Fulton Taliaferro, who died July 24, named her husband, Sidney F Taliaferro, former District Commissioner and now an officer of the Riggs National Bank, chief beneficiary of her estate, it was shown in District Court yesterday when a petition for probate of her will was filed.

A personal estate of $6,360 was left as well as real estate. Chief among the real estate were premises at 3102 P street northwest, and 1575 Spring place northwest, in which she held an equitable ownership in a one-half undivided interest. All of her real estate goes to Taliaferro.

The will suggested that if Mrs. Taliaferro left insurance in favor of her sister, Miss Ella D. Fulton, of London, England, then one-half of the stock she owned in the Riggs Bank and American Security & Trust Co. should go to her husband, two-sixths of such stock to another sister, Mrs. Agnes McWhinney, of Scotland, and one-sixth to a brother, William Fulton, of France. If there was no insurance payable to Miss Fulton, then she asked that three-sixths of the stock go to Miss Fulton, two-sixths to Mrs. McWhinney and one-sixth to Mr. Fulton.

Scientist Makes 'Date' in Cuba WithHurricane

Asserts He's 'Got to Find' Tropical Storm 'or I'll Lose My Job.'

By the Associated Press.

Cambridge, Mass., Aug. 10.—A young Massachusetts Institute of Technology scientist has a date in Cuba—to meet a hurricane.

Curly haired Delmar P. Kelly, 30, of Windsor, Conn., who never has faced a storm any worse than a New England blizzard, has had similar dates for the past two summers, but he always "got the corner." The hurricanes never showed up.

He had been commissioned by Tech to make the first studies of tropical twisters with an instrument known to science as a radio-meteorograph, which enables recording of the properties of storms by radio. Hitherto, airplanes and the familiar "weather balloons" have been the only weapons, and they are futile in a big blow.

"Got to Find One."

"The Cubans like to see me come," grinned Keily today. "They say I'm insurance against hurricanes. But this year, so help me, I've got to find a hurricane—or I'll lose my job!"

If he does find one this summer he insists science will have its best shot at determining the structure of these destructive storms since the 1880s.

Keily says that not since Jesuit Father Vines in the late 80s recorded his observations of the structure of the twisters as seen from the ground have scientists learned anything more of the dread gales which at times spin counter-clockwise at 200 miles per hour and move foorward slowly over a wide area.

"My job will be to go on from where Father Vines left off—and study the twisters right at their teeth, high up around the stratosphere."

Will Use Tiny Balloons.

While Cubans are heading for cover, he'll wait until the storm's center is 300 miles away before sending aloft his radio-meteorographs, attached to balloons and controlled by the tiniest radio transmitters ever put to practical use.

In structure, they resemble a halloween magic lantern, cellophane wrapped, each containing a transmitter, and tiny instruments for recording temperature, pressure and humidity as the storm howls. Impressions on the instruments are caught by the radio transmitters and, in turn, translated into radio signals received and recorded on graphs by listeners on the ground.

Keily and his helpers will work in the strongest building they can find, and they will be equipped with food and water for a two or three day siege.

He said he probably would leave for Cuba in a few days.

Bird Faces Trial In Baltimore; Bail Is Set at $175,000

Baltimore, Aug. 9 (AP).—Charles Bird, youthful desperado who bragged his bank holdups and other crimes "netted $100,000," will be tried here for seven highway robberies in which he obtained less than $1,200, State's Attorney J. Bernard Wells said today.

Prosecutor Wells refused to waive jurisdiction of the former "Public Enemy No. 2" and Mrs. Bird to the Department of Justice for return to Cleveland. Meanwhile, his bail was set at $175,000 and for his wife, $25,000.

A special grand jury was summoned to meet tomorrow, Wells said. If convicted, Bird faces a maximum sentence of 20 years in the State Penitentiary on each robbery charge. If convicted on the Federal charges, he faces the possibility of being sent to the dread Alcatraz Penitentiary where his brother Frank, and his pal, James Widmer, are now incarcerated.

Va. Sheriff Fined As Drunk Driver; Plans to Appeal

King William Court House, Va., Aug. 10 (AP).—Trial Justice Francis W. Smith, of King William County, convicted Sheriff T. Wilson Seay, of Henrico County, on charges of careless and reckless driving while under the influence of intoxicants and fined him $150.

Counsel for Seay promptly appealed the decision to King William Circuit Court which meets next in October.

The hearing ended with surprising suddenness when the defense attorneys announced they would offer no evidence. The Commonwealth called about a half dozen witnesses during the 45-minute hearing.

State Police Sergt. H. D. Flippen testified that Seay's white Henrico police car was being driven 50 to 75 miles an hour, and lurched from side to side of the road during a 5-mile pursuit before Seay stopped for the siren-blowing State officer.

Mysterious Shot Fatal to Former W.Va.Postmaster

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Aug. 10.—William H Combs, 55, former postmaster at McCauley, Hardy County, was fatally injured early Sunday just after he left his store at Wardensville, Hardy County.

A coroner's jury, sitting in Wardensville, yesterday gave a verdict of "killed by unlawful means by parties unknown."

Combs had gone to his store, accompanied by Ray Gochenour, after attending a festival Saturday night. He was accompanying a customer to the latter's automobile when he suddenly fell, shot by the unidentified assailant, the shot coming from the direction of Wardensville.

The widow and five children survive.

Father Defends Son, 29, Who Plotted to Kill Him

Paris, Mo., Aug. 10 (AP). — Nat Young, a farmer, hired an attorney today to defend his 29-year-old son, Clifford, against burglary charges after Prosecutor Tom Proctor asserted the son confessed a plot to kill his father.

"It's the bitterest thing in my life," the elder Young said, "but I don't want him to go to the penitentiary."

Read the Law, Ex-TVA Chief Answers Farley

Morgan Defends Refusal to Ask Congressmen Whom to Appoint.

By the Associated Press.

Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, ousted TVA chairman, advised Postmaster General Farley yesterday to read Section 6 of the act creating the Tennessee Valley Authority which bans politics in the appointment of TVA personnel.

His comment was in reply to a magazine article in which Farley said Dr. Morgan once rejected with some heat a suggestion he consult members of Congress when making appointments to the TVA staff.

"My only comment," said Dr. Morgan, "is that he read Section 6 to the act creating the Tennessee Valley Authority."

This portion of the act says:

"In the appointment of officials and the selection of employes for the said corporation, and in the promotion of any such employes and officials, no political test or qualification shall be permitted or given consideration, but all such appointments and promotions shall be given and made on the basis of merit and efficiency."

Restaurant Woman Listed as a Suicide

A certificate of suicide was issued yesterday by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald on the death of Mrs. Rose Iannucci, 42, of 308 Sixth street northwest.

The woman was found unconscious on the floor of the bathroom early yesterday and was rushed to Providence Hospital by her daughter, Miss Marguerite Iannucci. She died several hours after arriving at the hospital.

Detective Sergt. Jeremiah Flaherty said a half filled bottle of poison was found in the room and that Mrs. Iannucci had been in ill health. She was proprietor of a lunch room at the above address.

Gordy Cautions Maryland Voters On Second Choice

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 10 (AP).—State Comptroller William S. Gordy, jr., tonight cautioned voters in the primary not to disregard their right under the Maryland election laws to vote for a second choice.

In a campaign speech for the Democratic nomination of Governor, Gordy said "professional propaganda" is being carried on by both factions of the Baltimore City organizations throughout the State.

"They would have you believe that the fight is between their candidates (Mayor Howard W. Jackson and Attorney General Herbert S. O'Conor). Such is not the case," he said, "and they know that it is matter of misrepresentation, and they are trying to abuse your mind by saying that a vote for any other is a vote wasted."

The Power that Creates New Business!

A new and highly desirable service has been inaugurated by Barron G. Collier, Inc., which will be of exceptional interest to many small advertisers.

Now it is possible to buy car advertising displays in any one of the following nine car lines of the Capital Transit Company, rather than the system in its entirety:

Names of Lines.	Monthly Circulation.
Maryland Car Lines	648,640
New Jersey & Florida Ave. Lines	1,379,900
North Capitol St. Lines	646,460
Mt. Pleasant Lines	2,358,600
Georgia Ave. & 7th St. Lines	2,150,700
Eleventh Street Lines	602,050
Fourteenth Street Lines	2,169,375
Tenleytown and Cabin John	1,527,685
Rosslyn, Benning, Penna. Ave.	1,584,720

This new idea makes it possible for merchants, manufacturers and advertisers of all types of merchandise and services to concentrate their advertising in the car lines that serve the area or section in which their businesses operate, and from which they draw their larger patronage. They need no longer be limited to inadequate displays because of limited advertising appropriations. Car advertising appearing in these heavily-patronized car lines is at work morning, noon and night, week in and week out, with added attention value made possible through color and illustration, enabling the smaller firm or shop to attain the same prominence as larger advertisers.

The street car riders of Washington represent one of the most prosperous audiences in America. They rank high in earning capacity and per capita wealth. They are the men and women of Washington—they are the populace—and they ride in the cars daily to and from home and office and shop and theatre. Their average trip consumes twenty minutes every time they ride. These men and women can buy the things they want—if you will tell them what you sell. They represent volume on the way to buy.

The Washington market is one of the greatest, measured in terms of per capita buying power, in the world—and through these individual car lines we can very definitely help you reach that part of the market which your business serves, quickly, effectively and most economically.

Measured by the yardstick of returns on your advertising dollar, there is no substitute for car advertising. Its cost is the lowest known to advertisers and their advertising agencies

Our representative will be glad to give you rates and particulars at your request—and he'll be happy to co-operate with Advertisers and their Advertising Agencies in the preparation of ideas and vizualizations. Car advertising will help you win many new customers, no matter what merchandise or services you sell.

HalifaxConfers With Premier On War Scares

World Problems Interrupt Rest for Chamberlain, Foreign Secretary.

By Joseph Driscoll.

Special Cable to The Post.

London London, Aug. 10.—Prime Minister Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax conferred at 10 Downing street tonight about the growing seriousness of war problems affecting the British Empire on four fronts—Manchukuo, Czechoslovakia, Spain and Palestine.

With European chancelleries developing a fresh attack of war jitters, Lord Halifax interrupted his vacation in Yorkshire to come south and talk things over with Chamberlain, who arrived here yesterday from his salmon fishing in Scotland. The official excuse for the prime minister's unexpected return to London is that he is suffering from nasal catarrh; he is, but it is a chronic condition and hardly serious enough to warrant interfering with fishing. In Lord Halifax's case there is no illness to account for his trip to London, which is officially described as a routine visit.

Nervous Over Prague.

The presence of Lord Runciman in Prague as British mediator has not served to quiet nerves in London quarters, which feel that the row between Germany and Czechoslovakia is approaching a dangerous climax. Lord Runciman is under instructions to effect a peaceful compromise, if possible, but in any event to stall for time and delay an explosion.

The British foreign office had barely announced today that it was protesting to Gen. Franco against the deliberate bombing and sinking of the British tramp steamer Lake Lugano in Palamos on Sunday, when news reached London of an asault upon a British passenger ship in the Straits of Gibraltar, under the muzzles of the fort's guns.

The ship was the 10,876-ton Union Castle liner, Llandaff Castle, with 200 passengers abord en route from London to African ports. She was held up last night in the straits by one of Franco's armed trawlers, which fired a blank shot across the liner's bow, came alongside and detained her for 15 minutes. The liner was rescued by a Dutch cruiser, the Johan Maurits van Nassau, which was on patrol duty to guard Dutch shipping.

Troops for Palestine.

The colonial secretary, Malcolm MacDonald, returned from his flying trip to Palestine, to report on the civil war between the Arabs and the Jews. It is believed more troops will be sent to Palestine to restore order, after which the government will proceed with its plan for the partition of Palestine into a Jewish state, an Arab state and a British mandated corridor.

A Turkish naval mission, headed by Capt. Sait Halman, has arrived here to place orders for a new Turkish navy, to be built and financed by the British. The mission will negotiate with Whitehall departments regarding the allocation of the £6,000,000 to be spent by Turkey.

In supplying credits and cruisers to Turkey, the British do so with the idea of enlisting Turkey as an ally in case of a general war. Turkey's co-operation would be especially useful in protecting British interests in Palestine and throughout the eastern Mediterranean basin.

2 Nations Back Reich on Czech 'Red' Menace

Partition Plan Reported as Poland and Hungary Join Propaganda Drive.

Special Cable to The Post.

Berlin, Aug. 10.—Backed by official circles in Berlin, Budapest and Warsaw, anti-Communist interests of Germany, Hungary and Poland, respectively, began an intensive campaign here today to show that Czechoslovakia is being overrun by bolshevism due to the "military alliance" between Moscow and Prague.

Hans Krebs, Sudeten German member of the Reichstag, and potential Nazi district leader for the Sudeten territory, sounded the keynote for the campaign in a speech in which he said that Nazi Germany would regard Czechoslovakia as an enemy of Europe until she broke her special bonds with the Soviet.

He insisted Lord Runciman must take into consideration that without liquidation of the "alliance" with Moscow, the problem of Czechoslovakia was insoluble. Other speakers were Dr. Franz Rayniss, member of the Hungarian Parliament, and Von Schumer-Szermentowski, Polish writer.

Powerful interests in Germany, Hungary and Poland are credited with plans to partition that state, the Sudenten territory to go to the Reich, the area inhabited by Magyars to be handed over to Hungary and the small province in which Poles predominate to be given to Poland. The spearhead of the campaign is a new book by Karl Vietz, entitled "The Betrayal of Europe," in which Moscow is accused of using Czechoslovakia as a stepping stone for the bolshevization of Europe. Copies of his volume were distributed at the meeting.

French Horsemen Turn Tide to Win 'Battle' Near Italy

Briaccon, France, Aug. 10 (A.P.).—Horses proved their value in modern warfare today when a detachment of French Moroccan cavalry rode up to a glacier to turn the tide in a mock battle high in the French Alps, near the Italian frontier.

Gen. Marie Gustave Gamelin, chief of staff, and military attaches of nearly every European nation applauded the brilliant cavalry action.

French Painter Held by Italians For 'Landscape'

St. Veran, France, Aug. 10 (U.P.). Rene Bernard, a painter, grandson of the French writer, Tristan Bernard, was reported today to have been detained by Italian frontier guards while painting a landscape near Angel Pass.

Bernard accompanied friends across the frontier at Angel Pass several days ago. He left the party and went to paint a mountain landscape. Friends understood that he was jailed on the ground that he was drawing sketches of a strategically important frontier section.

ParisThreatens Open Frontier To Aid Spain

Franco Must Accept Non-intervention Plan Now, England Informed.

Special Cable to The Post.

Paris, Aug. 10.—The French government has informed Great Britain that unless the Burgos Junta speedily accepts the nonintervention plan, it will be forced to "reconsider" its policy of closing the Pyrenees frontier. Strong pressure from the left has been put on the Daladier ministry to open the frontier to the passage of arms for the Spanish republican army.

This campaign is being led by former Premier Blum in the Socialist organ, "Le Populaire," where he is starting what he calls a "relaxed" nonintervention policy. By this is meant that although French munitions must not be shipped across the frontier, war supplies from Russia and Czechoslovakia will be allowed to pass through. This was the policy put into effect by Blum, when he was French premier last March.

It is understood that it was the Spanish situation, and not the Czech crisis that caused Premier Daladier to interrupt his cruise in the Mediterranean to return to Paris.

Blum argues that Franco now has no longer any interest in seeing the nonintervention plan go into effect, because he badly needs Italian volunteers for his Ebro counter-offensive. Meanwhile he continues to receive an uninterrupted supply of munitions from Germany and Italy.

About 50 miles to the south, where other forces of the Barcelona "people's army" for two weeks had maintained positions dominating Gandesa, the insurgents took the offensive. Insurgent dispatches reported the Gandesa line, along the Ebro River, had been broken, but the outcome of the battle was still in doubt.

Mines Threatened.

In southwestern Spain insurgent forces under Gen. Gonzalo Queipo de Llano reported an advance of 6 miles toward the Almaden mercury mines. They had gained a foothold on the Castuera-Almaden railway and were about 30 miles from Almaden.

On the maritime front, passengers on the British liner Llandaff Castle reported an insurgent trawler fired harmlessly on the steamer in the Strait of Gibraltar. They said the trawler held up the Llandaff Castle until a Netherlands sloop intervened.

Alicante, Barcelona and the British-leased Spanish port of Grandia were bombed again. One person was killed and seven injured at Alicante. One person was injured and a steamer was slightly damaged in the Barcelona attack.

Loyalist Drive Crushed.

Hendaye, France, Aug. 10 (A.P.).—Insurgent dispatches from Zaragoza, military headquarters, said today Gen. Franco's troops had "killed or captured" all government soldiers who crossed the Segre River south of Balaguer Monday night.

World War Sub Seized to Satisfy Alimony Claims

Montreal, Aug. 10 (U.P.).—The American submarine S-49, built for war purposes and now operating as a pleasure boat, was seized in the Lachine Canal to protect the claim of Mrs. R. F. Christensen, wife of the owner and captain, for alimony today.

Christensen has been traveling around the world, displaying the undersea craft to civilians.

Maj. Daniels Dies In Honolulu at 56

Maj. Morris S. Daniels, jr., 56, Adjutant General's Department, U. S. Army, died Tuesday in Honolulu, T. H. He had been stationed in Hawaii at Fort DeRussy.

A native of Newark, N. J., he entered the Regular Army from the Reserve Corps in 1917 as a second lieutenant of cavalry and served in that corps for 18 years. He transferred to the Adjutant General's Department in April last year.

Maj. Daniels was stationed at Fort Myer, Va., with the Third Cavalry from 1919 to 1926 and during most of that time was post adjutant. He was ordered to duty with the Sixteenth Brigade here the following year and remained with it until 1930.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Martha B. Daniels, two daughters, Jane and Ann, all of Honolulu, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Daniels, of Suffern, N. Y.

Russia, Japan Declare Truce In Border War

Soviet

troops will keep the territory they were occupying at midnight Wednesday, local Far-Eastern time.

The second condition is subject to a third provision that both sides will send representatives to arrange details of the cessation of hostilities.

The ambassador saw the foreign commissar from 7 to 10 p. m. and again from 11 p. m. to midnight when news of the agreement was given out.

The agreement was reached on the basis of Japanese proposals.

Tokyo Makes Concessions.

Tokyo earlier had announced that Japan was making additional concessions and had modified her proposals on creation of a mixed commission among Japan, Manchukuo and Russia for settlement of the boundary dispute near Changkufeng, south of Vladivostok.

Agreement came after two futile conversations between the ambassador and the foreign commissar last Thursday and Sunday. It ends two weeks of bitter border fighting in which hundreds have been killed or wounded.

Japan first proposed a mutual withdrawal of troops to satisfactory distances from the disputed boundary line and peaceful settlement of the controversy through a mixed commission to be composed of two Japanese, two Manchukuoans and two Russians.

Russia replied that if Japan withdrew her troops from Soviet soil, the cause of the fighting automatically would be removed and peace automatically restored.

The Soviet attitude was that all negotiations must be based on a treaty signed at Hung Chung (or Hunchun) in 1886 between Czarist Russia and Imperial China.

Russia also insisted on respect for a map of the boundary appended to her copy of the treaty.

On the basis of the three conditions given in the Japanese statement, it apeared that a compromise had been reached in which both sides made concessions.

Reds Drive Salient.

The armistice came soon after the Red army carried the fighting into Japanese territory and increased its budget 35 per cent.

The Soviet army in the Far East said in a headquarters communique, that it had driven a salient "into Japanese - Manchurian territory," after inflicting great losses on Japanese troops who attempted to storm a strategic hill in the Changkufeng area.

It was the first time that Russia admitted carrying the undeclared frontier war to Japanese soil, all previous announcements having stressed that the Red army is fighting only to drive the Japanese "invaders" from Russian territory.

Finance Commissar A. G. Zveryev announced before the new "Red parliament" sitting in the Kremlin Grand Palace, that the 1938 military budget is being increased from 20,000,000,000 rubles to 27,000,000,000 rubles.

The Russian ruble has no international exchange rate but is "pegged" at about 20 cents, thus Russia's new military budget would be approximately $5,400,000,000 compared with $4,000,000,000 in 1937.

Stalin, attending the second session of the new parliament where he received a wild, ten-minute ovation, heard the announcement of the arms increase.

Yuki, Korea, near the Siberian frontier, Aug. 10.—Soviet artillery and airplanes attacked the 4-mile Japanese front today in the most intensive firing thus far of the month-old Changkufeng border dispute. After dusk there was a brief flurry of machine gun and grenade activity around Changkufeng Hill.

Six Soviet pursuit planes came over the lines. Time after time they power-dived and poured machine gun bullets into the Japanese positions, at the front and at the rear, in Korea.

I could hear the chatter of their machine guns. Japanese anti-aircraft shells burst into smoke puffs on all sides of the planes, but scored no hits.

Officers announced earlier today that Japanese held Changkufeng Hill itself, but said they expected Japanese casualties were heavier yesterday than previously because of the accurate Soviet shelling.

Tokyo (Thursday), Aug. 11 (U.P.).—First news of the agreement reached in Moscow for cessation of hostilities on the Manchukuoan-Siberian frontier reached here in press dispatches at 10 a. m.

Officials declined to comment at once, but obviously they were relieved at the turn of events since, earlier, persons close to the minister of war had said he feared the border clashes would develop into a general war and was making preparations accordingly.

Japanese Seeking Weak Sector in Hankow Defense

China

the Japanese campaign was stalemated by Chinese counterattacks. Chinese were said to be assaulting Hwangmei, 110 air miles southeast of Hankow and the farthest point of Japanese penetration up the Yangtze.

To the south, Chinese were strengthening their defenses at Teian, 31 miles south of Kiukiang.

Chinese guerrillas in Pootung, just across the Whangpoo River from Shanghai, proclaimed the formation of a "regular army."

Police and defense troops in Shanghai increased precautions against a possible outbreak of terrorism Saturday, anniversary of the start of Japanese-Chinese fighting in Shanghai.

A typhoon barely missed Shanghai and swept inland along the course of the lower Yangtze.

President Stops Over at His 'Other Home'

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Camp Backed By President to Defeat George

Roosevelt

Rae merely commented he hoped Camp would not be the next Senator. George's headquarters said the Senator would not alter his plan to be at Barnesville.

Rivers, who once was considered a possible senatorial aspirant himself, thus far has been noncommital on the senatorial race. There was speculation whether Mr. Roosevelt had urged him to support Camp.

In his address today, Mr. Roosevelt said his "little visit" here was a "bit of a surprise" which he was able to bring about "because I found that the quickest route from catching fish on the Pacific Ocean was to come back by way of Warm Springs."

At the President's luncheon besides Camp and Rivers, were Dr. Emmett Bonne, jr., manager of the foundation; Basil O'Connor, head of the foundation's directing committee and Harry Hopkins, WPA administrator.

The President's audience, many of them boys and girls in wheel chairs, roundly applauded him.

Afterward, the Chief Executive returned to his open car, which he drove himself, for an inspection of his nearby farm.

A bright sun shone down on him all day, but most of his driving was through shaded dirt roads of the foundation.

The President had been expected to indicate his support of Camp in one or both of his addresses tomorrow.

On his way North the President will stop at Greenville, S. C., Thursday evening, Mr. Roosevelt stating he would say hello in that State, where Senator Ellison D. Smith, a frequent Administration opponent, is seeking renomination.

Speculation regarding the talk centered on whether he would take the opportunity to praise Gov. Olin D. Johnston, who is opposing Senator Smith for renomination.

Johnston has styled himself a friend of the Administration, while Smith, chairman of the powerful Senate Agriculture Committee, has opposed several Administration measures.

After his Greenville talk, the President's itinerary called for a direct trip homeward, with no stops scheduled.

Weather

inch of rainfall was dumped on the District in 20 minutes between 7:40 and 8 p. m. The sewer department was rushed to relieve a half-dozen storm sewers which were stopped and unable to handle the tremendous volume of water.

In Marlboro, Md., all lights were darkened for a half-hour and most of the lights in Silver Spring were out the same length of time. A pole was toppled in Takoma Park, Md., dragging wires with it.

A colored boy was drowned during the day seeking relief in the Anacostia River and another person collapsed from heat exhaustion and required hospital treatment.

Although a large section of plaster was torn from the Union Station ceiling and hurled to the floor, no one was injured. The bolt did not cause a blaze.

Detective Sergt. Jack Baker, of the pickup squad, was shocked while leaning against the wall of the squad room talking with other members of the unit. He was standing near the aerial which he said he believed transmitted the lightning to the wall.

Great splinters were hurled to the street from the Treasury flagpole, which was not ignited because of the heavy rain. Firemen were called to fight a blaze in a dynamo in the Agriculture building believed to have been started by lightning striking an inlet wire.

Fourteen-year-old Clark Gillis, colored, of 934 F street southwest, died as he waded beyond his depth at the railroad trestle across the Anacostia River. His cousin, Leroy Gillis, of 1106 O street southeast, called police who dragged unsuccessfully for the body.

Grafton Wilson, 33, colored, of 57 Fenton street northeast, was treated by a Casualty Hospital physician for heat exhaustion.

Showers during the afternoon rush hour dropped the temperature from 87 degrees at 4 p. m. to 82 at 5 p. m., but boosted the humidity from 50 per cent to 80 per cent.

High for the day was 90 degrees at 2:15 p. m., after a low of 73 at 6 a. m. Forecast for today is cloudy with possible showers.

Rural Georgians Flock to Hear Talmadge in Senate Campaign

old enemy, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace.

Hundreds of men left the town's four huge tobacco warehouses in the heat of the bargaining to attend the meeting today. They flocked away from the great yellow piles of bright-leaf tobacco in the rich, sweet smelling barns even as the yammering auctioneers rattled through their unintelligible rigamarole and the hawkeyed, weary looking buyers from the big 16 tobacco companies stumbled in paralleled lines around the heaps, instantly determining in which of the 108 grades the tobacco belongs, and instantly bidding by a lifted arm, a jerked head, or a mutter.

Snatching off his coat, hat and tie, his red suspenders disclosed in all their traditional vividness, Talmadge rolled up his sleeves solemnly in a moment of silent expectancy. The swift hushed yells of a few babies, the sound of the wind rolling through the great green balls of the long-needled pines, the thwack of an expectoration against a tree were the only sounds. Then he bellowed in that heavy cracked voice:

"Liberals are running against me, they say, liberals, hey? The only thing they're liberal with is other people's money.

"My countrymen, we've got to stop all this foolishness, this sinnin' against the word of the Lord, this plowin' up crops and not planting all you can.

"Why out in Colorado they marched all the cows and the sheep and the pigs up a steep mountain out there and they marched them right off a cliff."

Lambastes Wallace.

The crowd shuddered collectively at this picture.

"That's true, that's American history. It's in the books now, my countrymen, let me tell you something. The only man I ever saw who had too much to eat in his life, the only man who had more clothes than he could wear, the only man I could not look in the eye because he wouldn't face me, was Secretary Henry Wallace. My countrymen, it'll take me about 30 days after you get me to the Senate before I fix things up a little, while I clear away a little underbrush. Then about February 15, 1939, you're going to read a little item in the papers which will say 'Secretary Wallace ain't feeling so good. Secretary Wallace is in bad health. So Secretary Wallace has gone back to Iowa to stay.'"

This went very well with this tobacco crowd. The audience was thick with tobacco farmers who had just sold at very good prices, but at low poundage allotments, the results of their year's work. Due to the complexity and some admitted inequities in the farm act of 1938, the triple A and Secretary Wallace are highly unpopular here now.

Farmers who voted for crop control and were given acreage allotments are stunned at the news they can sell only a certain amount of their crop. Bright-leaf tobacco in this area is a comparatively new crop in Georgia, is the best quick cash crop and engages most of the farmers in the area with the exception of several hundred who grow seedling tomatoes and other vegetables which are transplanted to Maryland's Eastern Shore for big Eastern canning companies.

"We're Kind of Stubborn."

Thus Talmadge has both George and Camp on his hip. One of the first and devoutest opponents of the AAA, a man who fought its constitutionality through all the courts, Talmadge points with a sneer at George, shouting:

"Two days before it passed, Senator George spoke against this farm bill, denouncing it as communistic, as something coming out of Russia. In the final vote he voted for it. If he ever gets down here—he doesn't like to mingle with farmers and horny-handed sons of toil—if he ever does, ask him how he stands on it now and watch him scratch for an answer.

"George is running with a powerline in one hand and one of the President's coat-tails in the other. Young Mr. Camp is running on the other coat-tail and saying he's a hundred per cent for Roosevelt, and a hundred per cent for the New Deal and a hundred per cent for everything except Georgia.

"Now listen, my countrymen, there just ain't such a thing as anybody that's 100 per cent for anything. Down here in Georgia we're kind of stubborn about things and we think for ourselves.

"Why I ain't even 100 per cent for my wife. And she's the person I love most in all this good green earth. But many's the time I just bite my tongue and get out of the house so I won't speak out of turn.

"The only person in the world who can be 100 per cent for anything is a 2-year-old baby—a girl baby would be best—and if you want a 100 per center, you can dress up one of your pretty little girl babies in a new silk hair ribbon and send her to the Senate."

Silently through the crowds filtered John Whitley, plump, cigar-biting farmer-contractor of La Grange, Ga., one of Talmadge's aides, and the first man in the country to file suit against the constitutionality of the national industrial recovery act. Whitley said confidentially:

"The President's one of my eldest friends. But now I wouldn't walk across a dog patch to vote for him. He used to come over to my place near Warm Springs ever since 1926, and I've always been for him. Why, after he was elected the first time, in December, 1932, I had a 11-cup supper for him in celebration. But that NRA finished me. Since then he's not rightly been any friend of mine nor the common people."

"Devil's Own Program."

Up to the sound truck came scores of farmers to subscribe to Talmadge's newspaper, the Statesman, which costs one dollar a year, single copies five cents, contributions of any amount acceptable. In normal years—it has been maintained three years — the subscription list is around 25,000. Now 100,000 is claimed for it—136,000 voted for Talmadge two years ago. The subscription list contains such items as $5 from Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Wilbanks, from auctioned bedspreads.

Wilbanks told me:

"This work-less, spend-more program is the devil's own program. An idle brain is the devil's workshop. That bushy-haired little Gene Talmadge will put a stop to all those goin's-on in Washington, all right."

Talmadge's campaign, with a platform of homesteading free land in order to give jobs to the unemployed, and of repealing postage rates so that use of the mails is entirely free, is intensely attractive to the poor rural people in Georgia, who live barrenly in unpainted frame shacks, raising little crops of tobacco and cotton, slashing the tall pines for the sticky white resin that becomes turpentine in distillation, and growing peanuts and pecans in small lots.

Thousands Can't Vote.

But thousands of these citizens cannot vote, being without the dollar for poll taxes. They can only shout hurrahs for Talmadge. And the light registration, about 250,000, has unquestionably hurt his chance.

The more an observer sees of Georgia, the less he believes in the chances of Lawrence Camp to sit in the Senate. Camp is literally nowhere, and if the President's blessing, given today, can put his candidacy over, then anything is literally possible. Despite everything, George, whose political luck is a Georgia proverb—he was unopposed in 1926 and 1932—still has a powerful edge in many counties.

Camp optimistically claims he will split the anti-New Deal vote between Talmadge and George. But the Georgia vote seems to be generally a pro-vote—for Talmadge, for the New Deal or for George.

Talmadge, interviewed as he perspired in the big Cadillac that carries him around the State—he shook hands for a full hour after his speech today—scouted the theory that there will be a run-off race, which would be necessary if no candidate received a majority of the total unit votes cast by the counties. He said:

"I'll see you in Washington. They can't lick me this time. The people have got religion again."

An old farmer approached the car and with trembling hands gave Talmadge the papers representing his receipt for his tobacco, his acreage allotment, and his poundage allotment. Talmage heard his grievance patiently—it was only one of scores shown him today—and advised the black-hatted old man (dressed in his best faded pongee shirt, Sunday trousers and suspenders) to mail the papers in a registered letter to his son, Herman Talmadge, in Atlanta, who is preparing for Talmadge's next suit against the Government, to test the constitutionality of the new farm act. Said Talmadge:

"That's only a sample. Wait until they start howling about cotton around September 1. From then on I'm in. It's only a month to the primary, September 14, and they can't straighten things out by then. You'll see."

Ecuador Pact Spurs Drives For Latin Trade

Business

previous trade agreements except that with Cuba. It consists of general provisions, containing mutual guarantees of unconditional most favored nation treatment with respect to all forms of trade or payments control, and two schedules listing the new traff concessions which will be granted by each government.

The United States sold $14,926,788 worth of products, chiefly foodstuffs, machinery and automobiles, to Ecuador last year, and imported products worth $11,978,418 from Ecuador, chiefly cocoa beans, coffee and crude petroleum.

The Export-Import Bank recently disclosed it will concentrate its activities in South America following announcement it had agreed to discount notes of the Haitian government to finance a public works program estimated to involve more than $5,000,000. The bank is redoubling its efforts in South America to forestall economic and political penetration of European countries.

Pierson said publicity given the bank's activities recently have aroused considerable interest in South America and as a result inquiries have shown a rise. Applications for American products range from "water meters to lomomotives," he said. A substantial number of applications are being studied.

Leaves for Venezuela.

The bank head said he will first go to Venezuela and from there to Brazil, which is now negotiating for a substantial order of American locomotives, coaches and freight cars, and heavy machenery. Uruguay, Argentina, Chile, Ecuador, Peru and Colombia are on his itinerary.

The Export-Import Bank was organized in 1934 to facilitate American export trade following the collapse of currencies, trade and exchange barriers which were set up over the world. These restrictions resulted in the freezing of American export capital. Heretofore, the bank had been concentrating its activities in Europe, but exchange restrictions have curbed trade there.

With the unstable political situation in Europe getting progressively worse, the bank then looked to the Far East, but this market, especially China, has been prostrated by the year-old war. Meantime, a number of European countries, which had established branches of government subsidized banks in South America, began combining economic penetration with political propaganda.

Production Increasing.

Secretary Roper was particularly optimistic about fall business prospects, though he said "it is neither expected nor desired that the upward trend will reach boom proportions, but that the advance will be on a safe and sound foundation." He added:

"There has been a contraseasonal advance in industrial output and construction activity, expansion in freight traffic, and less than seasonal contraction in retail sales of general merchandise. The significance of this improvement has been increased employment and larger pay rolls in numerous industries.

"Production of nondurable goods has been increasing for the past three months and the durable goods industries have now joined the forward movement.

"Order for machine tools, lumber and other durable products have shown a rising tendency. The first large company to report on July deliveries of cars to consumers reported a total in excess of the June results, whereas a seasonal decline is usual at this period.

"The expansion in business activity has extended over a broad area and has developed at a time when seasonal dullness usually prevails."

The Secretary said he found the English people very interested in working out a trade agreement with the United States and asserted officials were making "progress" in negotiating the proposed pact.

From Detroit came word that telegrams had been sent out calling back to work employes of the Packard, Plymouth, Chrysler, and De Soto automobile companies and the Motor Products Corporation, Fisher Body, Murray Body, Holley Carburetor, National Automotive Fibers, Kalsey-Hayes Wheel, Detrola Corporation and other concerns.

United States Rubber Co. executives said from 700 to 1,400 workers have been called back. At Toledo, David R. Wilson, president of Willys-Overland Motors, Inc., said 1,000 will be recalled by August 15.

Capital Truck Drivers Asked To Enroll in Safety Campaign

Safety

Ashton Miller, local chairman of the National Civic Safety Committee.

Pending final arrangements to enroll drivers and owners in safety courses at the board's accident prevention institute, the following set of highway rules for truck drivers is proposed.

Watch out for children.

Dont' park double where space is available at the curb.

Turn off motors while making deliveries.

Don't cut corners—the time saved isn't worth it.

Check regularly all mechanical features of your vehicles.

Appeal Directly to Operators.

In visiting local trucking concerns who have failed as yet, to organize for safety, the Junior Board committee will urge operators to follow the practice of larger companies who have established enviable records on Washington streets by offering safety instruction and providing rigid penalties for employes who drive negligently.

The city's traffic record during the past several days is an example of what can be done by a mass attack on the problem. With 17 persons killed by trucks since July 1 of last year, The Post and Junior Board are seeking to cut this toll by appealing directly to fleet and independent operators for co-operation.

At the board's accident prevention institute, drivers and owners alike will be given the benefit of free safety instruction by nationally recognized traffic men. The institute, however, is not reserved for truck drivers alone—every District motorist is urged to attend sessions which will resume next month.

Meanwhile, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, yesterday reported favorable results in his efforts to rid the city's streets of unattended youngsters. Attendence at the 123 local playgrounds is increasing daily, he said, and parents are showing a new willingness to instruct their children against highway hazards.

Plans to safeguard children—similar to those now under way in Washington—have brought a marked reduction in juvenile deaths in other cities, according to a survey completed recently by the Works Progress Administration. Notable results have been obtained in New York, Atlantic City and Minneapolis, the survey revealed.

Maj. Brown also announced final reports from his precinct commanders on the possibilities of roping off play streets in various sections of the city will be presented Friday at Commissioner Hazen's safety rally at the District Building.

The Post-Junior Board safety program for trucking concerns also is expected to be indorsed at the conference.

Meanwhile, announcement was made by Joseph Kadens, director of the Accident Prevention Institute, that drivers of the District would be given an opportunity Friday night to decide whether or not they desire a free public class of instruction in District of Columbia traffic regulations.

The announcement was made after a conference with M. O. Eldridge, assistant District of Columbia traffic director, who informed Kadens there was no public class of that kind in Washington at this time and stated that such a class should be of much value to drivers about to take the traffic department's written driving examination based on traffic regulations, which many drivers have failed to pass.

Woman Learns 'Sleepwalker' Is Thief, Not Mate

Chicago, Aug. 10 (AP).—Her husband being a somnambulist, Mrs. Margaret Leibsen thought nothing of it when she saw a man on his hands and knees in her room before sunup today.

She laughed and said, "This has gone far enough."

The man got up and casually departed through a window. Leibsen awoke and demanded to know "what all the fuss was about."

It was then Mrs. Leibsen learned the "sleepwalker" was a burglar, who had helped himself to $2 and some cigarettes.

Corrigan Gives Approval to Airport Site

Says Field Here Could Stand Widening; Mum on Marriage.

Douglas Corrigan, in a press conference, discussed life, love, money and the Washington-Hoover Airport last night.

"I think your airport is all right," he said. "It's big enough for the city, but it could probably be widened a little to get a cross runway. I'd suggest that the blimp hangar be taken down and the cross runway extended. The airport is in the best place you can put it."

He was asked whether he was interested in money.

"I'm not interested in dough," he said. "Don't need any I guess. Nothing going out now, and nothing coming in. I'm not worrying about it. Right now I don't know what I will do. Guess I'll collect all the business offers and take the best one. I haven't any idea what I want to do."

Never Eats Breakfast.

"We're supposed to have breakfast with the Civil Aeronautics Authority tomorrow. I guess I'll watch the rest of the fellows eat. I never eat breakfast. Only have orange juice and not always that. Luncheon and dinner are the only meals I eat. Tonight is the first time I have eaten dinner at a table since I left. Had filet of sole."

Asked if it wasn't pretty hot yesterday, he said "I didn't even think it was warm." He said he was used to a welding job and when it got down to 80 or 90 degrees, "that's cool."

In Ireland, he said, the offers to make pictures started out at $5,000, and when "I got to New York they were up to $50,000, all for one picture with options, of course. In case it flopped I guess they didn't want to get stuck with me."

Marriage Leaves Him Cold.

Asked about marriage he said he wasn't interested. Pressed for answer on how he would support a wife if he did he said, "you can always make a living and if you can't you can let your wife go out and work too."

The reception here was more orderly than anywhere he had been, he said, adding that the one in Baltimore had been orderly, too, but that those in Newark and Boston had been very disorderly.

Corrigan said he hadn't decided what he would do with his plane. Declared he might sell—if. The Smithsonian, he continued, hasn't asked for it yet. (He seemed to be receptive to any offer from the Smithsonian, however.)

He paid $325 for his plane but added a lot of things to it, bringing the cost up to $900. "I put a lot of stuff on it."

"Never Had Any Plans."

"I never was interested in being an airline pilot," Corrigan continued. I've got no plans for the future and never had any."

Asked if he didn't think the National Capital should have the best airport in the country, he replied:

"You shouldn't run on prestige. Commercial traffic is the only thing to be considered. There are no jams in traffic here as there are at Chicago and they seem to be doing plenty of business."

He added that he thought New York ought to have the best airport and Chicago the next best.

He declared that he doesn't use alcoholic drinks, "because I don't like the taste of it. I don't know how I got across without smoking a few cigarettes to give me a lift, though."

He said he must have signed 300 autographs yesterday and that his handwriting got worse the more he wrote. Asked if he was tired he said no, "But when you make five speeches a day you get kind of flat at the end."

Corrigan said he had never voted, but probably would next time. He was asked, "who are you going to vote for," and replied, "I don't know who's running."

The wings on the plane don't flap when it isn't overloaded and they didn't on his flight across, "because the air was smooth."

He said the story about knocking ice off the wings with a pole, "was one of those you fellows (the press) made up. That just ain't possible."

O'Daniel Watches Troops Parade to Theme Song Tune

Camp Bullis, Tex., Aug. 10 (U.P.)—W. Lee O'Daniel, Democratic nominee for Governor, standing with Gov. James V. Allred, today reviewed troops of the Thirty-sixth Division, Texas National Guard—more than 9,000 men and 14 bands.

As the first band swung past the reviewing stand, troops were marching to its martial rendition of the theme song O'Daniel crooned in his campaign:

"Please Pass the Biscuits, Pappy."

Corrigan

the rich, and powerful men in Roosevelt's Cabinet.

In the ballroom of the Willard Hotel it reached a crescendo. Here during a great flight of Irish eloquence, James Conlon, president of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, compared Corrigan with St. Brendan, Lief Erickson and Christopher Columbus.

"He says," said Corrigan, "that he's going to class me with Christopher Columbus. Well, Columbus started to India and got to America—that was a mistake, too, you know."

The 1,000 guests, who had been eating green consomme, green salad and green ice cream, roared their appreciation and forgot the heat.

Later, Denis Mulligan, director of the Bureau of Air Commerce, put him on the carpet and demanded an explanation of how he started out for Los Angeles in his 9-year-old "crate" and landed without permission in Dublin, 2,700 miles in the opposite direction.

Certain and Ashamed.

"Well," said the hilarious hero, "the explanation is this: I flew on the wrong end of the compass needle, and traveled in the wrong direction."

"Are you certain of that?"

"Yes, and I am ashamed of it. I expected the punishment to be much rougher than it was."

Mulligan, who "grounded" Corrigan for the period that he was on the steamship Manhattan, coming home, staggered a bit under this blarney, but came back gallantly.

"Well, it was a great day for the Irish," he said, "but the next time you start some place let's know which way you're going."

"I certainly will."

"No Client," Says Hogan.

Frank J. Hogan, president of the American Bar Association and famous for his million-dollar fee, heard Corrigan glibly explaining his scrambled geography at the Willard luncheon and gave up all hope of getting him as a client.

"The man who can invent an alibi like that and stick to it as Corrigan did," said Hogan, sadly, "needs no lawyer."

How Corrigan flew the Atlantic in a second-hand plane is one thing to wonder about, but how he managed to go through yesterday's boisterous reception and still maintain his puckish grin is something best explained by Kipling's "If."

He Gets Mauled.

In the course of the day, he was pushed, pulled and carried. Women rushed forward to kiss him, then lost their nerve or were swept aside. Autograph hunters besieged him, pencil and paper in hand. Photographers, reporters, policemen and hysterical committee members surrounded him the whole day long. Frequently he was the center of wild confusion, but he took the whole thing as a grand lark.

Washingtonians got their first glimpse of the so-called "bewildered birdman" when a gray and red American Airways liner brought him to the Washington Airport from Baltimore at 11:35 a. m.

"Hey, Doug!" They Cry.

A window in the pilot's cabin opened and Corrigan's head popped out. There was a mad rush toward the plane and cries of "Hey, Doug! Hey, Doug!" A moment later he was walking down the gangway, grinning and waving, while sweating policemen fought to protect his ribs.

To record history accurately under the circumstances was a hard task, indeed, but so far as could be seen the first man to greet the hero of the Irish was Isaac Gans, member of the Alcoholic Liquor Control Board.

Preceded by motorcycle men with screaming sirens open, Corrigan was whisked from the airport across the Arlington Memorial Bridge to the Lincoln Memorial. This was the starting point for a parade that led down Constitution avenue to the Willard.

Never Such a Man.

The National Capital has seen and welcomed many heroes in its 138 years, but never one like Corrigan. A short, wiry little fellow, with a sharp nose, bristly hair and laughing eyes, he was dressed in practically the same clothes he wore on his famous flight. He had on a cheap pair of checkered pants, brown shoes and drooping socks, a white shirt with greenish necktie and the aforementioned leather jacket.

Smaller Than Lindbergh's.

He stood up in the back of his car, waving with one arm until it got tired, and then the other. Eleven years ago, Charles A. Lindbergh rode through Washington in similar fashion, and it was inevitable yesterday that people should compare the two.

There was not much to compare. The crowd was much smaller in size, and very much different emotionally. Those who lined Pennsylvania avenue that hot day in June, 1927, looked upon Lindbergh with something akin to awe. They had prayed that he might make it to Paris, and when he did they enshrined him as a superman.

When he came back, the crowds were so great that they blackened the Washington Monument hill, and they were so eager to honor him, to touch him, that he begged for a chance to be alone.

Corrigan, himself a worshiper of Lindbergh, flew to Dublin without notice, at a time when the world was watching Howard Hughes, and when Americans picked up their newspapers to read about his feat they discovered that he was not only a great flier but a witty leg-puller as well.

Lacking a passport and visa to Ireland, Corrigan simply explained that he didn't know that he was headed for Ireland at all; that he thought he was on his way to Los Angeles. Corrigan laughed, the whole world laughed and it has been laughing ever since.

And it was in this spirit that Corrigan came to Washington yesterday and in this spirit that he was given the city's accolade.

He Likes Crowds.

A happy-go-lucky extrovert, the 31-year-old, 120-pound flier appeared to have a genuine affection for crowds, and the crowds returned his feelings with interest. Long after he had passed by, spectators were continuing to smile, and many, no doubt, were still smilling as they went to their beds last night. To them Corrigan will always be synonymous with laughter.

A detailed itinerary had been worked out for Corrigan before he arrived, but he was destined to go wrong early in the day. It happened that the paraded ended sooner than was expected. To kill time between it and the Willard luncheon, he was taken as far west as Washington Circle and then back to the Lincoln Memorial. There the procession halted for 15 minutes, and Corrigan talked to whoever was nearby and in the mood for talking.

Arriving at the F street entrance to the Willard Hotel, outside of which a throng had gathered, Corrigan was met by Manager Harry Somerville, who escorted him to the ballroom.

Between Irishmen.

Corrigan sat between Robert Brennan, acting Minister from Ireland, and Rossa F. Downing, former president of the Ancient Order of Hibernians and the luncheon toastmaster. Over Corrigan's head was a miniature of his plane, the "crate" or "Corrigan Clipper." All around him were notables with Irish names and in front of him was the green consomme.

George O'Connor, Washington's famed troubadour, who has entertained seven American Presidents, led a sextette in singing "C-o-r-r-i-g-a-n," a parody of George Cohan's "H-a-r-r-i-g-a-n," the Irishman who was proud of all the Irish blood that was in him. And after that came Victor Herbert's rousing "It's a Great Day for Ireland."

With that as a stimulus, President Conlon, of the Hibernians, launched into a eulogy of Corrigan and of "those of Irish ancestry who have had so large a part in molding the destinies of this country."

"It has been well said," he continued, "that America is the melting pot and at this time, when absurd and inaccurate claims for so-called racial purity are being emphasized in other parts of the world, it is significant that America's leadership in the affairs of the world may be properly attributed to the tolerance and racial amity which have formed the keystone upon which this Nation has been build. In you, sir, that spirit is epitomized and in your achievement, we of Irsh ancestry make bold to take a deep pride."

It was at this point that Conlon compared Corrigan with St. Brendan, Lief Erickson and Christopher Columbus, and thus gave Corrigan a chance to say that the discoverer of America also made a mistake. The Hibernians gave Corrigan a watch guaranteed to run in the right direction.

Acting Minister Brennan also compared Corrigan with St. Brendan, who, he reminded the guests, "in the sixth century traveled the seas in his frail craft to find the shores of America."

"When a representative of the press rang me up and told me Mr. Corrigan had come down in Dublin," Brennan said, "he asked me what the Irish authorities would do in view of the fact that he had neither passport nor visa, and I said I was sure that they would say his name was his passport and his valiant flight his visa."

De Valera, Hyde Quoted.

This led Corrigan to recall that Prime Minister De Valera told him he had found his way because he had the map of Ireland on his face, and that President Hyde had pointed out that, like all men with Irish blood, he had the instinct of a homing pigeon where the Emerald Isle was concerned.

Mgr. Joseph M. Corrigan, rector of Catholic University, praised his namesake5s "gallant heart and intelligent mind," and the way in which he had handled himself since his triumph.

As stout as the flier is thin, Mgr. Corrigan added to the gayety with this remark:

"I think I ought to be here today to show that some of the other Corrigans carry weight, too."

Michael Casey, commander of the Irish War Veterans, said Corrigan's flight again emphasized that the United States owes a debt to Ireland for sending over his ancestors.

"Call Me," Says Hazen.

District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen told Corrigan that he should call on him in case he is arrested for speeding or gets a parking ticket. He also expressed the hope that Corrigan would "settle in Washington and become one of our taxpayers."

Commissioner Hazen gave Corrigan a huge basket of flowers, which the flier promptly ordered sent to the Children's Hospital.

Corrigan said the flowers were very pretty, and, diplomat that he is, said Washington was the prettiest city he had ever seen, with London second.

Col. James Moss, of the United States Flag Association, announced that Corrigan, like Lindbergh, Amelia Earhart and Howard Hughes, was awarded that organization's cross of honor.

The cross was presented by Col. Patrick J. Hurley, Secretary of War in the Hoover Administration, who was wearing a green tie for the occasion.

"In these times," said Col. Hurley, "your splendid exemplification of the spirit of self-reliance is an outstanding contribution to one of the fundamental principles of Americanism."

Mgr. Fulton J. Sheen, national chaplain of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, who met Corrigan when he called on Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy in London, said that the flier was a master in the use of blarney. But he quickly pointed out the difference between the Irish blarney and the American baloney.

"Blarney," he said, "is the varnished truth, whereas baloney is the unvarnished lie."

Points to David.

He said that there had been a lot of "wrong way" heroes in history, among them young David who had the audacity to attack Goliath with a sling shot. What America needs, he said, is more of the Corrigan spirit, for with it capital and labor could settle their differences at the table instead of with violence, and a lot more wholesome reforms could be achieved.

Sees Hulls, Roper.

From the Willard Hotel, Corrigan dashed to the State Department to call on Secretary and Mrs. Hull. Here, too, the infectious smile went to work, and Mexican oil, the Spanish Civil War and the Czechoslovakia crisis seemed very alien indeed.

He next called on Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper, who asked him whether he flew through clouds on his way across the Atlantic. Corrigan said he flew through them for about 26 hours, when he dropped down and saw water for the first time.

In the same building, Corrigan encountered Denis Mulligan, of the Bureau of Air Commerce, and talked about his beloved "clipper." The license for this has been suspended, but the prospect is that if Corrigan will move one or two of the gas tanks that impede the vision he will be allowed to take it aloft again.

Sorry to Miss Farley.

Corrigan's next stop was the Postoffice Department, where the flier expressed regret over the absence of Postmaster General James A. Farley. He was greeted by Acting Postmaster General Ramsey S. Black, who told him:

"We of the Postoffice Department are very glad you weren't carrying any mail on that flight. If you'd dropped a lot of California letters over Dublin, you'd be getting complaints the rest of your life."

Corrigan sat at Farley's desk and signed autographs. As he was leaving, a crowd clamored to see him, and two guards hoisted him up by holding his legs.

Grins at Sultan.

By the time he reached the District Building, he was beginning to show fatigue. In Commissioner Hazen's office, he flopped into the first chair within reach and yawned. Engineer Commissioner Dan I. Sultan was moved to offer his sympathy, but Corrigan merely grinned.

Corrigan was made an honorary member of Theodore Roosevelt Troop of Sea Scouts, was given a clock by a youthful admirer and two scrap books made up of aticles about him by Anne Jackson, of 120 C street southeast.

After washing up in his suite at the Carlton Hotel, Corrigan went to the National Press Club where Acting President Arthur Hachton told him that its doors would be forever opened to him.

Breakfast With Ryan.

"Thank you," said Corrigan. "When I made my flight the reason I got to Ireland was that I read my compass wrong. But the reason I am here tonight is that you fellows made a good story out of it.

"It was no harder for me to do than the flight from New York to El Paso last year, or from Los Angeles to New York. It's the same kind of air up there."

Corrigan spent last night at the Carlton Hotel and this morning he will be the breakfast guest there of Oswald Ryan, a member of the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

Harris & Ewing.

Susan Cornelia Jones, 14, whose efforts to assist the Corrigan welcoming committee resulted in her being named assistant parade marshal, greets Douglas Corrigan on his arrival here.

Teaching Safety.

In co-operation with the energetic Junior Board of Commerce, The Post has undertaken a campaign to impress independent truck owners with their responsibility in the matter of traffic safety—or the lack of it. Since July 1, 1937, 12 Washingtonians have been killed by trucks, 7 of these being children. When it is remembered that most trucks are driven continuously throughout a working day this figure compares favorably with that ascribed to passenger vehicles. But, at that, it is far too high.

That it can be lowered has been demonstrated by several large truck fleets whose safety records have been improved appreciably through educational devices. Following the methods of accident and life insurance companies which regularly instruct employes as well as the general public in safety and health practices, fleet operators have schooled their drivers in safe driving habits. But lack of organization has hitherto discouraged similar schooling among small and independent truckers.

Now the Junior Board and The Post, as their contribution to the drive for safer living conditions in Washington, will combine to overcome this difficulty. It is the not impossible hope, too, that by force of example the same type of instruction may be spread more widely among the general driving public.

The Man For The Job.

Before it adjourned last week, the Evian conference on refugees created a permanent intergovernmental organization to deal with the problem. And it named George Rublee, of Washington, as the director.

No better appointment could have been made. By training and temperament Mr. Rublee is exceptionally well equipped to deal with the grave problems which the permanent refugees organization is called upon to solve. Combining deep humanitarian instincts with an extraordinary capacity to handle difficult problems in a smooth and efficient manner, he has the precise qualities needed for the successful execution of the great but extraordinarily difficult task entrusted to him.

A highly successful lawyer, Mr. Rublee is no stranger either to Government service or to international diplomacy. At one time or another he has been, inter alia, a member of the Federal Trade Commission, a special counsel of the Treasury Department, and American delegate on the epoch-making Allied Maritime Transport Council, the experiences of which proved so valuable a precedent in organizing the technical agencies of the League of Nations.

As legal adviser to the American Embassy in Mexico City, Mr. Rublee worked hand in glove with the late Dwight Morrow in bringing about a settlement of Mexican-American difficulties of long standing. Later he was adviser to the American delegation to the London naval conference of 1930 and adviser to the government of Colombia. Both his experience and his abilities will serve him and civilization in good stead in the new task he has undertaken.

Derring-Do.

Harvest time is bringing us an uncommonly fine crop of tournaments throughout Maryland and Virginia; some of them recent, some of them scheduled for the immediate future. Naturally, this raises again the interesting question of why this is almost the only part of the Western World where this old custom, half game, half ritual, survives.

In England for several centuries, and on the European continent for an even longer period, tournaments, and later jousts, were in the nature of military reviews, sham battles, preparation for actual war.

By the time Maryland and Virginia were settled, however, methods of warfare had changed and the occasional tournaments initiated by Henry, Prince of Wales, the son of James I, were sport events with a smack of pageantry. And it was as such that the colonies remembered them. They took up the custom where England left it off, and it is probably true that any time during the last three centuries there has been more of Old England in Maryland and Virginia than in England itself.

Historically and sociologically this is understandable. The colonist sought to perpetuate the things with which he was familiar. The home-sickness which prompted him to give old-country names to birds and flowers which only faintly resembled old-country birds and flowers (as for instance the robin and the daisy) cured itself by becoming a habit. Old speech persisted and here and there you'll hear a word or phrase that is plainly Elizabethan. So it was with the tournaments.

Now and again England has awakened to the fact that she has permitted picturesque and pleasurable institutions to lapse. In 1839 Archibald William Montgomerie, thirteenth Earl of Eglinton, borrowing the idea from this side of the Atlantic, celebrated a tournament on his estate. But it didn't take. As the Old Trouper said to Don Marquis' archy: "the old troupers are gone they dont have it any more they havent got it here."

Back Into Politics.

Celebrating the President's return to the continental United States, the Democratic Party on Tuesday presented him with substantial victories in the Ohio and Arkansas primaries. Neither the sweeping triumph of Senator Bulkley, nor the selection by a much narrower margin of Senator Caraway, upset the predictions. But it is apparent that neither of these candidates for re-election was injured by the public commendation given each by the Chief Executive.

In Idaho, where the issue was clearly drawn between a stanch New Dealer and a really independent Democrat, the returns from the viewpoint of Mr. Roosevelt as party leader were much less satisfactory. In a close fight Senator Pope went down to defeat at the hands of Representative Clark. It should be noted that in this case, by contrast with the Ohio and Arkansas results, the defeated candidate did not have open Presidential indorsement. It was implied, however, in efforts made in his behalf by both Postmaster General Farley and Secretary Hull.

From any non-political viewpoint the defeat of Senator Pope is much more of a loss to the Senate than would have been a failure by either Senators Bulkley or Caraway to secure renomination. And to assert this is not to minimize the qualities of the two last-named.

Senator Pope, however, has proved one of those relatively few Senators who make a real mark during their initial term. In his quality of liberalism there has never been anything meretricious and in his unusually far-sighted grasp of international problems he was always an asset to the upper chamber. It may be hoped that the victory of Representative Clark means merely that Idaho is now old enough to want a native son in the Senate, and not that it is a repudiation of Mr. Pope for what Secretary Hull called his "splendid support" of the trade-agreements program.

While Senator Bulkley's victory in the Ohio primary was easy it is evident that November will find him with a strenuous battle on his hands. The selection of Robert A. Taft as Republican candidate for this seat is one of the few instances in the primaries to date where the choice made by the quondam G. O. P. has been of general political importance. Like his younger brother, Charles, this son of the former President is one of the small group who are heavily counted upon to forward Republican regeneration. Senator Bulkley has yet to meet the real opposition to his re-election.

It may have been the Bulkley and Caraway victories which yesterday induced President Roosevelt, in Georgia, publicly to express the "hope" that Lawrence S. Camp, the opponent of Senator George in the coming primary there, "will be the next Senator from this State." It may have been that Mr. Roosevelt chose to make this remark rather informally, at a luncheon, in preference to indorsing Mr. Camp more energetically in either of his two Presidential appearances today, as has been expected of him. Which is the case will be clear by sunset tonight.

But the incontestable fact is that Mr. Roosevelt has again shown a marked indifference to political niceties, and a really dangerous lack of appreciation of the undesirability of executive interference, no matter how carefully phrased, in local elections.

There is an interesting contrast between the action of Franklin D. Roosevelt yesterday and that of George Washington when, in 1792, a candidate for Congress named John Mercer implied that the then President would favor his election. As Washington wrote to Mercer: "The exercise of an influence (if I really possess any) however remote would be highly improper; as the people ought to be entirely at liberty to chuse whom they pleased to represent them in Congress. Having pursued this line of conduct steadily, my surprise, and consequent declaration can be a matter of no wonder . . ."

President Roosevelt's declarations are of another character. He does not believe in Washington's "invariable rule" of "not interfering directly or indirectly with the suffrages of the people in the choice of their representatives."

And that is one good reason why President Roosevelt, when his tenure of office comes up for appraisal as a whole, may receive very different treatment from impartial historians to that which is universally accorded Washington's conduct of the highest executive office.

Pass The Cranberries.

We are credibly informed that the officials of the Department of Agriculture Experimental Station at Beltsville, Md., are getting as big a lift out of smoking a turkey as in smoking a cigarette.

Hard on the heels of the news that the station was prepared to freeze out a fire with dry ice comes word of momentous doings in a smokehouse. If you soak a 20-week-old turkey in a solution of salt, saltpeter and sugar and then hang it up where it will be completely hidden by smoke you'll get something, we are informed, that will make a gourmet sit up and take notice.

There may be sentimentalists who will deplore this treatment of what many are inclined to deem the national bird. With them the Thanksgiving Dinner is less a meal than a rite, and the turkey—whether it be stuffed with sage and onions, chestnuts, or oysters—is a symbol of present contentment and joyous hope of better things to come; and there is much to support this point of view. First and last the turkey is a national dish. But if by smoking it it can be made a staple like apple pie and mashed potatoes, instead of an annual preliminary to bi-carb, why shouldn't we applaud the aims of earnest scientists?

A grateful world may yet declare that the very finest thing to have under your belt, and the most important thing that ever came out of Beltsville, is a well-smoked turkey. Why shouldn't a good soaking and a little smoke improve a finished actor? It improves a ham.

G. H. A. Decision Appeal.

The Department of Justice finds itself in a slightly embarrassing position. The District corporation counsel has appealed a point in the recent decision which certified the legality of the Group Health Association. His questions, of course, involve only the local law. However, another phase of the case fell within the scope of the Federal law. And the Attorney General's office has decided not to contest the ruling in this regard.

Although presumably entirely objective in their reasoning, the Federal lawyers are nonetheless open to the suspicion that they are here pulling their punches. The anti-trust division of the Department of Justice is in the midst of buttressing the G. H. A. from attacks by organized medicine. Plainly, one section of the department could scarcely be prosecuting the G. H. A. while another is defending it.

The question raised originally by the corporation counsel was whether or not the G. H. A. is subject to the laws regulating insurance in the District of Columbia. In a declaratory judgment Justice Bailey of the District Court advised that it is not. Mr. Seal would like confirmation on this point. He fears that racketeers, or perhaps honest but incompetent persons, might enter the District offering services similar to those provided by the G. H. A. and that in the eventuality there might be no way to protect the public against them. If not a probability, this is at least a possibility and none can criticize Mr. Seal for his alertness.

Even if the appeal is lost, the corporation counsel will not have wasted his time, for he then will possess an excellent argument with which to impress on Congress the need for additional legislation dealing expressly with group health activities. As for the G. H. A., it should welcome the appeal. Being one of the pioneers in the uncertain field of medical economics, its concern is to find the most certain route toward the goal of evenly-distributed medical care and costs.

A favorable appellate court decision would give added assurance that it is on the right course; an unfavorable verdict would change the course before it proceeds too far in a wrong direction.

A Sad Shad Story.

Consider, if you please, the touching story of the species sapidissima of the genus Alosa or, if you prefer, the common shad. With all its faults, which are, so to speak, bred in the bone, the shad is nonetheless a dainty and appealing creature, especially on a plank.

Well then, once upon a time these giddy and lovable shad yielded by thousands, nay hundreds of thousands, to the lure of the Big and Wicked City. Eagerly they hurried thither, via the Hudson River, seeking what they fondly thought would be romance and adventure. You simply could not make them believe, poor things, that there had been ten thousand broken-hearted shad for every port light on the Weehawken ferryboats. And all the time the beady-eyed megalopolitans spread their cruel nets, smiled their evil smiles, licked their sinister chops. If the grim old Fulton Fish Market had a tongue, what tales might it not unfold of blighted loves and hopes betrayed!

Few indeed were the shad that lived to see the wharves of Yonkers or the shores of Poughkeepsie. Yet year after year came more infatuated schools up the Hudson until at last there were hardly any more shad left to be lured. Then the Government took a hand to save the species from extinction. And what do you suppose was the result? Under this aegis great generations of hearty, happy clean-finned young shad grew up—only to yield in the end, like their uncles before them, to the lure of megalopolis. This very year, according to the Bureau of Fisheries, between 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 pounds of shad were caught in the Hudson.

Now the way of a shad with a river is part of nature. There's no getting around that—and nobody would want to. And having chosen his river, as the proverb says, a shad must swim in it. How happy, then, those shad that chose their river wisely and well. Those who came to our gracious Lady Potomac find a fate that was equal to their merit—the dotingest cooking, the tenderest appetites, the lovingest serving. They were decked in gowns of golden lemon juice and their dear little roe were swaddled in the sweetest of bacon.

Krum Elbow Sale.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We see in the sale of a part of Krum Elbow to Father Divine for a country "heaven" for Negroes a most perfect example of hatred borne by economic royalists to F. D. R.

Not that the excursion parties on week-ends during the summer will do the Roosevelt family any material harm or mental discomfort, for Negro families have lived in close proximity to many of the finest people, even in the deep South, with excellent neighborliness. Even in Washington we still find many homes of the majority group adjacent to homes of a minority group with no loss of mutual respect or security.

I venture to say that in Mrs. Roosevelt's comment "It must . . . be pleasant to feel that in the future this place will be 'heaven' to some people, even if it cannot be to its former owner," is expressed the sincere reaction of the President and his family to the attempt to embarrass him.

Once in every so many years, a wise Providence selects from the elect of the earth a man whom he chastens and humanizes even as Job was, and sets him about a job of rendering life more fit to live for the man lowest down. We seem to be on the way toward a recognition of the economic principle that to all men of today belong rightfully a large share of the wealth and well being that the brains and brawn and sacrifices of other generations of men have made possible.

It will only be after the obituary notices have borne evidence that the selfish individualists among the rich and poor have passed on to a Communistic heaven that the reforms for which Mr. Roosevelt has become so hated will become accepted principles of social life.

It is not strange that two great humanitarians, in our brief history, Abraham Lincoln and President Roosevelt, have become so thoroughly the targets of malice and hating men.

Who Is Protected?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The letter in your esteemed paper of August 8, captioned "Illegal Practice," by Dr. R. W. Frischkorn, appears to me proof that this medico is unduly wrought up over the incident wherein an unethical appearing drug clerk, wearing a blue shirt in a supposedly high-class drug store, recommended to a young lady a remedy for a simple foot ailment.

The doctor is absolutely right when he says "the pharmacist is hedged about very definitely with regulations designed to safeguard the interests of an often unknowing and gullible public." But we have our doubts that these regulations are designed to do anything other than to drive more business to the avaricious doctors. Conditions are so bad here in the District that the pharmacist violates the law by suggesting even a simple remedy for the most trivial ailment. Instead, he is supposed to urge the prospective customer to see a doctor at once.

We realize that a pharmacist is not a physician—the two belonging to separate and distinct professions. But neither is a doctor a pharmacist, despite the fact that some doctors do not hesitate to prepare and dispense medicines, thus assuring themselves of double profits. Is this for the public's protection or in the interest of the public?

It is time the public awoke to what the medicos and their A. M. A. trust have been putting over on both pharmacist and general public.

Critical Of Junior High Schools.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your correspondent who criticizes the District junior high schools for failing to teach spelling, penmanship and arithmetic has touched one of the sore spots in the District public school system. Graduates of junior high schools can neither write nor spell. I am in thorough sympathy with the modern trend toward cultural subjects in grade and junior high schools—such as music and art—but I do not believe that fundamentals should be sacrificed. If I must make a choice, I would rather my daughter learn to write and spell than to draw.

I have another quarrel with the junior high school course of study. Instruction in English grammar in the school with which I am most familiar is wholly inadequate. Protests that students are not being given the proper foundation in English grammar in the seventh grade to make it possible to begin Latin in the eighth grade, are met by the principal with the airy assurance that English grammar is very much easier for the student after he has studied Latin grammar. Very possibly. But conversely, Latin grammar is easier after the student has had English grammar and I, for one, prefer to learn grammatical construction first in my native tongue rather than in another language. Having taught Latin for many years, I feel that I am qualified to hold an opinion on the subject. Either more intensive work should be done in English grammar during the seventh grade or the beginning of Latin should be deferred until the ninth grade.

Parents and taxpayers should insist that our junior high schools come down to earth and teach spelling, grammar, writing and arithmetic and, if necessary, leave Latin and algebra to the senior high schools.

ANOTHER PARENT.
Washington, Aug. 9.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am not surprised to read in your columns of August 9 that "colleges, business schools and employers complain that graduates of the District schools are quite deficient in spelling, arithmetic and penmanship."

Your correspondent is quite correct in laying the blame at the door of the junior high schools. I have three children in junior and senior high schools. All of their schooling has been in District schools. They have received no instruction or drill in penmanship since the third or fourth grade. The execrable penmanship of the two boys is a serious handicap to them in all their school work. When I suggested a course in penmanship instead of "print shop" last year, I was told that "print shop" was required for eighth-grade boys and that there were no classes in penmanship, anyway. I wonder which would be of greater value to that boy in high school, in college and later, in his chosen profession—the ability to write legibly or the ability to "set type." How many students could more profitably use a course in penmanship or in typewriting than in printing? Why should "print shop" be a required subject in junior high school to the exclusion of more useful subjects?

Junior high schools have been a part of the District school system for only a few years. Curricula, methods, supervision and administration have been in the nature of an experiment. It seems to me that the time has come for a very thorough study, discussion and revision of at least the curricula and administration of the junior high school. I recognize the great difficulties under which the District schools function, but the substitution of a very necessary course in penmanship for a wholly unnecessary one in "print shop" does not require the approval of the Budget Bureau. Other vital changes in the junior high school system can be made without a Congressional appropriation and with great advantage to the student and to the community.

"Northern" Europe.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What countries are in northern Europe? We inquire because at a nearby beach, beside the two great signs at the entrance reading "Gentiles only" there is another which states that people who are of races not Gentile and not northern European cannot enter the grounds.

Now the southernmost European point is approximately at 38 degrees north latitude, the northernmost point of Europe is at approximately 72 degrees north latitude, which by a minor calculation results in a European median at approximately 55 degrees north latitude.

Countries of northern Europe would be Estonia, Finland, Iceland, Latvia, Lithuania (in part), northern Russia, Scandinavia and Scotland. How, then, do the several police officers at the beach in question select bathers? Do they know how to tell a native of northern Russia from a German, an Icelander from a Frenchman, a Scot from a Latvian? I understand they do not take head measurements.

How can a person descended from German, Irish or French parents be permitted to sport on the sands when he is a southern European? Would they have permitted Marconi, who was of Irish-Italian parentage, to enter the grounds? If a girl were part Icelander and part German would the southern European German part of her prevent her from dipping into the waters?

They would permit Sibelius to enter, but how about that southern Beethoven, or that other southern European, Toscanini? Would they let the Pope swim there? Or Mussolini? Or Hitler?

Any reader of The Post who can enlighten us should be given the opportunity. I wouldn't like to go out there with southern European friends and be turned back to the hot city when I was just dying to get out there and plunge and dive and cut capers and squirt water at my wife and throw sand in my neighbor's face as I jumped from water to beach and vice versa, as I have seen the northern Europeans do at this beach.

"Infernal Machine" Control.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In common with all good citizens of this District of Chaos, I am glad to observe the storm of protests against the "slaughter of the innocents" by automobilists. But I wish to call attention to the fact that remedial efforts are being applied to results rather than causes. There is little use in instructing the police officers to chase from the streets the children that have no other place to play, or even to bear down on the malefactors. The real project should be to rid our streets of the infernal machines. And so I propose a plan, fully aware that it is not likely to be adopted—it is far too sensible.

As a first step, the District should acquire our transportation system of car lines and buses and operate it for the benefit of the public that have built and continue to pay for it. The next step should be the double one of taking over commodious parking areas at several strategic points just outside the city limits, and of building subways for the most important thoroughfares, such as Pennsylvania avenue, New York (or Rhode Island) avenue, Fourteenth street, Seventh street and others in turn. Then all out-of-town drivers of passenger cars should be required to park their machines in the spaces provided. They can then proceed quickly and without being a menace to human lives and limbs on the subways.

The expense would be less than that of running their cars into the centers, for the publicly owned system could doubtless operate on nickel fares, with not more than a nominal fee for parking. Further developments would include the construction of cross-town lines to connect with the subway stations on the main lines. The city could be zoned and the residents of the outlying regions be prevented from driving farther down town.

Date Night.

MAW! Oh, Maw, where's my pink shirt with the green stripes? . . . What business had you to send it to the laundry? . . . A white shirt? Who ever heard of wearing a white shirt on a date? . . . Well things were different when pop was my age; they were still wearing buckskin shirts then . . . Now lissen, pop, I was only kidding. Sure, I know you don't look a day over 60. Ouch! Cut it out! How was I to know you wasn't that old?

"Lissen, paw, how about advancing me three bucks on my allowance? . . . Sure, I know you cut off my pittance, but you're gonna start it up again, ain't yuh? Oh, you ain't so sure of that, huh? Well I can't go on a date when I'm practically broke, can I? And I can't stand her up. . . . Why not! Lissen, paw; do you want me to be a social outcast? Do you want people to point their fingers and say, "He stood a skirt up?" Do you want me to join the Hermits' Local No. 349, or sumpin'? O K, if you feel that way, I'll take two-fifty . . . Now, pop! When a man gets to be your age he's got to watch his blood pressure.

Boy! Was I lucky to get out of that one! For a minute I thought I'd have to use my own dough. If my luck holds out I might be able to get that chug-buggy started without the crank. Wait, I'm going to get out and look at the license plate and see if this is my car . . . Wonder if I can get out in front of that car? . . . Maybe I better wait, that is a cop's car . . . Sure, officer, I got lights. Don't you see them on front? . . . Your want me to turn them on? Whyinheck didn't you say so? . . .

I'll have to creep along so I can get there late enough. No use lettin' her think I'm anxious. Gosh! She lives in a classy lookin' dump. It didn't look this good in the daytime. Oh well, "Cold feet never won fair lady" . . . Gee, here comes her old man. He sure is big!

Hiyuh, Mr. Smith, is Sugar—er—is Louise ready? Yeh, sure, I'll wait . . . Huh? Roosevelt? Oh, he's a good enough guy; he means right . . . Oh, sure, I'm a Republican . . . Huh? I'm an American League fan . . . Well the National is the oldest one.

Hiyuh, Louise—ready? Lesgo.

Whereyuhwanago, the Gamma Kaps' hop? . . . Oh, you think they're a buncha bums? Well, so do I in a way . . . You want to go to the Kappa Gam's hop? (Dammit that's a two-buck hop.) Okey, hang on, here we go.

Can I help it, if the thing rattles? Anyway my personality should overshadow any rattle . . . Well, suppose Bob does have an eight? He needs one with that face.

See I told you I'd get you here without having an accident . . . What do yuh mean, "It wasn't my fault"? Can I help it if I drive fast? Before I was born my mother was scared by a race horse. I wonder if I can get in for half price? I ain't over 6 feet.

Gah, what a corney orchestra! The stuff those babies play is prehistoric. That leader couldn't swing it if he had a rope around his neck, I wish . . . Say, who can't lolly, I'm doin' betterin' you right now.

Huh, fine date, them bums which came stag won't let me get near her. Parasites! Leeches!

Hello, Sugar. Remember me? I'm the guy that brought you here and the next little guy which tries to cut me I'll part his teeth.

Lissen, bum, no cuttin. Why don't you pretend to be a gentleman? Oh, you want to go outside, huh? O K, but just remember that I'm just about twice as tough as you. He ain't so little at that, is he. I don't need to worry, though, they'll stop it before anybody can get hurt.

Leggo my arms, you two bums! One is enough to hold me, somebody else better hold that other mug . . . Sure, I'll go peaceful, I ain't pugnacious by nature. Come on, Sugar. We'll go to Mike's Sloppy Skillet for a smack of something to drink. I hope my credit is good there.

Why don't that bum stay on his own side of the road? . . . Whatcha mean maybe if I used my hands I'd be able to drive better? If I wasn't such a gentleman I'd run out of gas.

Hiyuh, Mike. Is my cuff clean here? . . . Oh! . . . Let's go for a ride, Sugar . . . Huh? Why not? It's only 2 o'clock . . . I may as well take her home, her old man played football in his young days and he ain't one of the seven dwarfs, neither . . . Sure, honey, we'll go home. You going to school tomorrow? I ain't. I won't be able to get up and anyway we're going to have an algebra test. So I'm going to a show.

Here we are, Sugar . . . Are you doin' anything next Friday? . . . Oh, that bum with the eight? Well how about Saturday? . . . Okey, I'll be around then . . . Yeah, maybe you better go in. I think that's your old man at the window.

Boy! Wotta gal. I hope I can beat that bum with the eight . . . Hiyuh, pop. What keeps you up so late? . . . Why, guvinor, you flatter me. It's only half past two. Sure I'm going to school tomorrow. Don't I always go to school? . . . Oh, you ain't so sure of that. A fine thing to say to your own son.

Hah, hum . . . Swell date. If I can only get ahead of that bum with the . . . Ha, hum . . .

Fair Enough

The Doctor's Share.

THE problem of medical and surgical treatment for the masses is cluttered with undeserved pity for people who have convinced themselves that they can't pay the doctor for easing their pains or saving their lives, but could do so if they tried. The doctors of this country give away more free goods off their shelves than the members of any other profession, including the actors and musicians, who come next. They have their gyps and rotters, their publicity-crazy hams and ignoramuses, but they do more good for suffering humanity and in critical moments than the members of any other calling.

Of course, it will be argued that they should do this because they are in a position to. That is their job. But the fact is, nevertheless, that they do give this service, and it is a further fact that society doesn't appreciate the good they do. People overemphasize their mistakes of judgment or negligence, forgetting that a doctor's mistake is more likely to have fatal or, anyway, dreadful consequences than a mistake by a plumber, a grocer or a journalist. If the work of the plumber springs a leak, if the grocer sends Snookies instead of Snackies, or if the reporter names W. C. Smith as corespondent in the divorce story when it should have been W. G. Smith, that means very little paint off anyone's fenders. But let a doctor make a comparable mistake and there is all hell to pay, on top of the fact that maybe he stood to be swindled out of his pay—or most of it, anyway—even if he had done a bang-up job.

THERE ARE many phases of the question, but I mean to stick to this one for today's lesson. I am thinking of those who think that $200 is an outrageous price to pay for the removal of an appendix which has developed the menacing nature of a bomb in the patient's inwards. The surgeon gets the victim into a hospital as quickly as possible, gives him a jab of something to relax him and in a very short time is delving around in his giblets without 50 cents on the line to pay for laundering his smock.

So the patient gets well, and when the bad news comes he forgets that feeling as of a litter of porcupines frisking about in his abdomen, forgets how scared he was and his alarm for the security of his dependent family, and calls the doctor a burglar. Why, he makes only $25 a week, and so, instead of paying the doctor a dollar a week, as he would pay the installment man for the radio or sewing machine, his policy is to skip it entirely. He also forgets that if the surgeon hadn't done his stuff promptly and well, specialized stuff that nobody but a surgeon could have done, his family would be on the town right now.

IF A patient can pay small amounts to a co-operative over a spell of years for treatment which he may need in the future, he can just as well pay a doctor a stated amount each week over a long term for treatment which he has already received. But in too many cases he just won't and the doctor is accused of bearing down on a man who can't afford to pay for the saving of his life but can manage somehow to come up with the price of many nonessentials.

Many doctors nowadays serve patients in the public clinics who are able to pay reasonable professional rates for their treatment. In this way the doctor is compelled to rob his own family of the just rewards of his work so that other men's families may deadhead it. Patients lie about their income and pretend to be in tatters who ought to be told to decide which they value more, their money or their lives. And the ethics of the profession and sentimental sympathy for the invalid are such that if the patient were asked to stand for a frisk to prove his inability to pay, that would be a callous outrage and the doctor would be an extortioner.

BUT THERE is no great wrong in that, considering how minutely the people's affairs are searched by the income tax men. We hear that it is degrading to the applicant to send investigators nosing into their family earnings, if any, when the problem is one of relief or medical treatment, but that is something that all those who have taxable incomes must submit to at any time the Government feels inquisitive.

There is more or less larceny in all the human race, and this problem of medicine for the masses would be less difficult if those who can pay were prevented from appealing to public sympathy at the doctor's expense by mingling with the truly destitute.

U. S., Britain Agree to Share Control of Two Pacific Atolls

Nations To Maintain Equal Aviation Facilities On Canton And Enderbury Islands; Ownership Issue Waits.

By the United Press.

A five months' diplomatic squabble between the United States and Great Britain over ownership of strategically important Canton and Enderbury Islands, in the south Pacific, was ended yesterday when the two countries announced a working agreement under which they will maintain equal aviation facilities on both atolls.

The understanding, which will be put into writing later, was announced simultaneously here and in London, but it does not settle title, which is claimed by both governments.

Under terms of the accord the two powers will set up an administrative system to grant "equal facilities" for aviation and communication developments, a joint communique said.

To Plan Regime.

"The government of the United States and of the United Kingdom have agreed to set up a regime for the use in common of the islands of Canton and Enderbury, in the Phoenix group, and for the employment of these islands for purposes connected with international aviation and communication, with equal facilities for each party," the communique said. "The details of the regime will be determined in notes to be exchanged between the two governments."

Although the islands are little more than coral reefs, military strategists consider them of vital importance in Pacific defense plans because they are logical sites for refueling stations, storage plants, communication centers, and aviation bases. Moreover, they lie along the line of a projected air route from Hawaii to New Zealand, which would link with service to China.

Diplomatic sources denied that the agreement implies a military or political alliance between Great Britain and the United States in the Pacific. The understanding came after long conversations between the two governments arising from an executive order by President Roosevelt March 3 claiming title for the United States.

Mr. Roosevelt directed the Department of Interior to take over administration of the islands. A short time later a small band of American settlers landed on Canton to dispute the claim of British citizens already there. There are no inhabitants on Enderbury.

Discovered by Whalers.

In working out the agreement both governments recognized the importance of extending and developing their aviation "life lines" into the Pacific and indicated that they feel there is plenty of room for both.

State Department officials said that signing of a formal agreement probably will require considerable time because of a projected exchange of notes. The ownership question will be left in abeyance meantime.

The islands, apparently negligible in economic value, have been in dispute for almost 100 years. Records indicate that they were discovered by American whalers although citizens of Great Britain, France and other nations have occupied them at various times.

Growing importance of transpacific aviation has focused recent attention on them. Some American authorities believe the United States should have a clear title because it may be forced to withdraw its defense line to Hawaii in connection with Philippine Island independence in 1946.

The British, however, believe they are vital in linking their Pacific possessions, including Australia, New Zealand, and their huge new naval base at Singapore, to maintain their Far Eastern defenses.

'39 Deficit Nears 500 Million While Revenues Decline

Federal Government expenditures passed the $1,000,000,000 mark on August 8, sending the deficit for the first six weeks of the 1939 fiscal year to $439,000,000, while Treasury revenue continued to decline. A year ago, August 8, the deficit totaled $284,000,000.

Expenditures for the recovery-relief program are running at the rate of more than $70,000,000 for the first eight days of August, indicating that if the recovery program is accelerated expenditures in August will exceed $280,000,000. In August 1937, more than $220,000,000 was expended for recovery and relief.

Although revenues to date have shown an improvement over July, they continue to fall below those for 1938 on a month to month basis and for the cumulative period beginning with July 1, the start of the new fiscal year. For the first eight days of August Treasury receipts totaled $276,322,921, against $212,267,765 in the same period last year. For the period beginning July 1 to August 8, receipts aggregated $587,415,341, against $621,428,401 in the same 1938 period.

Labor Friendship New Deal Trick, Hamilton Asserts

New Haven, Conn., Aug. 10 (AP).—Chairman John Hamilton of the Republican National Committee asserted today that the Roosevelt Administration is proclaiming a unique friendliness for labor simply to cover up a grave unemployment situation.

The Roosevelt Administration has raised a false issue "to divert attention from its failure to restore some 12,000,000 or more unemployed persons in this country to jobs in private industry," Hamilton said in a prepared address.

Hamilton said records of the last 80 years demonstrated "that the Republican Party throughout its entire history consistently has been friendly to labor."

He called attention to antitrust laws, prison-gods act, the anti-injunction act, high tariffs, restricted immigration, opposition to child labor, wage-and-hour measures and old-age pension acts.

Peace To The Vigilant.

Paris, Aug. 10.

A PROMINENT American who was about to return home went to see an American diplomat the other day and said that he would like to make a statement to the ship's news reporters explaining that there would be no war, and that all this talk of war was so much hysteria and sensationalism. Would not the diplomat help him to write his statement? The diplomat replied that he would not help him, that it was no use pretending that Europe was not threatened with a great war, that he did not see any point in misleading the American people about the reality of the danger, and that if, as he still hoped, war could be averted, it would be for no other reason than that all the civilized peoples and all the governments were fully aware of the fact that they were on the edge of a catastrophe.

The diplomat's reply to his well-meaning visitor goes to the heart of the situation, and to understand fully what he meant is far more useful than to be minutely informed about the details of the Sudeten problem or of the Spanish nonintervention committee or of the rights and wrongs of the treaty between Czarist Russia and ancient China fixing the frontiers of Manchuria. The fact one needs to realize is that enough incidents have happened on the Russo-Japanese border, in Spain and in the Mediterranean, in Austria and on the Czech border to have touched off any number of wars, and that, nevertheless, a first-class war among the great powers has thus far been avoided. The problem is to know why, in spite of pretexts, provocations, actual battles, bombings, subversive intrigue and terrorism without a parallel in modern history, the great powers are still at peace. For, judged by all previous experience, the remarkable thing is that the main peace of the world is still being preserved.

THE COMMONEST explanation is that no government is prepared to risk the consequences of a great war. No doubt the explanation is within limits true, but the explanation must be carefully qualified or it can be very misleading. It would be very misleading if one supposed that all the great powers are unwilling to face war because they dread the slaughter of so many millions of human beings and the destruction of cities and of wealth. We are not escaping war because of such sentiments. The impulse to make war is inhibited not by a civilized pacifism, but by the realization that in a great war of aggression victory is almost certainly impossible, and that the price of a defeat is the destruction of the men who start such a war.

Remove from their calculations the strong possibility that the war would be general, that it would be long and that in the end the greater resources of the free nations would decide the issue, and we should see no further hesitation about carrying through the great projects of imperial conquest. Where there is no resistance, as in Austria, the procedure is absolutely ruthless. The only limits upon aggression are those which are imposed by the decision of the victims to resist.

WE HAVE localized fighting in several regions on the smaller issues because there the will to resist is not very great. We still have peace among the great powers because there the will to resist is so formidable. The question is how long this highly precarious balance can be preserved. For day and night men are at work trying to upset this balance in their own favor, and day and night men are at work trying to right the balance when it is about to be upset. This is the meaning of the race of armaments, and this is the meaning of the enormously complicated diplomatic maneuvering for the weakening of opposing alliances and the conclusion of friendly alliances.

The only certain prediction one can make is that Europe cannot teeter indefinitely in this fashion on the verge of war. Whether it be six weeks or six months or two years hence, the time must come when this perpetual crisis is resolved. It may be resolved by the realization that the pacific nations are so strong that further aggression is not feasible. It may be resolved by the belief that the pacific nations are weak and that the great aggression, the bid for the mastery of Europe, is a good gamble. It may be resolved by any one of the many accidents that personal autocrats are liable to. It may be resolved by a radical change of regime induced by an overwhelming demonstration that external aggression is no longer profitable, or it may be resolved by lunatics or conspirators who deliberately throw a flaming torch into the powder magazine.

• • • •

NO ONE knows, and no one can know what is in store for this infinitely dangerous Europe. But one can know that things cannot go on forever as they are now, or even for long, in such a state of acute crisis, and in all the uncertainties one can be certain of this—that it is no good to shut one's eyes, and that the price of peace today is to preserve an extreme vigilance, and to make ready for the worst as the best hope of preventing the worst from happening.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

August Meditation.

Here I sit upon a raft
With little on me, fore and aft;
No longer on the job I stew—
No boss now tells me what to do.

Let wars in Europe come or go—
If we're at war I wouldn't know;
Let planets creak and nations crack,
I only want a well-tanned back!

Let China, Russia and Japan
Put one another on the pan
With howls quite weird and carnage great—
I'm working on a moonlight date!

Let Hitler rant and Goebbels rave,
Let tyrants all look fierce and grave,
Let nations topple, yes, and fall—
That tall blonde isn't bad at all!

Oh, what care I if Italy
Defies the world (including me)?
She may scare lots of folks, but I Am happy, for the tide is high!

The Spaniards, I assume, are still Quite busy with the will to kill;
The crisis there is most acute—
Say, there's a daring bathing suit!

There's talk of graft and talk of bribes,
And of the warring Arab tribes;
The world is sick and full of woe—
And am I worried just now? . . No!

The country's going on the rocks—
We're having many earthquake shocks—
No hope's ahead, I hear, for man,
But I don't care . . . I've got a tan!

The use of money in campaigns,
Instead of slowing up, now gains;
The scandals bring a blush of shame—
Say, there's a gorgeous little dame!

The U. S. faces bankruptcy—
Inflation stares at you and me,
And back at it a stare I'd hurl
Except I'm staring at a girl!

All prospects, so I hear, are black,
And industry is pretty slack,
I should be worried, but I'm not—
I'll tell you why: It's too darned hot.

Naming the Babies.

Dear Hi: With regard to a library department to aid parents in selecting names for babies, I notice your mentioning such names as Nevertia, Homomous, Florayne, Glamoreen and Flimpty.

It may not be amiss to state that this and similar nomenclature has undergone so much corruptive alteration in the course of time that one can only hazard an approximate estimate of its meaning, though Homomous, Florayne and Glamoreen are suggestive of some kind of a label. In the medieval age after the conquest, this type of appellation was considered a nickname.

At that time, a genuine doctrine existed that there was an essential connection between the nature of the thing or person and the name. Obviously, the people had no sovereignty over words and names, for the innocent bearers of them were not consulted. Some of these medieval nicknames were Peaceable, Unsteady and others.

Any man whose curiosity has not been blunted is naturally interested in understanding what the image of these names tell. The curiosities, indeed, of baptismal names might easily fill a volume. In the United States census of 1870 a record was obtained of the father of a family who had named his five children Imprimus, Finis, Appendix, Addendum and Erratum. During political excitement sisters were baptized Anti-Nebraska, Free Kansas and Texana.

Next Phase Of 'Purge'

By Mark Sullivan

Score So Far: 0-4.

THE attempt to "purge" Democratic Senators who voted against President Roosevelt's court reform proposal has progressed to a point where it is appropriate to consider the next phase of it. It has a next phase and we can be confident President Roosevelt must have given consideration to it.

The purge has to do with 9 Democratic Senators, the particular 9 who come up for renomination this year—24 other Democratic Senators opposed Mr. Roosevelt's court proposal, but these do not come up for renomination until 1940 or 1942.

Of the 9, action has been taken on 4. The score is: purged, 0; not purged, 4.

In Iowa, Senator Gillette won renomination in spite of conspicuous public attempt to defeat him by persons so close to President Roosevelt that their action must have had Mr. Roosevelt's approval. In Indiana, Senator Van Nuys has been renominated, in spite of forthright sentence of excommunication passed upon him by New Deal leaders in the State. In Colorado, the Democratic State convention has indorsed Senator Adams in a formal action which guarantees that he will be the only candidate in the Democratic primary on September 13. In Missouri, Senator Bennett Champ Clark has been renominated overwhelmingly.

• • • •

Smith, South Carolina, primary August 30.

George, Georgia, primary September 6.

McCarran, Nevada, primary September 6.

Tydings, Maryland, primary September 12.

Lonergan, Connecticut, in State convention September 13.

Suppose any one of these is successfully purged. What happens? For some light on that, consider what has already happened in the case of Senator Van Nuys of Indiana. After the New Deal Democratic leaders in the State had announced sentence of excommunication against him, after it was taken for granted the sentence would be carried out, because in Indiana senatorial nominations are made by State conventions in which leaders can make their will effective—in that condition Senator Van Nuys made a public declaration. He said that he would run as a third candidate on a ticket to be labeled "Independent Democrat." He announced further that ten Democratic Senators from various States who had stood with him in opposition to the President's court proposal, would come into Indiana and campaign for him and his independent Democratic ticket. It was after this announcement, and because of this announcement, that sentence of excommunication against Mr. Van Nuys was withdrawn. It was this threat by Senator Van Nuys that saved him from the castor oil.

THE DEMOCRATIC leaders, in Indiana and at Washington, do not want any independent Democratic movement to get under way. The very notion makes them jittery. Especially do they not want an independent Democratic movement in which, as Senator Van Nuys threatened, and had good grounds for threatening, at least ten Democratic Senators would give support. That would be more than an independent Democratic movement in one State—it would practically be an independent Democratic movement on a national scale.

Of the five remaining potential victims of the purge, none has duplicated Senator Van Nuys' threat. It may be they would not feel as justified in making this threat as Senator Van Nuys did. For in Mr. Van Nuys' case the nomination was to be made by State convention. A candidate might feel justified in threatening to bolt after a State convention—yet not justified in threatening to bolt the outcome of a primary.

Nevertheless, even if candidates do not make the threat, nor entertain the thought of threat in their minds, the threat exists in the nature of things No one can be sure what might happen if, after a Senator has been successfully purged for following his conscience on such a matter as the President's court proposal, there should thereafter arise a demand by voters that he run on an independent Democratic ticket.

• • • •

THERE IS another possible future phase. This phase could not arise in such States as Georgia and South Carolina, where there is practically no Republican Party. But it could arise in the other three cases: In Maryland, Nevada and Connecticut. Suppose one or more of these three Senators is successfully purged by the Democrats. Suppose at the same time the Republicans have the sense to nominate a good candidate for Senator. In such case, without a doubt, large numbers of Democratic voters would express their resentment against the purge by voting for the Republican candidate in November.

Right beneath the surface is the explosive possibility of either an independent Democratic ticket or a large migration of Democrats to the Republican Party, which, if it got under way this year, would extend into 1940.

Crumbling Triangle

By Barnet Nover

Japan's Fair Weather Friends.

ON Monday the Japanese Ambassador to Germany paid a call on Joachim von Ribbentrop, foreign minister of the Third Reich and author of the mysterious German - Japanese agreement of November 25, 1936.

The conversation between the two men, the German foreign office insists, was of a wholly routine character. But this few observers believe. On the contrary, there is a strong suspicion that Japan, facing the possibility of a war with Russia at a moment when her energies are already absorbed in a large-scale struggle with China, took this opportunity to sound out the Third Reich as to what aid the latter is prepared to give Japan should hostilities occur in northeastern Asia.

Ribbentrop's answer was, reports agree, not very comforting to Tokyo. Japan has and will continue to have German "sympathy," but that is about all. If Japan fights Russia she will have to go it alone. At the moment Germany has other than Russian fish to fry. And so has Italy, the third partner of the famous Berlin - Rome - Tokyo triangle that came into being on November 9, 1937.

OF COURSE it would be very useful to Germany if Japan could keep the Soviet Union so engaged that Moscow would have neither the inclination nor the energy to play any kind of a role in European affairs during the next critical months.

Certainly the defeat of Japan either on the field of battle or in the diplomatic sphere would not be to Germany's liking. That would mean a heightening of Moscow's prestige and, in consequence, a greater determination by Czechoslovakia and France to keep green their alliance with the Soviet Union which Hitler has been trying to break.

For these and related reasons Japan has a case in making a bid for German assistance. But, unfortunately, for the island empire, she is in no position to give any quid pro quo for such aid as the Third Reich might render.

THE FACT is that from Germany's point of view Japan has been fighting the wrong war. When the German-Japanese agreement was made 21 months ago the presumption was that while ostensibly an alliance against the Comintern it was actually an alliance against the Comintern's host—Russia.

But when Japan's armies were given their marching orders it was not against Russia but against China that they moved. And with China Germany's relations had been both friendly and profitable. Indeed China was one of the few free markets left to the Third Reich, that is, a market where Germany could sell her goods and get badly needed foreign currency in exchange.

However the general presumption was that the Sino-Japanese war would not last long. Germany saw nothing disloyal, therefore, in giving Japan a friendly pat on the back while, at the same time, selling arms to China. In fact, for the last six months of 1927 more than 60 per cent of all the war supplies which China received came from the Third Reich. And, in addition, Chiang Kai-shek was vouchsafed the continued advice of German military experts.

• • • •

SOME TIME ago this anomalous situation came to an end. The German military experts on Chiang Kai-shek's staff were recalled by Hitler and German sales of arms to China were cut off. At the same time Mussolini showed his good will to Japan by sending to the island empire and to Manchukuo a trade mission headed by Marquis Giacomo Paulucci.

To the Japanese these were welcome indications that the Berlin - Rome - Tokyo triangle was working in apple-pie order. Actually Germany's and Italy's demonstrations of amity were mere gestures. Neither power is in a position to go beyond expressions of sympathy for Japan.

Italy is occupied in Spain where the war which, according to Mussolini's earlier calculations should have come to an end months ago is still going on and, surprisingly enough, with the government forces on the offensive. Germany is absorbed by the Czechoslovak problem. An attack on Russia from the west is utterly out of the question at this time.

• • • •

THUS CURRENT developments in the Far East are demonstrating what was suspected at the beginning, namely, that the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo triangle was largely bluff, a combination effective only so long as the fears that it aroused inhibited action by other nations in support of the status quo. Now that it is challenged it proves to be a club made of papier mache.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

The United States Travel Bureau (one of Uncle Sam's youngest and a tiny branch of Government aimed at educating Americans and the people of other nations to the tremendous variety and beauty of tourist attractions under the U. S. flag, is soon to open a field office in San Francisco.

NELSON A. LOOMIS.

The young bureau functions under the National Park Service of the Interior Department, and at the moment has a general office in Washington and a field office at 45 Broadway, New York City. Serving at the New York office is former Ambassador to Germany James W. Gerard.

The program of the bureau is large. A bill was introduced during the last Congress to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to establish a United States Travel Board composed of public and private officials. The board would assist the Interior Department in formulating and executing national programs to increase travel in the United States.

The bill went through the Senate under no difficulties, but was passed over by the House in the last-minute rush of adjournment. Commenting on the set-up, Secretary Ickes said yesterday:

"In order that the activities of the bureau may be continued, I have requested the director of the National Park Service to designate Nelson A. Loomis to represent that service in making contacts with and seeking the advice and co-operation of the various travel and State officials who desire to co-operate with this department in the execution of a travel promotion program. Loomis will work under the supervision of the director of the National Park Service."

• • • •

It was Loomis who recently conceived the idea of attracting attention to the tourist possibilities among the American territories in the Caribbean. He considered that the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico had more than a little of natural scenery and climate; that Americans, with Yankee dollars in their pockets, were swarming to sundry and adjacent islands, leaving our own ground forgotten to all practical tourist possibilities.

And he considered another and timely aspect: America is talking and practicing a "Good Neighbor" policy. Good neighbors, Loomis considered, should visit one another, particularly when the neighbors are part of one Nation. The exchange of hospitality, on the one hand, and a dollar for a dollar's worth of good time, on the other hand, might make neighbors a trifle more cohesive.

The upshot was the recent Government-sponsored cruise to Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. They hauled out of pier a vessel that for some time had been out of service. The vessel was loaded down with paying passengers. At San Juan, on a tourist-forgotten island, the Puerto Ricans (who are insulted if you call them other than Americans) flocked to the pier with a brass band. Their hospitality was big as a tropical sky, and their business acumen shown like their sun.

Everybody parted happier for the occasion. The islanders had met their continental neighbors socially and in business transaction to find that continental Americans had no horns and cloven hoofs. The continental Americans discovered the likableness of their island neighbors. There was good feeling all around.

To make Americans and the people of other nations conscious of American attractions is to be the bureau's chief objective. Every important country of the world is puffing and plugging its spas, mountains and valleys, its seashores and points of historical interest. As a result the spas, mountains and valleys, seashores and points of historical interest in all the foreign countries are booming enough.

Now, and late enough, Uncle Sam finds the purpose to let the world know the fine things Nature has left between his borderlines. You might watch that young bureau, and the travel figures after it gets in full swing.

Roy M. North, Deputy Third Assistant Postmaster General, is back after a vacation in Georgia and some fishing in Arkansas . . . Social Security Board employes in Washington and Baltimore hold a joint outing Saturday, August 20, at Baur's Beach, Bay Ridge, Md. . . . Local 10 (SSB), U. F. W. A., holds an open meeting at 4 o'clock this afternoon in the north Interior Building auditorium. "The River" will be shown, and the public is invited. The regular union meeting will be held after the movie . . .

Like the railroad stations in the small towns, the fish cultural stations will soon be of a standard color. The color will be white with green trim, the trim to be what is commercially known as myrtle green. So passeth individuality from what may have been its last stand . . .

Brookland Group Urges Grape as Allen Successor

Members of the Brookland-Woodridge Business Men's Association last night adopted a resolution asking that Theodore S. Grape, president, Federation of Business Men's Associations, be made District Commissioner to succeed George A. Allen.

In calling upon President Roosevelt to appoint Grape, the business men pointed out that he had been a resident here since 1920, and that Grape is "liberal in his views and prudent in his economy."

The resolution said: "This organization joins with the many others in asking this boon in the definite belief that the President of the United States is as willing and anxious that the District of Columbia have a real business administration as are the business men upon whom the real burden of the city's progress falls."

District Area Drys Elect New Heads

Browningsville, Md., Aug. 10 (AP).—C. H. McElfresh, of Monrovia, Md., was elected grand chief templar at the sixty-second annual session of the grand lodge of Maryland, Virginia and District of Columbia International Order of Good Templars.

The organization, sworn to alcoholic abstinence and to fight the liquor traffic, initiated eighteen new candidates at a meeting attended by 55 delegates. Other officers elected are:

Grand councilor J. Raymond Schmidt, Washington; grand vice templar, Porter C. Fox, Washington; grand superintendent of legislative work, Dr. George W. Crabbe, Baltimore; grand superintendent of juvenile work, Mrs. Evelyn McElfresh, Monrovia; grand secretary, Raymond E. Hardy, Baltimore; grand assistant secretary, Mrs. Lillian Rodenhi, Baltimore; grand treasurer, George T. Rodenhi, Baltimore.

Grand chaplain, Rev. C. L. Dawson, Mount Airy; grand marshal, Roy Hardy, Mount Airy; deputy international templar, J. Raymond Schmidt, Washington.

A Vibrant Personality Reaches America in a Film Container!

Gracie Fields Proves Dynamic Star in 'We're Going to Be Rich;' 'Going Native' Cast Chosen; Another New Theater; Film Fights; Notes of Theater.

GRACIE FIELDS should have been snapped up by the Hollywood moguls long ago.

Miss Fields, a slender blonde of vibrant personality, is conspicuously gifted both as a singer and as an actress, whose talents embrace a wide range of expression. She seems to be as competent a "legitimate" star as she is superlative comedienne. Her style and methods are not those of any contemporary American film player—at least in her first film released under American auspices—but revert, rather, to the music hall era that provides the background of the story in which she appears.

BELL.

This is "We're Going to Be Rich," the Twentieth Century-Fox release of a production made at the Denham studios, in England, under the direction of Monty Banks, previewed yesterday afternoon and coming into Loew's Columbia Theater tomorrow. "We're Going to Be Rich" is a nostalgic item that dates back to Australia and South Africa in the 1880s and has nothing of modern "swing" about it. It does, however, possess a quality of genuineness and a clever blending of drama, comedy and melodrama that leave an indelible impression. More or less in the nature of what would be termed a "frontier picture" on this side, "We're Going to Be Rich" has a pretty sound claim to intelligent attention. But that—we hope—all will come out in Saturday morning's review. What we are primarily interested in now is Gracie Fields, whose honors in her own country have been many and whose income is said to be one of the economic wonders of the world.

In her present vehicle, Miss Fields sings everything from simple ballads to tricky Lancashire songs in a manner that somehow will suggest to the old-timers of the theater such earlier male artists as Albert Chevalier and Harry Lauder. Everything she does is kept rigidly within the requirements of the picture's dated period. Her comedy is crisp and pungent. There is constantly projected to the audience an indefinable quality of extraordinary personality and an inexhaustible capacity for entertainment. One seems never to get tired of Miss Fields.

It is one of the inexplicable happenings of "film business" that "We're Going to Be Rich" should have been "held on the shelf" for six weeks after its official release date and then booked into a theater of the Columbia's limited capacity. It is a safe guess that a great many people will view it enthusiastically when it opens there tomorrow.

Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Dougherty (Paramount Pictures) are being showered with congratulations upon the birth of a son Tuesday evening at Columbia Hospital. Vincent, jr., weighs 7 pounds 5 ounces, and both he and his mother, Mildred, fared well and are flourishing. But it was daddy who proved himself the member of the family who was made of iron. In anticipation of the event, Vince had supplied himself with a pocketful of change, for telephone calls, and a carton of cigarets, for his nerves. When he was advised that he had become the father of a son, all the cigarets were gone, so, with magnificent composure, he dashed into a telephone booth, deposited the price of a long distance call to New York and asked for two packages of "Luckies." Then he sprinted to the cigaret vending-machine, put in a dime and a nickel and shouted, "Long distance, New York." The doctors are afraid he will live.

So Gene Ford, in charge of production, hurried back from New York and announced a partial list of the principals to be seen in the sixth annual "Going Native" revue, to be presented at Loew's Capitol Theater the week of Friday, August 19.

As already known, the master of ceremonies will be Lee Everett, popular radio broadcaster. Other selections to date include Milbourne Christopher, not unknown to readers of this journal, whom Mr. Ford deems almost the equal of Cardini as a colorful conjurer; Sylvia Kaplowitz and her piano accordion octet, comprised of Toni Paas, Lee Narans, Gertrude Betts, Charlotte Bickford, Frances Rich, Dorothy Talbott, Evelyn Lawry and Lucy Hopkins, with herself as leader; John High Smith and his "Five Shades of Rhythm;" Ellis "Tiny" Meeker, who practices law by day and plays the bass viol with Steve LeSieur's Powhatan Roof Orchestra by night; the Lyons Twins, feminine tap-dancing saxophonists; Earline King, soprano, and Wilbur Hall, Navy Department rope-twirling "cowboy."

A splendid list—although this column may be slightly prejudiced because it embraces three out of four of our nominations as "sure-fire hits," based only on the results of the first night's auditions. The three are Sylvia Kaplowitz, John High Smith and the Lyons Twins.

News of the untimely passing of Frank Schmid came as a shock to his many friends in show business in the National Capital. Frank was one of the most courteous and most genial box-office men who ever doled out tickets through the wickets of B. F. Keith's, Poli's and the National theaters. He was the living exemplification of the old saw that "the voice with the smile wins." I never heard of a patron complaint against Frank and mourn him as an old and gracious friend—along with hosts of others aware of his unfailing kindliness and good nature.

Residents of the central Northeast area of Washington will be presented with the first new theater to be erected in their neighborhood in the past 25 years when the Atlas, de luxe residential house, throws open its doors to the public in the 1300 block of H street northeast, late this month.

Designed by John J. Zink, noted Baltimore theater architect, whose first playhouse in the Capital was the Rialto, but who has erected several others here since, the Atlas is of the one-floor type and will have a seating capacity of 1,000. The most advanced principles of theater planning and the latest developments in mechanical equipment have been incorporated in the new structure. Features usually found only in large, downtown, first-run houses, it is said, have boosted the cost of the Atlas considerably above that of the average neighborhood theater. The projection booth equipment, for example, will be of a type that is only now being announced by the trade for next season, thus putting the Atlas a year ahead.

More of this as time goes on.

It was remarked here yesterday that with "Rich Man, Poor Girl," at the Capitol, and "We're Going to Be Rich," at the Columbia, the Loew people were going in for the "rich" motif in a big way next week. That goes for the fight racket, too. Fisticuffing constitutes the foundation of "The Crowd Roars," at the Palace, and in the Gracie Fields piece, at the Columbia, Victor McLaglen and Don McCorkindale put on a ring battle under the London prize ring rules of the '80s that will bring back visions of John L. Sullivan and his rivals before the day of Jim Corbett. Old-time ringworms will want to see both, just to find out how the boxfighting game has come along of late—or gone back, however you feel about it.

Cagney Disowns Fake 'Brothers'

Another "brother" of James Cagney showed up last week to add his name to the "biggest" family in the country.

His first name, as usual, was William. This time his last name was McClusky. He claimed Jimmy is really a McClusky and was born in Chicago. William was stocky and had red hair.

"They always look like me," said Cagney on the "Angels With Dirty Faces" set. "I have dozens of 'brothers.' Usually they try to borrow money from people."

Cagney has three real brothers, William, his agent, Harry and Edward, New York physicians, and one sister, Jeanne. But all his make-believe relatives insist they're his brother Bill.

Phoney Williams have run up charge accounts against Jimmy. They have borrowed money on his name and eaten on his credit in restaurants. One of them wired he was desperately ill in Chicago and needed $500. He received $100 before Mrs. Cagney found out he was a fake.

Freddie to Send Chum to College

One of Hollywood's finest palships, between Freddie Bartholomew and Ray Sperry, his stand-in, will reach a climax a couple of years hence when Freddie will put Ray through college, paying all his expenses.

"It is Freddie's idea," said Myllicent Bartholomew, Freddie's Aunt Cissy, "and we intend to go through with it if it is at all possible."

While most child stars have to change stand-ins almost yearly because children grow differently in height and weight, Ray has been Freddie's stand-in and pal ever since "David Copperfield," young Bartholomew's first picture, made four years ago.

Ray and Freddie have grown inch for inch and pound for pound. The young actor now is only an eighth of an inch taller than his stand-in, while Ray tips the beam at three-quarters of a pound more than Freddie. This is the more remarkable since Freddie has grown about six inches in the last year.

These two boys are pals on and off the set. If Freddie gets a new necktie, he insists upon one for Ray. If Freddie gets a new sweater, Ray also gets one.

Recently a producer offered Ray opportunity to appear on the screen. He declined with the comment, "I'd rather just be Freddie's stand-in." The two pals are working currently in "Listen Darling." They rarely address each other by their given names. To Freddie, Ray is "The Genius," and Ray's name for the actor star is "Master Mind."

Taming of Shrew.

The troubles which beset a hot-tempered screen star when she takes an impetuous press agent's advice form the theme of "The Affairs of Annabel," new co-starring comedy for Jack Oakie and Lucille Ball.

Tracy Does Thirty Roles, Son Directs

Spencer Tracy said it couldn't be done—but he did it.

He just completed portraying 30 roles, ranging in type from G-Man to gangster, and all in one production.

Written, directed and photographed by his young son, John Tracy, the film, done entirely in color, promises to set a new record for the Academy Award winner.

"He really worked," Tracy, who is portraying Father Flanagan in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Boys Town," revealed. "He'd start to shoot when I arrived home from the studio, and work until the sun set. I played 30 roles, Mrs. Tracy played 15, sister Susy played 10, and the gardener obliged with 4 or 5 characterizations."

Since John was writer, director and cameraman, he reserved the right to play but one role, according to his father.

"But his role averaged more footage than that of the rest of the family put together," Tracy laughed, "and they were all close-ups."

At the present time Tracy can concentrate on his role as Father Flanagan, since John is busy cutting and titling his film in preparation for the preview.

"But I've an awful hunch that there well be re-takes," Tracy smiled, "and I'll be doing double duty once again."

J. EDGAR HOOVER received this report from the G-men's Carolina office: The agents there are seeking an elusive criminal—a clever impersonator whose photo or fingerprints they were unable to obtain. A tipster phoned to inform that he had a clear photo of the quarry, taken in a group picture last December—but the album in which it was contained had been lost somewhere in his house . . . Investigators rushed there, searched the house and found the album. The impersonator was in that group photo all right and his picture was remarkably clear. It was perfect except for one thing. The picture was taken at a Christmas celebration . . . and their quarry had posed, beard and all—as Santa Claus!

She was shown the lot where "Sweethearts" was being filmed, and commented: "How perfectly charming!" Then the foreign star, still seated in the car, was taken to the lot where "Romeo and Juliet" was being screened, and sighed, "How enchanting!" The car proceeded, and 20 minutes later Miss Rainer's eyes popped at what appeared to be a genuine city with thousands of citizens walking the streets. "How realistic!" said Miss Rainer. "To think that M-G-M owns all this. How realistic" . . . "What do you mean, 'realistic?'" the executive disillusioned. "You're in downtown Los Angeles!"

STARTS FRIDAY AT LOEW'S PALACE — HURRY — LAST DAY! MICKEY ROONEY IN "LOVE FINDS ANDY HARDY"

New Films Will Prevail During Coming Week

First-Run Pictures Afford Varied Diversion; Other Coming Attractions.

Robert Taylor and Maureen O'Sullivan, supported by such eminent players as Frank Morgan, Edward Arnold, Lionel Standor, Emma Dunn and others of equal rating, will occupy the screen at Loew's Palace Theater for the week beginning tomorrow in "The Crowd Roars," a story of the prize ring, devised for the further demonstration of the Taylor prowess as an athlete. This engrossing film is rich in excitement, comedy and romance and reveals its star as a boxer of more than ordinary cleverness. The son of a broken-down vaudevillian, portrayed by Mr. Morgan, Taylor rises from poverty and obscurity to contendership for the title, when extraordinary events move him to retire from the ring. There are many touches of authenticity in the picture that lend it added effect.

"The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse," a unique melodrama, starring Edward G. Robinson, will be the chief feature of the screen bill at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. Its central character is a wealthy Park avenue physician, who becomes involved with a gang of jewel and fur thieves under conditions that never before have been depicted on the screen. The supporting cast includes such sterling players as Claire Trevor, in the principal feminine role; Humphrey Bogart, "Slapsie" Maxie Rosenbloom, Thurston Hall, Gale Page, Allen Jenkins, Donald Crisp and Henry O'Neill, all under the direction of Anatole Litvak. On the stage, the Schnickelfritz Band will headline a vaudeville bill that also will include Cass Daley, comedy star; the Stuart Morgan Dancers, Gibson & Co., and Harry Stockwell, "the voice of Prince Charming."

The foremost screen feature of next week's bill at Loew's Capitol Theater will be "Rich Man, Poor Girl," adapted from the stage play, "White Collars," with Robert Young in the stellar role, supported by Ruth Hussey, Lew Ayres, Guy Kibbee, Sarah Padden, Lana Turner, Riat Johnson, Virginia Grey and scores more. The play is a comedy-drama based on a substantial economic idea. The stage portion of the program will be headlined by Virginia Verrill, radio singing star, and also will include contributions by Clyde Nager, another radio star; the Oxford Boys, Miriam Verne, dancer, and the Chester Hale Texas Comets, held over for a second week.

"Bcaloo," a film drama of the Malay Peninsula, will be presented for the first time in Washington as the screen feature of the bill beginning tomorrow at the Metropolitan Theater. It was produced by Clyde K. Elliott, the man who made "Bring 'em Back Alive," and features Colin Tapley, Jayne Regan and Mamo Clark in its cast.

Gracie Fields, foremost of the British feminine stars, makes her American debut, as costar with Victor McLaglen, in "We're Going to Be Rich," announced as major feature for the week beginning tomorrow at the Columbia Theater. The supporting cast is led by Brian Donlevy, seen with McLaglen in "The Battle of Broadway," and a huge cast of competent players. The action of the melodrama, with many musical interpolations, moves from Melbourne, Australia, to South Africa and visualizes a fascinating and well-produced story, filmed in England and released in this country by Twentieth-Century-Fox.

Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy, plus "Mortimer Snurd," Andrea Leeds, Adolphe Menjou, George Murphy, Rita Johnson, Eve Arden and many others, will continue for a second week on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater in Universal's production of "Letter of Introduction," one of the most entertaining of recent releases. An added attraction for the new week will be the latest edition of "The March of Time," featuring "The Man at the Wheel" and "Threat to Gibraltar."

An Our Gang comedy, "The Awful Tooth;" "The Master Drink," a movie visit to old Rothenburg, Bavaria; a featurette, "Thrilling Moments," and a Walt Disney cartoon comedy, "Toby Tortoise Returns," will be the short subjects on the program at the Trans-Lux Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. The bill will be based on complete newsreel coverage of the world.

Bert Lytell, famous star of stage and screen, will be the guest artist at the Olney Theater, beginning next Monday night, in "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse," which will be showing simultaneously in film form downtown. It is, of course, the original stage version of the play in which Mr. Lytell will be seen in the summer theater. The supporting cast will include Leslie Denison, Adelaide Hibbard, Zolya Talma and others, under the direction of George Vivian.

"Escapade," the revival deferred one week by the holdover of "The Golem," will be the screen attraction at the Little Theater for the week beginning Sunday. Luise Rainer and William Powell appear in the costellar roles, supported by Frank Morgan, Reginald Owen and Mady Christians. Short subjects will complete the bill.

David McWilliams and his orchestra will continue to furnish the dance music in the Spanish Garden ballroom at Glen Echo Park through another week. Competing for first place among Glen Echo's 50-odd attractions is the Crystal Pool, a life saver in hot weather. All of the other amusement devices and the picnic groves are crowded daily.

Bay bathing has become increasingly popular as one of the outstanding attractions at Seaside Park. Bathers have their choice of Chesapeake Bay or the salt-water pool. Music for dancing at the bay resort is provided by George Vass and his augmented Ramblers.

With only two more Summer Festival programs to be presented, the offering at the National Sylvan Theater Tuesday night will be "Down South," a musical spectacle, presented by the Columbia Light Opera Co., under the direction of Ethel Manning. The cast will be composed of resident light opera favorites.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 10.—After chatting with Bob Montgomery on the set of "Three Loves Has Nancy," I've nicknamed him Doctor and Mr. Montgomery. Definitely two-sided — almost a Jekyll and Hyde, without the destructive forces of the latter. Outside his picture work and the Guild, he's putting his whole soul into plans which will take him back to his New England home for three months, leaving here the latter part of September. He thinks it's time his children had an old-fashioned snowy Christmas. I felt cool just listening to him. He's going to see that they get it.

His life there falls in step with his neighbors', who've been there for generations.

Bob didn't doll up the old house. The wide planks on the floor are the creaky kind, with huge cracks in between. When he built an addition, he toured the countryside for a door that would match his—found it in an old barn. Has his own woods surrounding a lake. Shrewd business, acquiring a place like this in your heyday—it turns into a haven for your retreat from fame.

Bob's place here is like many of the movie stars'—large, showy and important. Contains one room, his study, in which he's not to be disturbed for anything. He reads a lot, hates interruptions. Pays no attention to meals. When hungry, he calls for a sandwich. Once when he had gone into silence the house telephone rang. He picked it up and said, "Don't disturb me, I'm reading."

It rang again. He gave the same message.

His colored boy knocked, then popped his head in the door. "Can't you see I'm busy?" Bob snapped. The boy said:

"I see's you is, Mr. Montgomery, but I thinks you should know your house is on fire."

And it was!

At the studio, when not on the set, you can find Bob in Lionel Barrymore's dressing room, absorbing, like a sponge, his experiences and knowledge. Which is a different picture from the gay fresh blade we see on the screen.

Hope you didn't miss the salute given Irving Berlin over the airways last week when a tremendous array of talent—all his friends—paid him homage and respect. It was a buildup for "Alexander's Ragtime Band," yet it was much more than that.

While you listened you went back 25 years over your own life—which made you wonder if you had contributed anything.

I couldn't help thinking of an interview given by one of our top stars—by some called our first lady—which ran: "I never was a lady. We were poor. I didn't even finish high school. You can't be a lady if you haven't finished school, can you?"

I don't believe Irving Berlin had any education except what life taught him. But for a quarter of a century he's given us songs of joy instead of sadness—and he is the finest gentleman I've ever met. Would to God we had more like him.

Frank Morgan, a little jealous of Doug Corrigan's fame, decided to go wrong, too. Looking for him on location at Catalina Island, they discovered he had gone on his boat to Ensenada. "Vacation From Love" waits a week. Poor love!

Nice to know that Eddie Sedgwick, who's been in pictures 26 years, will be back on the old home lot, Metro, directing Denis O'Keefe in an outdoor comedy. Yes, they're starting Westerns, too.

It didn't take Republic long to see the light. They've rushed Gene Autrey into a story based on hillbilly, W. L. O'Daniel, running for governor. So it's neck and neck as to which one wins.

Metro's trying to buy Doug Fairbanks' version of Lola Montez for heartbeat Hedy LaMarr.

Cutest thing you ever saw was Gracie Allen bringing her 4-year-old daughter into a beauty parlor to have the ends of her hair permanently waved the day before they sailed for Honolulu. Gracie said, "I'm just as excited as a June bride. First trip she's had in three years."

Wish Paris had close-ups of Hollywood's shopping costumes these days. They run from bathing suits to shorts and hankie, topped by dark glasses.

Is Mickey Rooney going Hollywood? He just bought an 18-room house with swimming pool in Bel Air, with a special room for Sylvester, his colored valet.

Guard Increased At Vaughan Plant

Galax, Va., Aug. 10 (AP).—The police force at the strike-bound Vaughan Furniture Co. plant and in the town of Galax was increased today at the request of county and town officials.

Eight additional State officers and several additional deputy sheriffs augmented the usual force, as 12 workmen, who had been at work for several days, entered the plant this morning. There was no sign of disorder.

Mayor B. D. Beamer said he would probably conduct a hearing Monday for Taylor G. Vaughan, president of the furniture company, on a charge of simple assault contained in a warrant sworn out by Bill Taylor, a striker.

Rites Slated Today For W. S. Mears, of Confederate Army

William S. Mears, 97-year-old Confederate veteran, died yesterday at his home, 2011 Benning road northeast, after a short illness. A carpenter by trade, Mr. Mears served throughout the Civil War as private in the Nineteenth Battalion, Virginia Heavy Artillery.

Services will be held today at 2 p. m. at Chambers' Southeast funeral home, 517 Eleventh street southeast. Burial with military honors will be in the Confederate section of Arlington Cemetery.

Mr. Mears, a native of Northampton County, Va., had made his home here for about two years with a daughter, Mrs. Sadie Cherry. He is survived by Mrs. Cherry and three other daughters, Mrs. Annie Gunter, of Atlantic, Va.; Mrs. Sudie Robbins, of Birdsnest, Va., and Mrs. Hallie Taylor, of Rahway, N. J.; a son, John L. Mears, of Jamesville, Va.; 33 grandchildren, 14 great-grandchildren and several great-great-grandchildren.

Mayor Blake of Louisa Hands in Resignation

Louisa, Va., Aug. 10 (AP).—George McD. Blake, Mayor of Louisa for the past six years, has tendered his resignation to council.

The weekly publisher, who is in his eightieth year, said he was surrendering the mayorship because of the increasing duties of the job and the need for a younger man to fill it. He plans to devote his time to his weekly, the Central Virginian, of which he has been editor and publisher for 15 years.

Jobless Auditor Hangs Self in Cumberland

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 10 (AP).—Police tonight sought to determine what caused F. D. Dobson, a Baltimore auditor, to hang himself.

County Investigator Terrence Boyle declared the death to be a suicide. Dobson, about 50, came to Cumberland to seek work at the Cumberland race meet, but Harry A. Manley, general manager, said he was not given employment.

Frederick Beetle Plague Lessens

Frederick, Md., Aug. 10 (AP).—Japanese beetles have almost completed their damaging work this season, County Agent Henry Shoemaker said today.

During the past two weeks the number of beetles caught in traps has been almost negligible, compared to the thousands captured in previous weeks, he said.

An official count in the county of the beetles caught will be made within the next week.

Shoemaker said he expects the total to be about a million. A count made a month ago indicated 450,000 beetles had been caught in the county, all but 17,000 of them in Brunswick.

New Theater to Open.

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 10.—The University Theater, a new moving picture house, done in the Jeffersonian manner, will open tomorrow on West Main street opposite the grounds of the University of Virginia. The theater will seat 562 persons.

Virginia Bars Showing Of 'Birth of Baby' Film

Richmond, Va., Aug. 10 (AP).—The Virginia Board of Motion Picture Censors today barred the film "The Birth of a Baby" from distribution in this State.

Chairman Peter Saunders said that the board after viewing the film rejected it because the censors felt that while it was excellent for clinical purposes it should not be shown commercially.

Infection Fatal to Boy.

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug. 10.—Charles Bond, jr., 9-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bond, of Washington, who suffered a broken arm while playing at McGaheysville near, here last Friday, died yesterday afternoon at Rockingham Memorial Hospital as a result of an infection.

Mace, Educator, Dies.

Douglas Corrigan Spends Tumultuous Day in Washington

The Post is the only daily morning paper in Washington with A. P. WIREPHOTO Service.

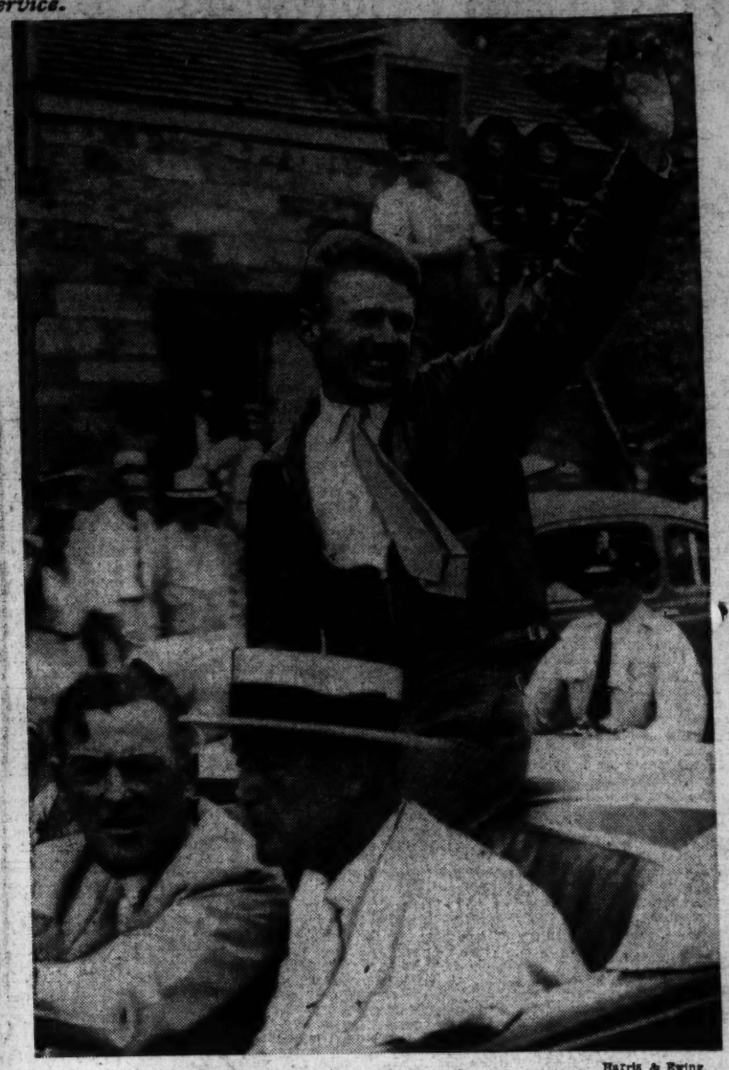
Cheering, Milling Throng at Airport

1 Douglas Corrigan, who became famous overnight for his "wrong-way" flight to Ireland, found his way to Washington yesterday without going astray, but the throng awaiting him almost swept him off his feet to the wrong point of the compass! . . .



Harris & Ewing.

Parading Up Constitution Avenue

2 . . . With a smile and a wave ever ready, the young flier was driven up Constitution avenue to the Capitol and then down Pennsylvania avenue behind an escort of 26 police with instructions to keep him on the right street. Washington's distances did not permit a storm of torn paper, but the greeting nevertheless was warm . . .

Corrigan Tradition Upheld on Avenue

3 . . . The parade was scheduled to turn right from Pennsylvania up Fifteenth to F and thence to the Willard, but—as if to uphold the Corrigan tradition—turned left into Treasury place and thence to the hotel . . .

Another Greeting From the Irish

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Girl Has Congenial Suitor With Dubious Past; How to Knock Sense Into His Head?" She Asks.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For several months I have been keeping company with a very congenial, well-educated young man. He has been divorced from his wife (they have a son) for about two years. He seldom refers to the past, but because of a mutual understanding between us, he recently confided in me. He did not marry his wife because of love but as the result of a "drunken spree." For several months after marriage he did not live with her openly, but from what I gather he spent the days with her and returned to his parents' home at night. Finally, however, the impending birth of the child forced him to confess the marriage to his parents.

* * * *

His father forced him to separate from his wife, and in order to pay the hospital and doctors' bills incident to the child's birth he was forced to borrow $1,000 from his father. As the result of a court decision, which granted the child to him, he is compelled to contribute to the child's support—which, in my opinion, he should do of his own free will.

* * * *

At present he is unemployed and the debt for child support is mounting week by week. He is always worrying about this debt but never does anything about it. He is usually depressed because of the whole past affair. He has made no effort to find even a small portion of happiness elsewhere, as he feels he has caused his people and others enough trouble already.

* * * *

Don't you think if he stopped worrying about the debt, he would have more chance of doing something about it? Money doesn't come to one; one must work for it! Then, too, shouldn't he try to find happiness with someone in spite of his past? I have advised him to get a job; to start paying off the debt; to seek happiness with someone—instead of behaving in so depressed and morbid a manner. I have told him to try to forget the past; to live in the present and plan for the future. I told him, also, about the helping hand you have given me through your column, and he has agreed to give the most serious consideration to your advice. So I am depending on you to "knock some sense into his head."

WONDERING.

Keep Hands Off.

DEAR WONDERING: It is virtually impossible to "knock sense into the head" of any person who lacks what might be called groundwork of character. You may show him what should be done, and why—for his own happiness, self-respect and general good; and you can even tell him, step by step, how to tackle the job and eventually lick it—but it is extremely doubtful whether he would, thereafter, demonstrate the strength and persistence to see it through.

* * * *

Any young man with a case history of action and reaction such as that described above ought to be avoided like poison by any and all girls who do not wish to end up by sharing his misery with him. He simply spells trouble for himself and anyone so misguided as to get mixed up with him. He is weak, cowardly, selfish, self-pitying, self-dramatizing, lazy and essentially dishonorable. He is essentially parasitical, fixing first on this person and then on that person as a leaning post and source of sympathy, succor, support, etc., all of which would be entirely unnecessary if he had the will and the strength to stand on his own feet and assume even a minimum of social responsibility to himself and others.

* * * *

His tale of woe evokes little sympathy from me. It is too contradictory and too altogether unnecessary. In the first place, if he married while on a "drunken spree," and not for love—that was his faults and no one's else. He led with his chin and he should have taken the consequences. In the second place, if he did not love his wife, we must assume he was being merely viciously self-indulgent in continuing to live with her (by stealth) until she was with child. In the third place, he was craven in the extreme in running home, thereafter, to implore the assistance of papa and mama in getting him out of the mess he had gotten himself into.

* * * *

In the fourth place, he behaved like an out-and-out cad in permitting (or perhaps collaborating with) his parents to divest the young mother of both husband and child. In the fifth place, it is placing too great a strain on anyone's credulity to expect him to believe it was necessary for this man to "borrow $1,000 to pay the hospital and doctors' bills incident to the child's birth." Given the best hospital and obstetrical service in the city, the cost of prenatal care and delivery can be—and usually is—settled for clients in moderate circumstances for about one-fourth of that amount. One can only suppose that he had other and purely personal uses for the balance of $750.

* * * *

He is not really worried about his failure to meet the financial obligations to his child; not, that is, in the sense of feeling "great care and anxiety" either for the neglected child, his unpaid creditors or his own defection. His greatest concern, if any, is probably acute alarm lest he finally be brought to some personally painful accounting, i. e., either jailed for nonsupport of his child or actually (awful thought) forced to go to work and pay off his obligations by the sweat of his delicate brow.

* * * *

This whole lamentable chapter having to do with his marriage and paternity just makes him a good talking point when soliciting the saccharin sympathy of some person (parent or gullible female) with more sentimental feeling than sound good sense. It probably makes him, in his estimation, a gentleman with a (luridly) romantic past and a Great Secret Sorrow. He probably fancies himself as having been sorely and unjustly buffeted about by a Cruel Fate.

* * * *

If he makes "no effort to find even a small portion of happiness elsewhere" (and by that I suppose you mean he appears now to be fighting shy of any binding romantic entanglements with women—and specifically of a marrying kind), you may be sure that his conduct is dictated more by selfishness and laziness than by remorseful despair. He has discovered that the responsibilities of manhood, marriage and parenthood are more than he cares to assume. He probably laps up feminine devotion of a tenderly ministering and generously, sweetly commiserative kind; he probably would not be at all averse to an illicit affair (with the distinct understanding that it committed him to nothing); but he just isn't going to take to life's open road with the knapsack of a man's rightful burdens strapped to his back.

* * * *

What advice I have to give in this instance will be directed at you, rather than to the man. If he wishes advice, let him write to me direct. All evidence submitted here indicates that the man is an out-and-out punk; that he isn't worth the powder it would take to blow him up, and that you are making a terrific mistake in allowing yourself to become either emotionally or socially involved with him. The suggestions you have given him for improving his situation are sound. No one could have done better in that regard. But in continuing to associate with him, in spending your energies (of a mental, emotional and social kind) trying to reclaim him you are putting yourself in the perilous position of a person venturing into quicksands in pursuit of a will-o'-the-wisp. I advise you to discontinue your sweethearting association with him until, unless and after he has, of his own accord and through his own powers, revised his whole mode of life and his whole approach to his erstwhile neglected responsibilities.

Fall Suggestions for Looking Youthful

A plaid jacket with Buster Brown collar and a saucer brimmed sailor with long braided chin strap give Virginia Grey, movie actress, a sub-deb appearance.

A white organdy guimpe in a plaid taffeta dress and plaid hatband on a pancake sailor help Olivia De-Havilland achieve that little girl look.

Youth Accentuated in Gowns For Girls Returning to College

WITH scores of young girls returning to school and college, attention is focused on youthful fashions. Youthfulness not only characterizes the styles of the young but those of all ages.

Realizing that the outfit can either increase or decrease the appearance of age, designers have created new lines and used younger fabrics to give the illusion of youth to the new fall wardrobes. And the best authority for smart young styles is Hollywood. For the Hollywood designers are experts in creating wardrobes that give the stars a youthful look.

In designing clothes for a youthful effect they pay strict attention to lines and colors. Gay stripes, multi-colored checks, jaunty boleros, bright sweaters, fitted waist lines, full skirts, soft collars and pencil slim lines are used in making youthful clothes.

Crisp plaid taffeta of navy, red and gold was used to make a juvenile frock for Olivia De Havilland (above right). A tucked yoke of white organdy with rows of tiny buttons is another trick used to give the dress a young effect. A bodice with stitched waist fitting line with fullness above the waist gives a young line to a striped wool dress worn by Virginia Grey (above left).

Full blouses with form fitted or pleated skirt is a decided youth-giving style. Dresses that have a gay spirit and conversational appeal epitomize youth. Three-quarter slim push-up sleeves, collarless cardigan necklines, crisply squared shoulders and skirts with flowing movements are among the youthful types.

Black frocks with lace collars, unusual trimmings, quilted accents, contrasting collars for belts and ornaments, embroidered sleeves or jacket are much more youthful than all black dresses.

Nighties With Jackets Fall and Winter Trend

Lingerie for fall and winter has several interesting new trends. Nighties are now shown with jackets, one tailored with a yoke, and the other a bolero to make a completely new outfit.

For the miss headed for college, swing music has a new version, in a printed broadcloth pajama, called the "pajazzma." Popular phrases in swing music and all the new dances run rampant over the man-tailored pajama.

Bed jackets leave the sickroom and enter the style field for fall and winter, 1938. Cuddly, soft and warm, the knitted jackets are styled to be flattering to young or old.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Correct Posture and Exercise Will Give Thin Girl Good Bust Contour.

By Ida Jean Kain.

IF YOU ARE one of the thin girls who would gladly trade angles for curves, you will be keenly interested in measures which develop the chest and build a firm, high bust contour.

Ann Delafield, who has been notably successful in converting stringliness into lovely streamlines, says the answer to the flat-chested girl's problem is in posture correction, stressing exercise for the pectoral muscles and in the addition of milk to the diet . . . and that the combination never fails!

First of all an exercise like nothing you have ever seen before for the development of those pectoral muscles and the improvement of your posture:

Stand with the back against the wall, heels about 3 inches from the wall and feet 6 inches apart with toes pointing straight ahead. Have the arms straight and slightly out from the sides, palms turned outward, and thumbs resting against the wall.

Each Step Important.

When you have assumed the correct position, lean against the wall, and, keeping the feet flat on the floor, bend the knees. Now, without moving the feet, turn the knees outward—away from each other—and dig the small of the back into the wall. Keep digging the small of the back into the wall as you lift the chest as high as possible, relax the shoulders back and down, and pull the chin in close against the throat in an effort to press the nape of the neck flat against the wall. Reread the directions for this exercise before you try it. Every detail is important and each step has a definite purpose.

As Miss Delafield analyzes this posture corrective for you, you can appreciate how thorough-going it is. Digging the small of the back into the wall corrects sway back and strengthens the tummy muscles. Lifting the chest and relaxing the shoulders back and down strengthens the pectoral muscles, raising the bust. Turning the knees out counteracts the tendency to knock-knees and holding the feet in place during the exercise strengthens the arches. Pulling the chin in helps to beautify the head carriage.

Two Quarts of Milk.

After you have completed the exercise, hold the position for an entire minute, breathing naturally. Relax and repeat ten times. This exercise will take just ten minutes of your time and it has no equal for figure improvement.

Your daily diet should be supplemented by two quarts of milk and one concentrated vitamin A and D capsule. The action of the milk and the vitamins together seems to have a magic effect. In order to drink the two quarts of milk, you can take at least one glass with each meal and one glass between each meal and before retiring, taking large-size glasses between meals.

You may think all this too much bother . . . and if you do, you cannot be very serious about wanting a beautiful figure.

Corner Closets Add Interesting, Useful Alcoves

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

WE'VE HEARD of houses with plenty of closet space, but personally we've never met one. Even when the closets looked spacious enough on the blue print . . . even when they looked enormous in a vacant house . . . a family has a way of filling them to overflowing all too soon. And the first thing you know the lady of the house is trying to figure out a place to tuck an extra closet or cupboard.

Sometimes there's a small porch or an end of a porch or hall that can be remodeled into a grand big closet. And here's a tip—a closet with a window is a joy on all counts, so whenever possible, plan on one. It can double as a dressing room; then, too, it is easier to keep it fresh and fragrant; and how much easier to find things then in a dark cavern! In any even, have a light in the closet—a very small expense for a big convenience, for a low-wattage bulb will be sufficient here.

If you must up and take your new closet space from actual room area, there are ever so many ways to keep it from looking awkward. For instance, have two closets in corners of one long wall. In the space between these two closets have a dressing table, a piano, a bed or a desk. You can put a contrasting wall paper in the alcove thus left. If you plan to have a single bed here, have the space of a size to fit studio couch or springs and mattress as if the studio-seat were built in.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

Dog Days.

I.

I'm slumping along like a woman of eighty,
My belt is too tight, my waistline is bulging;
My shoulders are rounding, my chin's begun sagging,
But I'm too weak at night to bend down to the floor;
In the morning I'm dead, so why should I bother,
In all this humidity to make myself wretched,
I'll get busy next month and will soon be a sylph,
Then all will forget I was ever a scarecrow.

II.

I'm the dowdiest woman in all of the city;
My clothes are all jaded, my heels are run over,
I'm in constant terror of meeting my enemies,
Or even my friends, so I slink around corners,
For I figure if I can survive till September,
And the humidity's gone, I'll be a new person,
All slick, fresh and shining and can face the world boldly,
And all this will be like a nightmare behind me.

III.

My hair's stringing down in the funniest horse tails,
It won't stay in curl and hairpins won't hold it,
I've the mournful appearance of a poorly kept Scottie,
I'd get a new permanent, but I really can't stand it
In all this humidity, and who is there to notice?
Besides in September, I'll get myself tidied,
And look like a chic plaster dame in the windows,
Right now there is nothing to do but to bear it.

IV.

My skin is as tough as an old piece of leather,
It's brown and it's red and in spots a dull yellow,
A lone covered wagon would be my best setting,
Yet I am so weary and what does it matter
In all this humidity just how I am looking?
For nobody cares, as all others are tortured,
And I'll get myself bleached when the weather is cooler;
With a few good facials I'll become a new woman.

V.

I'm as dull as a cow, my brain is not working,
I have nothing to say, I was a pill at the party
Last night; and I'm a dud at the office,
Even romance can't stir me, nor yet even scandal,
But then, after all, how can people expect me
To have bright ideas in this terrible weather?
Just as soon as fall comes, my mind will be surging
With wonderful thoughts, and all will be rosy.

VI.

Yes, if I can just stick it out awhile longer,
Without seeing too many folks who are ritzy,
I shall startle the world with my new personality,
A new suit and blouse and a hat that is rakish,
An uplifted coiffure with curls that are fetching,
A skin like a lady's and a mind scintillating,
A figure that's svelte, and a charm devastating,
Oh life will be halcyon when gone's the humidity.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Aug. 10.

TO SHAKE myself out of New York's August doldrums I poured myself aboard a New Haven train and set off to inspect the New England doldrums, which are also very complete. Setting up moist headquarters at my sister's home in Boston, I immediately met two most interesting women of entirely different types.

ALICE HUGHES.

The sister's house is a sort of headquarters for proteges. For instance, I saw and met a pretty, daintily made German girl who was certainly the last word in femininity. Therefore it came as a bit of a nudge when I learned that she was Dr. Lucie Jessner, B. A., Ph. D., M. D., an expert on the new insulin shock treatment for schizophrenics, or mental cases suffering from split personalities. One of the new specialists in this new therapy for mental disease now in this country, Dr. Lucie shocks the patients at a famed private hospital near the Hub. For all her rather solemn and intricate profession, she is a gay and happy and charming soul away from the rattle-box. In fact, so delightful did she prove that my poor, sappy spouse announced he felt the need of a bit of insulin daily!

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT NEW ENGLAND—It is always easy to detect one's approach to the Athens of America by staring out the car window. In the region of Providence, R. I., your eyes will be smacked by a huge billboard which reads "Gorton's Codfish. No Bones!" Where could you be but near Boston?

That proud city, for all its noble universities, hospitals, clinics, laboratories and libraries, did not really become the hub of the world's wheel until Shirley Temple, grand old lady of the screen, chose the spot to run up a temperature of 103. Shirley's malaise drove all other headlines from page 1, and huge crowds of worrying worshipers, mostly kids, stood outside her window of the Ritz Hotel and just looked up.

Senator Barkley, Wife To Sail on Normandie

Couple to Spend Several Weeks Abroad, Where the Senate Majority Leader Will Preside at Interparliamentary Union Beginning Aug. 22.

By Hope Ridings Miller.
The Post Society Editor.

After several months spent in winning friends and influencing voters, Senator Alben W. Barkley, Senate majority leader, and Mrs. Barkley can now safely shake the dust of the Blue Grass region from their heels and head off on a vacation. Both business and pleasure bent they will be next Wednesday when they sail on the Normandie to spend several weeks abroad.

Like most big-wigs traveling afar this summer, Senator Barkley will have more than a vacation in view when he starts on his journey. He and Mrs. Barkley will go first to The Hague, where he will preside at the Interparliamentary Union conference, which begins August 22 and lasts for five days.

Later, they will go to Paris to visit their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas MacArthur, the former of whom is Third Secretary of the United States Embassy. While plans for their return are not yet complete, Senator and Mrs. Barkley are expected back in this county late in September or early in October. Then, she probably will return to their home in Jasper, Ky., and the Senator will come on to Washington, where she will join him in the winter.

Several Senators Already on Way

When Senator Barkley takes his chair on the rostrum at The Hague he will be able to spot a number of familiar faces in the gathering. Seven other Senators and eight Representatives will be on hand for the conference. Senator Edward Burke, Senator Louis B. Schwellenbach and Senator Henrick Shipstead sailed yesterday on the Manhattan in order to be there in plenty of time. Accompanying Senator Burke were Mrs. Burke and their daughters, Miss Barbara Burke and Mrs. Louie Bean. When the conference is over, the Burkes will go to Germany, then to France and Switzerland and finally to England before returning to Washington October 1.

Mrs. Schwellenbach was another in the party sailing yesterday. In recent weeks she and the Senator have been at their home in Neppel, Wash., and they will return there on the completion of their European trip, coming back to Washington in the winter.

Senator Joseph F. Guffey sailed late in July and has been traveling in France and Germany for the past two weeks. With him are his sisters, the Misses Ida and Pauletta Guffey, who will accompany him to Ireland for a visit at the conclusion of the interparliamentary conference.

Peppers to Attend Royal Garden Party

Senator and Mrs. Claude Pepper, who were in the thick of a stiff campaign in the spring, later had a Coast-to-Coast trip in this country before they sailed late last month for England.

Since arriving in London, where they have a number of friends, they have been widely feted and this week-end they will be guests at a garden party to be given by King George and Queen Elizabeth. After attending the conference at The Hague, Senator Pepper and his attractive wife will be off for an extended tour of the continent, traveling through France, Germany, Italy and probably visiting Egypt before returning to America October 1.

Senator Wallace H. White, of Maine, is another who will attend the interparliamentary conference. Others from Capitol Hill scheduled to be there are Representative Millard F. Caldwell, of Florida, who sailed yesterday on the Manhattan; Representative Richard B. Wiggleworth, of Massachusetts; Representative Fritz G. Lanham, of Texas; Representative Thomas S. McMillan, of South Carolina; Representative Albert E. Carter, of California; Representative Aaron Ford, of Mississippi; Representative Clifton A. Woodrum, of Virginia, and Representative Edward L. O'Beill, of New Jersey.

Greek Minister To Return Today

Demetrios Sicilianos, the Greek Minister, is expected to return today from New York, where he has spent a week. In Washington for a very short time following his recent trip to California, he will be here again for only a couple of days before going on to New Orleans.

He will leave the first of next week for Louisiana

Elizabeth Ross Peirce to Be Bride; Reception to Follow Ceremony.

Miss Elizabeth Rose Peirce, daughter of Mrs. Wentworth Willis Peirce and the late Wentworth Willis Peirce, has selected September 9 as the date of her marriage to Frank Cummings Cook, jr. The ceremony will take place at the Church of the Epiphany and will be followed by a reception at the Washington Club.

Miss Peirce will be given in marriage by her brother, Wentworth Willis Peirce, jr. Mrs. Frank Blake Miller, of Norfolk, who was formerly Miss Dorothy Darrow Graham, of this city, will be matron of honor. Miss Eleanor Rust Peirce, the bride's sister, will serve as maid of honor and Miss Margaret Heck Clark will be a bridesmaid.

Mr. Cook will have as best man Philip Herrick, whose engagement to Miss Eleanor Colbran, of Los Angeles, has been recently announced. The ushers will include Benton Brooks, Ralph Burgess, David Byron, Walter McBroom, DeButts Saunders and Arthur Varela, all of Washington.

Charles Hoovers Visit the Cloister At Sea Island, Ga.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hoover, of Washington, are among recent arirvals at the Cloister, Sea Island, Ga., where plans already are under way to make Labor Day week-end a record season in the history of the coastal resort.

Inaugurating the holiday events will be a special dance in the Cloister's Palm Patio on Saturday evening, September 3, when a varied floor show will be featured and the al fresco will be preceded by dinner dancing in the dining room.

Golfers will participate in the low-gross, low-net tournament on the Sea Island Golf Club's course. Climaxing the Sunday program that week-end will be a "shipwreck party" and buffet supper at the Casino pool. This event will be followed by entertainment in the patio, where the Washboard Orchestra will play.

E. Scott Carrolls Stop Here on Trip

Former D. C. Residents on Way to Miami Beach.

Dr. and Mrs. E. Scott Carroll, of Buffalo, N. Y., who are en route to Miami Beach, are staying in Washington for a few days before proceeding south. They formerly made their home here. Mrs. Carroll before her marriage was the former Miss Rose Wilshire, daughter of the late Representative W. W. Wilshire, of Little Rock, Ark.

In Florida, the Carrolls will live with their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Hartung. Mrs. Hartung with her son, Carroll Cutler, is making the trip from Buffalo to Miami Beach with her parents.

Miss Moyer Visiting Aunt and Uncle Here

Miss Lois Moyer, of Lewiston, Pa., is spending the week with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. George Kieferle, of Manor Park. Miss Moyer will be entertained at the Shoreham Terrace on Saturday night at a small supper party in her honor. She will return to her home Sunday.

Frederick Kieferle, who is away at camp for the summer, is expected home on September 1.

Plan New England Vacation

Harris & Swinz.

MRS. WILLEM CHRISTIAAN NAUDE and her daughter, Gilliamm, who with Mr. Naude, new attache of the South African Legation, plan to leave the first of next month for a vacation in New England. They will travel through Connecticut, Massachusetts and New York State and then go to Canada for a brief stay, returning to New England to complete their vacation. Mrs. Naude's mother, Mrs. John Gill, of London, divides her time between England and this country and is now in Salem, Mass., where the Naudes will join her next month. They expect to return to Washington early in October.

Hull to Be Host To Sir Earle Page

Secretary of State to Give Stag Luncheon Today for Australian Official.

Ten guests will attend the stag luncheon to be given today by Secretary of State Cordell Hull in honor of Sir Earle Page, Minister of Commerce of Australia. The event will take place at the Carlton Hotel.

The Australian cabinet official, who with Lady Page is spending a few days in Washington, came to this country from Canada, where they were guests at Government House in Toronto.

After leaving the Capital, they will go to Chicago for a day and then will be off to Los Angeles, where they will sail on August 16 for Melbourne.

Lady Page is the former Esther Blunt, daughter of Frederick Blunt.

Dr. Clyde M. Gearhart was host at dinner last evening at the Army Navy Country Club for Mrs. Harrison McCready, of Miami Beach, Fla.

Other guests included Mr. and Mrs. Harold Gooding, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Miller, and Miss Dorothy Miller.

Miss Irene Cole To Become Bride In Naples Today

The home of the American Consul of Naples, Homer M. Byington, jr., and Mrs. Byington, today will be the setting for a wedding of wide interest to Capital residents. In a quiet ceremony Miss Irene O. Cole, formerly of Washington, will become the bride of Dr. Giacinto Vetere, of Naples. She is the sister of Charles B. Hosmer, of the United States Foreign Service.

Mrs. Byington, formerly Miss Jane McHarg, of Washington, has many friends here, and her sister, Miss Estherbelle McHarg, who still lives here, accompanied Miss Cole to Naples for the wedding.

After a brief wedding trip, the couple will return to Naples to live. He is on the engineering staff of a large American oil company.

Paul E. Tombaughs Arrive at Vermont Inn

LIEUT. COLONEL and Mrs. Paul E. Tombaugh and Mr. and Mrs. R. E. D. Prince are among recent arrivals at the Lake Morey Inn at Fairlee, Vt.

Guests of Lake Morey Inn were instructed in the art of playing golf last Sunday evening when a very interesting "golfing film" was presented in the parlor.

Arthur Moose, ventriloquist and magician, gave a most entertaining program on Monday evening for the amusement of the guests.

Today is Fairlee Day in the town. This is a gala occasion, the object of which is to raise funds for local charity work. There will be a parade, in which Lake Morey Inn will have an unusual float. Special water sports and a dance in the evening will round out the day.

Aquaplaning and moonlight sails on the lake have been greatly enjoyed by the guests of the inn this past week.

Mrs. Henry W. Keyes And Miss Darling Sail

Mrs. Henry Wilder Keyes, accompanied by Miss Jean Darling, sailed last night on the Batory for Gydnia, Poland, where they will spend some time before going on to Germany and France.

They arrived in New York on Monday and were at the Commodore Hotel before leaving. According to present plans, they will return to this country in October and Mrs. Keyes will come to Washington the latter part of that month.

Miss Campbell Is Engaged to Mr. MacDonald

Of wide interest here is the announcement made by Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Archibald Campbell, of New York City and Roroyare, Cold Spring on the Hudson, of the engagement of their daughter, Charmian, to Henry MacDonald, of Forest Hills, Long Island.

Miss Campbell was a debutante of 1935-1936. She attended Miss Hewitt's classes and the Convent of the Sacred Heart. Her grandfather, Brig. Gen. John Campbell, was born in Albany, N. Y., and served with distinction in the Mexican and Civil wars. Her grandmother, the late Mrs. John Campbell, was one of the five Price sisters of Wilmington, Del., all noted for their beauty and charm.

Bachrach.

MISS CHARMIAN CAMPBELL.

Through her father's Scottish ancestry, the bride-elect belongs to the Braedelbane Clan of the younger house of the Argyll's. On her mother's side she is descended from many prominent colonial families, among them the Morris family of Pennsylvania and Virginia, the head of which, Anthony Morris, settled in Pennsylvania in the year 1689.

Miss Campbell's great grandfather, John H. de Frees, an intimate friend of President Abraham Lincoln, was the founder of what is now known as the United States Government Printing Office. Her sisters are Mrs. Allen Galt, of Alexandria, Va.; Mrs. Charles Tatham, jr., and Miss Margaret Campbell.

The prospective bridegroom is a graduate of Yale University and a practicing attorney in New York. He is a brother of Marquis George MacDonald. His clubs are Yale, Metropolitan, Down Town and West Side Tennis.

'Admiral's Tea' Is Held Again

Mrs. J. W. Wadleigh Gives Annual Fete in Jamestown, R. I.

Gold braid galore stole the scene yesterday at Jamestown, R. I., as high-ranking members of the Navy set vacationing there and in Newport clicked their heels together and turned out for the "admiral's annual tea" given by Mrs. John Winthrop Wadleigh at her cottage, the Quarter Deck. She was assisted by her sister, Miss Angelica Gear Remey.

The hostesses are the daughters of the late Rear Admiral George C. Remey, who a number of years ago inaugurated the party which now has become an institution, and since his death which occurred ten years ago has always been held on his birthday anniversary, August 10.

Among the many who attended were members of the Navy set stationed in Washington and their wives.

The guest list included Admiral and Mrs. William B. Caperton, Vice Admiral and Mrs. J. H. Dayton, Vice Admiral and Mrs. William L. Rodgers, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Lucius A. Bostwick, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Louis R. De Steiguer, Rear Admiral and Mrs. John Downes, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Bradley A. Fiske, Rear Admiral and Mrs. James H. Glennon, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Julian L. Latimer, and Rear Admiral and Mrs. George R. Marvell.

Also Rear Admiral and Mrs. John H. Newton, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Reginald F. Nicholson, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Charles P. Snyder, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Joseph K. Taussig, Rear Admiral and Mrs. John W. Wilcox, and Rear Admiral and Mrs. Frank H. Sadler, and Commodore James P. Parker.

Miss Paula Doyle To Marry in N. Y.

A wedding of wide interest here will take place tomorrow at St. Mary's Church, Jamaica, N. Y., when Miss Paula Doyle will become the bride of George Gallant. The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Herbert Doyle and the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hadley Doyle, of Georgetown.

Miss Doyle has held a scholarship at Smith College, while Mr. Gallant is a teacher in the schools of Plattsburg, N. Y.

The ceremony will be attended by Mr. and Mrs. John Hadley Doyle and Mrs. J. M. Schneider, of this city.

Ralph Morton Winklers to Live In D. C. After Wedding Journey

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Morton Winkle, now on their wedding trip, will make their home in Washington upon their reurn. Their marriage took place in Morganton, N. C., Tuesday at 6:30 p. m., and was performed at the First Presbyterian Church by Dr. A. A. McLean, pastor.

The bride, the former Miss Jean Eleanor Hall, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Hall, of Baltimore, but has lived for some time in Washington. She is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hall, of Morganton, at whose home the wedding reception took place. Mr. Winkler, who is a native of Fredericksburg, Va., has been a resident of Washington for several years.

Given in marriage by her father, Miss Hall wore a gown of white Chantilly lace made along princess lines with long sleeves and a cowl neckline. Her tulle veil was draped from a coronet of orange blossoms and lilies of the valley, and she carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. Her only ornament consisted of her grandmother's pearls.

Miss Adelaide Walton, of Morganton, was maid of honor, wearing a dress of white marquisette trimmed with blue. Her hat was also of blue and she carried white gladioli and blue delphinium.

The bridesmaids were Mrs. C. W. Martin, of Washington; Miss Susan Emma Sloan, of Morganton; Miss Jewel Duckworth, of Charlotte, and Mrs. A. J. Cotts, of New York City. Their dresses had accents of coral and their flowers were coral gladioli.

S. R. Hill, of Washington, served as best man, while ushers were P. H. Brown, Thomas Peters and Frank Stipe, all of Washington, and J. Fox Hall, of Cleveland.

Prenuptial parties for the bride-elect and her fiance filled their schedule Monday, the day before the wedding. Miss Adelaide Walton entertained at a bridge luncheon and miscellaneous shower; Miss Ruth McNaughton and Mrs. J. Hall gave a dinner at the Caldwell Hotel in Morganton for the bridal party; and following the rehearsal, in the evening, Miss Emma Sloan and Miss Jewel Duckworth feted the bride-to-be and the prospective bridegroom and the out-of-town guests.

Mrs. Legare's Sister Engaged To Frank Mead

Miss Julia Zimmerman to Be Wed to Briton on October 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Daniel Zimmerman, of St. Matthews, S. C., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Julia Della Zimmerman, to Frank Roberts Mead, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Roberts Mead, of London.

The bride-elect is widely known here. She is a sister of Mrs. Kent Legare, of Washington and Simsbury, Conn., and she has resided with Mr. and Mrs. Legare for the past several years. She was presented to society here in 1933-34. She attended Greenwood School, Ruxton, Md., and Mlle. Boissier's, in Paris.

Mr. Mead was educated at Middlesex School, Concord, Mass., the University of Virginia and the Boeing School of Aeronautics, Oakland, Calif. He is now associated with the United Aircraft in Hartford, Conn., where he and his bride will make their home.

The wedding will take place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Zimmerman, in St. Matthews, S. C., on October 1.

Evelyn E. Scott Plans Wedding

Will Be Married to Lieut. Leigh Cole Fairbank on September 17.

Miss Evelyn Ewell Scott, daughter of Mrs. Berta Scott, of Washington, and Col. Raymond Ewell Scott, of San Antonio, Tex., has completed the plans for her wedding to Lieut. Leigh Cole Fairbank, son of Brig. Gen. L. C. Fairbank, chief of the Dental Corps, U. S. A., and Mrs. Fairbank.

The ceremony, a military one, will take place on September 17, at 5 o'clock at the Walter Reed Memorial Chapel, with Chaplain Alfred C. Oliver, jr., officiating. Mrs. George F. Lull, jr., daughter-in-law of Col. and Mrs. George F. Lull, will be matron of honor. Miss Justine Fairbank, sister of the bridegroom, will be a bridesmaid as will Miss Meredith Smith.

Lieut. John Van Vliet, a classmate of the bridegroom at West Point, will be best man. Ushers will be classmates of Lieut. Fairbank.

A reception will be held immediately after the ceremony at the Army-Navy Country Club. Miss Scott, who graduated from Western High School in this city, also attended George Washington University and Westmoreland College at San Antonio. Lieut Fairbank graduated from West Point in 1937. They will make their home at Fort Belvoir, where Lieut. Fairbank is stationed.

De Tittas to Sail For Paris Aug. 17

Couple Visiting Friends in N. Y. Before Leaving on Normandie.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur De Titta, who have been making their home at the Wardman Park Hotel for several years, left yesterday for New York City. They will spend several days at Atlantic Beach on Long Island as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Reek before sailing August 17 on the Normandie for France.

Mr. De Titta has recently been appointed Assistant European Director of Movietone News, and he and Mrs. De Titta will establish their permanent residence in Paris.

Group to Welcome Conductor Headed By Netherlanders

The Counselor of the Netherlands Legation, Count W. van Rechteren Limpurg and Countess van Rechteren Limpurg, and Capt. and Mrs. J. E. Meijer Ranneft, also of the Netherlands Legation, head the list of notables who have been invited to the reception this afternoon in honor of Willem van Hoogstraten, guest leader of the National Smyphony Orchestra's Water Gate concerts this week.

The event will be given by the Arts Club of Washington in its garden. Receiving with the guest of honor will be Dr. and Mrs. Hans Kindler and Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Steele. The former is president of the Arts Club.

Among others who have been invited are Dr. and Mrs. William McClellan, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, Mr. and Mrs. George Hewitt Myers, George Gaul, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Cappel, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Potter, Mrs. Isabelle Farrington and Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Hesselbach.

Mr. van Hoogstraten came to Washington from New York, where he recently finished an engagement of several weeks with the New York Philharmonic Symphony at the Lewisohn Stadium. Earlier this summer he conducted the Philadelphia Orchestra in Robin Hood Dell. He will conduct the National Symphony tonight and again Sunday night. While in Washington he is staying at the Raleigh Hotel.

Chicago Party To Greet Rossos

Reception Scheduled for Italian Diplomat and Former Washingtonian.

While Washington society is in the doldrums, it is learning with envy that Chicago's "400" on Thursday, August 18, will have a chance to meet the Italian Ambassador to Russia and Mme. Augusto Rosso at a large reception to be given by the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Lawrence Wilkinson. Mme. Rosso, the former Mrs. Frances Wilkinson Bunker, formerly lived in Washington, and her friends in this city may see her later in the season, as she will not return to Europe until November. Her husband, who at one time held the post of Italian Envoy here, will be going back to Russia August 20.

The Rosses are at present at the HF Bar Ranch in Buffalo, Wyo., having previously attended the theater festival in Central City, Colo.

George Bunker, Mme. Rosso's son, is spending his vacation with her and her husband, but Miss Adele Bunker, who has been in the East, will not join her mother until August 18, when she will be with her for the reception at the home of the Wilkinsons in Evanston.

Helen Morton Becomes Bride Of Dr. Shanklin

Couple Wed in Arlington to Live in Bluefield, W. Va., After Honeymoon.

St. Mary's Chapel in Arlington, Va., last evening was the scene of a wedding in which Miss Helen Throck Morton, daughter of Mrs. James Throck Morton, of Clarendon, Va., became the bride of Dr. Robert James Shanklin, son of Dr. and Mrs. Richard Shanklin, of Gary, W. Va.

The Rev. John Sadtler, of Falls Church, Va., assisted by the Rev. B. R. Roller, of White Sulphur, W. Va., officiated at the 8 o'clock ceremony. Given in marriage by her brother-in-law, George Mason Green, the bride was gowned in blush marquisette, fashioned on empire lines with a high waistline, long sleeves that were large at the top and tight at the wrist, and a train. Her finger-tip veil was fastened to a Juliet cap of seed pearls with orange blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of sweetheart roses and lilies of the valley.

Sister Serves As Matron of Honor

Mrs. George M. Green was her sister's matron of honor. Her frock, as well as those of the other attendants, was fashioned of blush marquisette, the identical shade of the ride's gown. Mrs. Green's dress, however, was made with puffed sleeves, and her bouquet was of Johanna Hill roses.

Miss Violet Hiner, of Bluefield, W. Va., and Miss Mary Sanford Wilkes, of Charlottesville, Va., were the other attendants. Their frocks were similar to that of the matron of honor, but their bouquets were of blush gladioli and blue delphinium.

Richard V. Shanklin, jr., of West Virginia, was his brother's best man, and ushers were Dr. John Hampton St. Clair and Dr. John Doyle, of Bluefield, W. Va.

Reception Is At Rixey Mansion

Following the ceremony, there was a reception at Rixey Mansion, Countr Club, Hills, Va. The mothers of the bride and bridegroom stood with the wedding party to receive the guests. Mrs. Morton was gowned in delphinium chiffon and lace and wore a corsage of pink roses, while Mrs. Shanklin wore black lace, set off with a corsage of similar flowers.

Shortly after the reception, the couple left for New York, whence they will sail Saturday for a wedding trip to Bermuda. The bride's traveling costume was a navy blue ensemble with blue and white accessories. After their honeymoon, Dr. and Mrs. Shanklin will make their home in Bluefield, where he is on the staff of the sanitarium.

The former Miss Morton is a graduate of William and Mary, and she is a member of Beta Sigma Phi and Theta Chi Sigma sororities. Her husband finished at the University of Virginia Medical School and stayed on a year afterward to teach pathology there. He was an interne at St. Luke's Hospital in Bethlehem.

Two Points Won, Women Voters Will Campaign on Other Issues

Child Labor, Pure Food Laws Obtained at Last Congress.

May Seek D. C. Suffrage, Marguerite Wells Says After Europe Trip.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

Campaigns and candidates may come and go but the League of Women Voters still watches the issues.

Miss Marguerite Wells, president of the national league, who has just returned from five weeks in Europe, stressed this phase of its policy yesterday in discussing its program for the coming year.

"A campaign season is always somewhat difficult for the league," she said. "Although it takes no partisan stand as an organization, its individual members are necessarily aligned with one party or another. They learn in league work, however, to study vital questions and to place things ahead of persons and parties."

As an illustration, Miss Wells pointed out that the league's interest in the merit system versus patronage continues in campaign years and out, through one administration to the next.

The merit system versus patronage, she said, continues to be a burning issue and will receive a generous share of the league's attention, as long as the present situation exists.

No Opposition To Party Systems

The league favors strong party systems, but scans the basis on which they are built, said Miss Wells. She contends that patronage breaks down real party responsibility, substituting for it promises to job seekers.

The league's program next year is hot so easy to outline as it has been for several seasons past, Miss Wells stated, because two measures for which it has worked tirelessly were cleared off its list with the action of the last Congress. One was child labor legislation and the other the food and drug law—the latter incorporating provisions for which the league has worked for six years.

Suffrage for the District, which is supported by both the national league and the District organization, will probably be one of the measures for which the national will work, she said. It will also study neutrality legislation, tariff and trade agreements and any other issues which come before the Nation.

Mrs. Harris T. Baldwin, of Washington, is legislative chairman for the National League of Women Voters and also chairman of the Women's Joint Congressional Committee. This body, formed of representatives of national women's organizations which desire to co-operate in support of opposition to measures before Congress, is an outstanding example of effective co-operation, according to Miss Wells.

Many groups which attempt to co-operate, lose effectiveness in their own field by trying to merge their interests with others committed to different endeavor, she said. The Women's Joint Congressional Committee never takes a stand for the whole list of organizations affiliated with it but forms a loose structure within which five or more of them may work together on any measure which directly concerns them and on which they agree.

Miss Wells, on her trip abroad, spent her time in the mountains of Switzerland, Italy and Germany. There she saw the same contented, happy families, enjoying their work and play together, that she has seen in other years, and, in those sections at least, there was little evidence of any change in the attitude or life of the people, she said.

She went over for a vacation and "wouldn't speak to a person who knew anything if I could help it," she said. Her trip was in no sense designed as a survey of the European situation, and she brought back no solemn pronouncements on what's going to happen next.

She expects to leave for her home in Minneapolis in a few days to spend a short time there before returning to Washington and the work which attends the beginning of the league season. The national board meeting will be held here in November.

Conferring with Miss Wells at headquarters yesterday was Mrs. Donald Hutchinson, of New York City, newly elected second vice president, here for the first time since her election at the convention in St. Louis last spring.

National Vice President Confers at Headquarters

Mrs. Hutchinson became a member of the municipal affairs committee of the New York City League eight years ago, when it began promoting public interest in the poor municipal set-up and the need for a new city charter. The committee presented a brief, including recommendations which were the result of its study of the municipal government. Among them was one for proportional representation for election of the city council, which was passed when the new charter was adopted.

Mrs. Hutchinson served as president of the New York City League, having been appointed to fill an unexpired term. This year, in addition to her duties as a national vice president, she will be legislative chairman for New York City.

Capital Legion Is Host Tonight For Auxiliary

Women Make Final Plans for Convention Which Opens Tomorrow.

Members of the American Legion Auxiliary are making final preparations for the opening of their annual department convention tomorrow night at the Carlton Hotel. Tonight preliminary to their own opening session, they will be guests at that of the American Legion convention which gets under way at the Mayflower Hotel. They will also participate in the legion parade.

Mrs. E. E. Corwin is chairman of the program committee for the auxiliary meeting at which Mrs. Dorothy B. Harper, desprtment president, will preside.

Registration will begin tomorrow night at 6 o'clock with Mrs. Edith Landvoight as chairman. Other committee chairmen who will assist are Mrs. Marie Gorsuch, chairman of the luncheon; Miss Irene Sheehan, of the badges; Mrs. Mary Schaumleffle and Mrs. Alberta Lacy, programs, and Miss Minnie May Hardy, Mrs. Catherine Waters and Mrs. Helen McCabe, reception.

Music by the United States Marine Band at 7:15 will be followed by the call to order by Mrs. Mary K. Killeen, national committeewoman. The processional of department officers, past department presidents, honor guests and gold star mothers will mark the formal opening of the convention.

Mrs. Isabel Steinbraker, Mrs. Helen Ware, Mrs. Emma Warren and Mrs. Sarah Johns will advance the colors and "The Star-Spangled Banner" will be sung by Helen Hunt Dean, with the Marine Orchestra accompanying.

Greetings will be given by Thomas Mason, jr., department commander of the American Legion; Joseph J. Malloy, national committeeman; Mrs. Killeen, national committeewoman and president of the Gold Star Mothers; Thomas M. Owen, jr., national historian; Ferdinand Fraser, chef de chemin de fer of the 40 and 8; Watson B. Miller, national director of rehabilitation; Mrs. McCabe, chapeau departemental of the 8 and 40; John Emil McCabe, grand chef de gare of the 40 and 8.

The Girls' National Glee Club will sing under the direction of Virginia McCarthy as will the Europe-Walker Juniors Glee Club, directed by Anita Ellis and Mabel Bundrat. The address of the evening will be by Dr. Winifred B. Overholser. Presentation of awards will follow.

Saturday morning will be devoted to the American Legion Auxiliary Juniors' conference under the chairmanship of Mrs. Richard Ralph, with Mary Catherine Ware in charge of registration. Installation of officers of the Girls' Nation will be followed by a theater party at the Earle, of which Isabel Doherty is chairman and for which Mrs. Ann Brice Aston will be chaperone.

The department convention luncheon will be given Saturday at 1 o'clock with a list of distinguished guests, including Mrs. Thomas Mason, jr., Mrs. Frank T. Hines, Mrs. A. H. Hoffman, Mrs. F. C. Williams, Mrs. Joseph J. Malloy, Mrs. Killeen, Judge Lucy S. Howorth, Mrs. Ina Russell Stacy and Miss Hazel Nielson.

Nomination of department officers will take place at the afternoon session at 3 o'clock and election and installation in the evening. The closing meeting will also include reports of the resolutions committee of which Miss M. Edna McIntosh is chairman, and of the constitution and by-laws committee, headed by Miss Frances Youngblood.

Bedtime Stories

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Which Was It?

The truth is often hard to see,
And so opinions disagree.
—Old Mother Nature.

Striped Chipmunk was giving a demonstration. He didn't know it, but that was what he was doing. What was it a demonstration of? That is for you to say. Was it of instinct or was it of intelligence? He had solved a problem in the only way that it could be solved and the question is, did he do it through reason or the automatic action that is called instinct?

Between two posts a small cord had been stretched several feet above the ground and from this cord peanuts had been suspended by means of strings. Striped Chipmunk could not reach these from the ground and all but one were too high to be reached by jumping. He studied them from below. Then he climbed to the top of a post and studied them from there. Cautiously he "walked the tightrope" as Sue expressed it. When he was directly above the first peanut he balanced himself crosswise and hanging on with his hind feet hung head down while he pulled up the string hand over hand until he had the nut.

It was great fun to watch him. While Striped Chipmunk was carrying his prize to his storeroom Tommy would tie mare peanuts to the cord.

"He's smart," declared Sammy. "I wouldn't have believed it if I hadn't seen it."

"You could almost see him think when he was sitting under those nuts and up on top of that post," said Sue.

"I wonder," said Tommy.

"What do you wonder?" demanded Sammy.

"I wonder if he really did think or if something inside just prompted him to do what he did without any reasoning on his part," replied Tommy.

"You mean you wonder if he acted by instinct," said Sammy.

"I can see how it might be possible that he did," replied Tommy. "When I planned this test I didn't see how instinct could possibly have anything to do with it, but now I'm not so sure."

"Well, I am!" declared Sue emphatically. "Never before did he ever have to get anything that way, and I don't believe any of his family ever had to. So how can you say that instinct had anything to do with it? Tell me that, Tommy Brown!"

Tommy laughed. "I didn't say that it had. I said that I could see how it may have had," replied Tommy.

"Well, I can't," Sammy declared. "How do you get that way?"

"I happened to remember something," replied Tommy.

"What?" Sue asked.

"Seeing Striped Chipmunk up in a maple tree this spring getting maple keys, the seeds you know. I saw him reach down from one limb and pull up a slender twig from below to get at the keys on it. I don't doubt his ancestors did it many times. I've seen squirrels get nuts that way, and you know Striped Chipmunk is a member of the Squirrel family. When you come to think of it he used the same idea in getting those peanuts," replied Tommy.

Cautiously he "walked the tightrope."

"I don't care if he did. He thought that out. I know he did. You needn't try to tell me, Tommy Brown, that that wasn't intelligence," declared Sue indignantly, and Sammy nodded in agreement.

Tommy's good-natured freckled face broadened in a grin. "I like to think so myself," said he, "because I believe that animals do reason. Just the same I can see now why some people wouldn't think that proof of anything more than instinctive action. It is one of those cases where there is room for a difference of opinion."

"I don't think so," asserted Sue.

Tommy merely grinned and went to tie some more peanuts on the strings for Striped Chipmunk. This time he put several in a small paper bag and suspended the bag. That bag didn't bother Striped Chipmunk at all. He pulled it up, tore it open and triumphantly carried off the peanuts. Did he act through instinct or reason? What do you think?

Sons and Daughters of Liberty Continue Program Despite Heat

The Sons and Daughters of Liberty are continuing an active program despite the summer heat. True Blue and Valley Forge Councils both have elected and installed officers.

Mrs. Mertie Poates, retiring councilor of True Blue Council, presided at the election, at which Mrs. Bessie Redmiles was chosen as her successor. Other officers were installed with her in a ceremony conducted by Mrs. Mignonette M. P. Harman and Mrs. Mae A. Etchison, past councilors, and Mrs. E. Viola Thompson, State treasurer.

They included: Associate councilor, Alfred Redmiles; vice councilor, Mrs. Ella Treynor; recording secretary, Mrs. Floda M. Reagan; associate recording secretary, Mrs. Ethel Windsor; treasurer, Mrs. Madge Mills; inside guard, Clayton Bean, and trustee for 13 months, Mrs. Mamie Howell.

The honor of past councilor was conferred on Mrs. Margaret Walters, who, with Past Councilor Mrs. Deborah Streitburger, was presented with a jewel from the council. Mrs. Redmiles appointed Mrs. Louise McDonald chairman for the good of the order and Mrs. Hattie Campbell pianist.

The next meeting will be tonight at 7 Fourth street northeast. A party will follow.

Valley Forge Council met, with Councilor Harvey W. Payne presiding, for election of officers. They were installed by State Deputy Mrs. Marion Pettit as follows: Councilor, Wilson L. Jones; associate councilor, Mrs. Irene Forehand; vice councilor, Sherman Redmiles; associate vice councilor, Mrs. Agnes Taliaferro; guide, Miss Bessie Browning; recording secretary, Mrs. Susie V. Reese; associate recording secretary, William Usher; financial secretary, Oscar J. Forehand; treasurer, Mrs. Ruth Bingham, jr.; ex-councilor, Harvey W. Payne; associate junior ex-councilor, Mrs. Mary Alice Payne; inside guard, Mrs. Morine Redmiles; outside guard, William Cheadle, and trustee for 18 months, Mrs. Mabel Hall.

The honor of past councilor was conferred on Mrs. Mary Reid Smith. Councilor Wilson Jones made the following appointments: Chairman for good of the order, Harvey W. Payne; committee on ways and means, Mrs. Mabel Hall, and publicity, Mrs. Edna F. Howard.

The next meeting will be tomorrow night at 808 I street northwest.

Washington Council, of which Mrs. Margaret Garrison is councilor, has made plans for a visit to the new home and rock gardens of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Fillmen at 2509 Brentwood road northeast for tea.

Mrs. Mary E. Nichols was hostess at her cottage for the members Saturday and Sunday at Deal Beach on the Bay. Mrs. Margaret Licariane, Mrs. Roberta Howard Barnes and Mrs. Lulu B. Jennings were received into membership. Mrs. Garrison appointed Mrs. Carrie Anderson chairman for the good of the order.

Hope Council No. 1, which is headed by Councilor Henry Gray, installed officers at its last meeting. State Deputy Mrs. Mary Reid Smith, assisted by past State councilors, officiated. State Councilor Mrs. Ethel G. Thorpe spoke on the progress of the order.

SEVERAL prominent Washingtonians are among the patrons of music who are at Tanglefoot, Mass., this summer, enjoying the Berkshire festival. They attended the three concerts last week and will attend the three being presented this week by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Serge Koussevitsky.

The party includes Miss Alice Clapp, of Washington, and her cousin, Miss Mary Heidrick, of New Jersey, who drove to Massachusetts from Miss Clapp's summer home, Lakewood, Lake Chautauqua, N. Y.; Mrs. Eugene Byrnes, her sister; Miss Jean Stier and Mrs. Walter B. Hilton, who joined them at Tanglewood, having gone directly from here. They are all staying at the Curtis Hotel.

Mrs. Byrnes is president of the Friday Morning Music Club and cochairman with Mrs. Foster Adams, of the Orchestra Guild.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

SHAMBATTLE AT 5 O'CLOCK

With the aid of a dozen lumps of sugar, some assorted hors d'oeuvres, some knives mounted on forks to represent cannon and a few high-ball glasses, any young diplomat at the Soviet or Jap embassies here can explain to you exactly what happened on the Russ-Jap frontier. All you have to be is gullible.

Ambassador Saito . . . Chaperon?

* * * *

Let's assume there's a hill called Chung-pank-tah in dispute. It's a sort of floating hill; sometimes it's on the Russ side of the line, again it's on the Jap side, and occasionally it floats through the air with the greatest of ease.

* * * *

Now, it may not be likely, yet it's not at all impossible for a young Russ diplomat and a young Jap diplomat to meet at a Washington cocktail party.

"Oh, Togo!" exclaims the deb of the year, a direct descendant of George Washington's coachman, "do tell us about the Chung-pank-tah affair! And here's Serge (pronounced not serge, as in blue serge, but Ser-gay, as in the Moscow Theater) to check up on you."

"—war games, with caviar"

This creates a situation. Both Togo and Serge must prove that his soldiers won a glorious victory, that his side didn't cross the frontier, that it never lost Chung-pank-tah, that it recaptured Chung-pank-tah, that the other side never got across the line, but was repulsed after brazenly invading sacred soil.

* * * *

Across the room Ambassador Saito toys with a tutti-frutti ice cream and throws Togo a long, inscrutable, dirty look . . . Those 20 young diplomats of his—the largest embassy staff in Washington—need a lot of chaperoning. . . . Is that deb pumping him, or is he pumping her?

* * * *

Togo goes to work with the lumps of sugar. Each one represents a battalion . . . A dish of sherbet is Chung-pank-tah, the holy mountain . . .

Serge goes into action with bits of toast covered with caviar, each one an armored tank . . .

Togo spills a Martini cocktail with his cuff to indicate the river . . .

Serge builds a pontoon bridge of pate de foie gras canapes . . .

The deb weakens the Jap forces by eating two caviar canapes.

* * * *

Now Serge is dropping olives in the sherbet, denoting airplane bombardment . . .

Togo brings up a whole battery of little frosted cakes, pink and brown . . .

Serge is camouflaging his tanks by covering them with potato chips, hoping to save them . . .

Togo's lumps of sugar are intrenched behind stalks of celery.

"—horseshoes on the Korean frontier"

A butler brings in more dishes of sherbet, and a crisis is averted . . . The Russians capture Pank-chung-tah, the Japs seize Tah-chung-pank . . . Hirohito's lumps of sugar drive back the Russians from Chung-tah-pank, and Stalin's caviar canapes force the Japs off the slopes of Pank-tah-chung.

* * * *

The deb is enthralled. It turns out that there are four hills on the frontier, after all, and next Friday there will be a map in Time Magazine showing all four of them . . . There's honor and glory enough for all, and what really happened out there on the Korean-Siberian-Manchurian border depends on which hill you were thinking about.

* * * *

But Togo, like his Jap brethren, is a grabby little fellow . . . He claims that he captured 73 Russ tanks, slew 499 Russian soldiers, didn't lose a man himself . . .

Serge, who after all has the realistic tradition of Chekov behind him, claims to have captured only 9 Jap tanks, to have killed only 41 Japs and to have lost 3 tanks and 7 men himself. Counselor Oumansky throws him an approving look: a man of the people, but an esthete. Serge will go far . . .

And out on the frontier the Russ soldiers and the Jap soldiers are pitching horseshoes across the frontier, oblivious to the victories being won in Moscow and Tokyo.

Mass to Be Said Today For Michael P. Cleary

Requiem mass for Michael P. Cleary, who died Monday at his home, 16 Q street northeast, will be said today at 8:30 a. m. at St. Martin's Catholic Church after brief services at the home. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mr. Cleary, who was 80, retired 25 years ago. He is survived by two daughters, Miss Nellie Cleary and Mrs. Mary Cleary Guiliani; one son, Francis Cleary, and three grandchildren.

Schrom Asks Less to Fight Fires in 1940

Chief's Budget $2,550 Under This Year's $2,435,620.

Brown Wants 156 More Police, With a New Station-House.

Fire Chief Charles E. Schrom yesterday asked the District Commissioners for less money to run his department during 1940 fiscal year than he will spend this fiscal year.

He placed his budget estimates for that year at $2,433,070, a sub of $2,550 under the present appropriation for the 1939 fiscal year of $2,435,620.

At the same time Police Superintendent Ernest W. Brown asked for 156 additional police and the establishment of a police precinct at Forty-second street and Benning road northeast, and would divide the territory now under the jurisdiction of the Eleventh Precinct.

Brown Asks Increase.

Maj. Brown asked for an appropriation of $4,284,104, or an increase of 12 per cent over the 1939 fiscal year appropriation of $3,799,545.

Chief Schrom proposed to purchase for the department four pumping engines, two aerial hook and ladder trucks, five chiefs' automobiles and two passenger automobiles, for a total of $76,500 during 1940.

This is $12,500 over the amount appropriated this year for the purchase of additional fire-fighting apparatus. The hook-and-ladder trucks will cost $17,500 each, Schrom stated.

The police department would be augmented by 6 officers and 50 policemen for the new precinct and 100 uniformed men for service throughout the city to aid in the suppression of crime and curbing traffic accidents.

Asks Six Mounted Police.

Maj. Brown also requested money for six mounted policemen to do traffic duty in downtown Washington, in addition to 138 new cruisers, motor cycles and patrol wagons.

Salaries for the 888 men composing the fire department amount to $2,206,000 of the total budget estimate. There is no change in this amount over the 1939 estimate.

A decrease of $16,000 in the estimates for 1940 was submitted by Chief Schrom under the heading of "repairs and improvements to buildings and grounds." He estimated it would require $20,000 for this item. A sum of $36,000 has been appropriated for this work this year. This includes the $16,000 amount for an adidtion and repairs to the No. 22 engine house.

Wants Heart Machine.

Chief Schrom asked for an additional $750 to purchase an electrocardiograph machine used in the treatment of cardiac disorders, common in both the fire and police departments.

Cardiac disorders, Schrom said, constitute one of the chief causes of retirements in both fire and police departments. For personal services in the department a sum of $5,820, an increase of $200 over the 1939 appropriation was requested.

Uniforms for the firemen will cost $23,000 for the year, Schrom stated. This is the same amount appropriated for this year. Repairs to the apparatus will require a sum of $40,000. This also, is no change from this year's appropriation. Fifteen thousand dollars will be expended for hose. Fuel will require $23,500.

Ten More Detectives.

Contingent expenses which include the purchase of the electrocardiagraph machine will amount to $23,250. This amount is $750, the price of the machine over the 1939 appropriation.

Maj. Brown asked the District Commissioners for $6,000 to permit the promotion of 10 additional detective sergeants, each to receive $600 additional pay. He proposes to add 25 men to the motorcycle squad. He stated the present staff of 62 men cannot meet the demands on this branch of service.

New equipment for the vehicular department includes 40 small cruisers, 5 patrol wagons, 45 motorcycles and 45 sidecars.

Medical College Asks PWA Fund For New Hospital

Richmond, Va., Aug. 10 (AP).—The Public Works Administration in Washington had under consideration today a request by the Medical College of Virginia for funds to assist in construction of a $1,500,000 18-story hospital to augment its present facilities.

Gov. Price, returning from Washington yesterday, disclosed the plans. He said the medical college's application together with other Virginia applications, were "in pretty good shape."

Dr. Lewis E. Jarratt, director of the hospital division, described the new hospital as the "key in our plans for a more extensive program for the future." He said the present facilities were adequate for the other branches of work.

Parade Tonight To Open D. C. Legion Parley

Hazen Will Address Units in Convention at Mayflower.

The three-day twentieth annual convention of the District Department, American Legion, will open at the Mayflower Hotel at 8 p. m. today after a parade leaving John Marshall place and Pennsylvania avenue at 7:15 p. m.

At the opening session Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen will make an address of welcome; Department Commander Thomas Mason, jr., will reply; Phil Conley, national vice commander, will speak, and Gen. Albert L. Cox, commanding the District National Guard, will make the principal address.

During the session citations of Distinguished Citizenship will be made to J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation; Maj. Ernest W Brown, superintendent of Metropolitan Police; Benjamin M. McKelway, managing editor of the Evening Star; Robert V. Fleming, president of the Riggs National Bank, and Isaac Gans, of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

Greetings will be extended by Mrs. Dorothy B. Harper, president, Legion Auxiliary; Fred G. Fraser, chef de chemin, and John E. McCabe, grand chef de gere, Forty and Eight, and Mrs. Helen E. McCabe, la chapeau departmental, Eight and Forty. Musical selections will be by Fort Stevens Post Drum and Bugle Corps and Sergt. Jasper Juniors Glee Club.

The parade will move west on Pennsylvania avenue from John Marshall place to Thirteenth street, north on L street and west to Connecticut avenue, after disbanding just after passing the reviewing stand. Grand marshall will be Col. Jonathan M. Wainwright, commandant of Fort Myer. Legion marshal will be William L. Collins, of Bunker Hill Post.

Closing night will be enlivened by election of a department commander. The field of ten candidates has apparently narrowed to two, Edward R. Dixon, departmental membership officer for the past two years, and James T. Brady, solicitor of the Veterans' Administration and commander of National Cathedral Post.

Dixon has made more than 400 visits to post meetings during the past two years and is said to be acquainted with more legionnaires here than any other member.

Cottage City, Md., Warns Motorists To Drive Slowly

Washington motorists were warned to drive slowly through Cottage City, Md., yesterday by the Keystone Automobile Club, which said it had been advised by Judge William A. Bobb of a drive on speeders. Judge Bobb told the club the strict enforcement program has reduced accidents 37 per cent compared with last year.

The Washington-Baltimore boulevard through Cottage City will be closed Saturday beginning at 1 p. m. to permit passage of a firemen's parade.

Morton Reports Drop In Va. Unemployed

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 10 (AP).—Thomas B. Morton, Virginia's commissioner of labor, saw a drop today in the number of unemployed in the State and said labor conditions in the State showed improvement.

Morton told a labor organization here yesterday that Danville textile mills had increased their employment and that conditions at some of the coal mines in the State were improving.

Smithsonian Experts Debunk Old Story of Montezuma's Zoo

17th Century 'Yellow Journalist' Rewrote Falsely 2 Eyewitnesses' Tales and Made It Stick, Though Patently False, Scientists Say.

The popular belief that Montezuma, high priest (not emperor) of Mexico, had a zoo of birds and animals for the education and entertainment of his people at the time of Cortez's conquest, was debunked yesterday by the Smithsonian Institution.

Ethnologists of the institution, tracing to their original sources statements that white men first saw North American bison there, pin the blame for the misconceptions on a sevententh century yellow journalist.

Antonio de Solis, "historiographer of the Indies," published a book on the conquest of Mexico in 1684. Although he had access to original documents which would have revealed the truth, he apparently combined tales for the sake of a good story.

Origin of the belief of Montezuma's zoo goes back to Bernal Diaz, one of Cortez's soldiers. He wrote of seeing a "house of idols" in which were many birds of brilliant plumage, "snakes with bells on their tails," two kinds of wolves, a "lion" and other animals. These animals were presumably used by priests for sacrifices in the temple. It is believed that this is the first historical reference to rattlesnakes.

While Diaz mentoined nothing like a bison, Baklyut, in interpolating accounts of the Coronado expedition of 1541, coined the expression "crooked backed oxen" to describe the bison. Solis, the bureau found in its research, simply combined the Diaz and Hakylut accounts for a good story.

Research brought out that honor for being the first white person to discover bison goes to Nunez Cabeza de Vaca, a survivor of the Narvaez expedition to Texas.

The idea of Montezuma's zoo, says the bureau, should have been discredited long ago if any had stopped to think about it. Provision of entertainment and education other than of a strictly religious nature would not have been in accord with Aztec custom.

Beauties Will Vie Tonight at Airport

"Miss Airport" and seven girls from communities in Virginia near Washington will be chosen from a score or so of entrants tonight in a beauty contest at Washington Airport pool to take part in a Statewide contest at Richmond. Twelve girls were entered last night, according to Al Stern, representative here of the Atlantic City Beauty Pageant.

Judges will be Norman Chase, of the Junior Board of Commerce; Harry Baker, general manager of the Wilson Line; Shirley Povich, of The Post; Bryan Morse, of the Herald, and representatives of each of the other Washington newspapers to be chosen today.

The contest will be held at 9 p.m. Four of the winners will be flown to Richmond by Eastern Air Lines, Stern said, the remaining four to be sent there by train or automobile.

Pickpocket Suspect To Be Returned Here

Detective Sergt. Frank Brass left yesterday for New York to return Samuel Gold, 45, for whom a warrant has been issued charging him with picking the pockets of Joseph Lazar, a civil engineer, of 1470 Irving street northwest, of $45 several months ago at a downtown theater. Police said Lazar identified a picture of Gold.

The prisoner, who was picked up by New York police, escaped here last month when he and a companion were accosted in front of the theater by Detective Sergeant J. K. Baker. Gold escaped but his companion was held on a vagrancy charge, later dismissed.

Storm Sets Stage For Holdup Here

Lightning, thunder and torrential rain dressed the stage last night for a lone white bandit who held up the night manager of O'Conner's Liquor Store, Sixth and C streets northwest, and escaped with $50.

The store is one and one-half blocks from police headquarters.

Paul Burke, 30, of 1331 East Capitol street, a former George Washington University athlete, told police he was alone in the store when a man entered, thrust a pistol in his direction and demanded the contents of the cash register. Pocketing these, he ordered Burke to lie down behind the counter and dashed out into the storm.

Hagerstown Asks Auditorium Grant

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Aug. 10.—Hagerstown made application for a PWA grant today for a convention hall seating 3,000 persons. It has been proposed and approved by city council to convert the first floor of the municipal markethouse into a convention hall and enlarge and improve the basement for the market. The present market building is of brick and steel construction and would not be changed except for a new front.

Elks Conclude Sessions With Parade, Dance

Thousands Watch Soap Box Derby Despite Rain at Hagerstown.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 10.—Elks from Maryland, Delaware and the District of Columbia closed their eighteenth annual convention tonight with a purple and white ball after witnessing a soap box derby and a mile long parade and awarding the Hagerstown Lodge the trustees' award for distinguished service during the year. The host lodge received the award for promoting the soap box derby.

Despite heavy showers which followed a severe thunderstorm early in the afternoon, thousands lined the course of the derby and watched the elimination heats in which 23 juveniles in miniature automobiles competed for the honor of representing Hagerstown in the National Derby later this month at Akron, Ohio.

The final business meeting this afternoon saw Philip A. Gayaut, of Washington, newly elected president take over the chair after he and other officers had been installed by Dr. Edward James McCormick, grand exalted ruler of the Elks.

Francis Petro, of Frederick, delivered the address in memory of Elks of the jurisdiction who died during the past year, while Judge Edwin S. Puller, Annapolis, outlined the history of the flag. The presentation of the trustees award to the Hagerstown Lodge was made by John E. Lynch, Washington.

The Elk's clown band of the Washington Lodge this afternoon entertained a number of children at the Washington County Orphans Home near Boonsboro. The band was led by Capt. John Reh.

The Washington Lodge, it was announced today had the largest delegation at the convention.

Parade winners were: In association jurisdiction — Largest unit, Washington Lodge; drum corps, Frederick; children's band, St. Dominic's, Baltimore; second, Washington; prettiest girl, drum major, Havre de Grace Drum Corps.

Colored Bridge Meet Slated for Next Week

The sixth annual national championship tournament of the American Bridge Association, national organization of colored bridge players, will begin at noon Monday at the Lincoln Colonade, 1215 U street northwest.

Woman Plunges From Automobile; Husband Is Held

Mrs. Margaret Dorsch, wife of John L. Dorsch, 27, of the 700 block of Jefferson street northwest, was treated at St. Agnes Hospital in Baltimore for minor lacerations last night after police said she fell or was hurled from the running board of her husband's automobile near Waterloo, Md., on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard. Dorsch was held for investigation by Maryland State police.

Authorities said Dorsch told them he had a quarrel with his wife and halted the automobile while she got out. He said she stepped on the running board to enter the machine as he drove off. Dorsch was taken in custody by Maryland Trooper C. C. Serman who was patrolling the highway and recognized his license number as that of an automobile wanted in connection with a hit-run case.

Witnesses told police they thought the automobile had struck a woman standing beside the road. Dorsch is the son of Lewis Dorsch, one of the founders of the Dorsch Baking Co., which was acquired by the Continental Baking Co.

Deac Lyman Joins United Aircraft

Lauren D. (Deac) Lyman, veteran member of the Washington staff of the New York Times and Pulitzer Prize winner, has been appointed assistant to the president of the United Aircraft Corporation, it was announced last night.

In 1936 Lyman won the Pulitzer prize for an exclusive story on the departure of Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh from the United States. The story was given to him personally by the flier.

Lyman has been with the Times 19 years and will take up his new work in New York September 1.

C. C. James Sails Today For Zurich Conference

C. Clinton James, past president of the United States Building and Loan League, will sail from New York today to take part in the International Congress of Building Societies at Zurich, Switzerland.

James, a Washingtonian, will be one of 26 American delegates at the congress. Other Americans who will take part will be H. F. Cellarius, of Cincinnati and Morton Bodfish, of Chicago. Both are officers of the congress and will speak at its sessions.

Owners to Be Permitted to Cover Premiums in $5 Payments.

Regulations Are Issued for Liability Law Effective Aug. 20.

Taxicab owners will be permitted to pay $5 weekly on their liability insurance premium, it was announced, yesterday by J. Balch Moor, superintendent of insurance.

At the same time Moor issued a list of regulations governing the new law, which becomes effective August 28. Drivers must pay premiums in advance, and in case of weekly payments, the initial payment must be for not less than two weeks. Thereafter, payments must be made five days in advance of each week.

The rules require each company to keep a daily record of all accidents, claims, suits, judgments and settlements and make monthly reports from such reports to the superintendent of insurance. Payments on all claims must be made in every case by the company's check.

All mutual companies are required to set aside in reserve not less than 75 per cent of all net premiums received for the specific payment of claims, taxes and dividends to policyholders unless otherwise required by the superintendent of insurance. The remaining 25 per cent the company may use for contingent expenses.

Fifteen per cent of the 25 per cent remaining may be used for equipment, supplies, rents, salaries, fees, commissions and other expenses required to operate the company. The remainder is set aside for the expense of investigation and adjustment, court costs and services of attorney.

Before the company, mutual or stock, pays any dividend or reward to any policyholder, it must first have the approval of the superintendent of insurance.

The monthly fee for taxicabs has already been set at $21. Sightseeing buses for eight or more passengers have a monthly premium of $17.50 or a weekly premium of $4.17. Public and private livery have a monthly premium of $10 or $2.37 weekly.

Mutual companies are prohibited by the regulations from contracting to pay any salary or fee to any person until receiving the approval of the superintendent of insurance.

18 WASHINGTON: THURSDAY, AUGUST 11, 1938 X*

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

BASEBALL'S SIDESHOWS.

Mr. Will Harridge, who middle-roaded it nicely from a job as the late Ban Johnson's secretary into the $25,000-per-year presidency of the American League, so far forgot himself the other day as to cast an aspersion.

In an interview with George Kirksey, of the United Press, Mr. Harridge popped off for the first time in his official career. Ordinarily the nub of a Harridge interview is that "baseball is due for one of its best seasons" or that "it will be an eight-club race" or that "the rainy season is with us earlier this year."

POVICH.

But the other day, as we were saying, Mr. Harridge popped off. He said "The American League will stick to the main show, giving the fans successful high-grade baseball without any hoopla stuff." He added that the yellow ball, night baseball, foot races and "ballyhoo men" for coaches, aren't yet necessary to the success of the American League.

Of course there was no doubt whom Mr. Harridge was talking about. In general he was taking a slap at the National League, but specifically he was giving the works to the Brooklyn Dodgers who cheerfully own up to all of the sins Harridge cited such as the "ballyhoo men" and the yellow ball and the foot races.

And it was inevitable that Mr. Larry MacPhail, executive vice president of the Dodgers, should have something to say in reply. In inciting the rebuttal by MacPhail, Harridge made a bad match. MacPhail not only talks louder, but much more forcibly and with more of a flare for getting home his points. Not only that, but he can be downright mean about it. He is tough, MacPhail is. In case you've frogotten, he was one of the little band of Tennessee men with the A. E. F. who gaily set out to kidnap the Kaiser and almost got away with it.

MacPhail Makes Rebuttal.

So it was not exactly surprising that MacPhail sizzled when he read Mr. Harridge's remarks. "This is a free country," MacPhail said by way of prefacing his reply and inferring that the National League's affairs were none of Mr. Harridge's business.

What MacPhail resented particularly, however, was Harridge's crack about "ballyhoo men" as coaches, and he undoubtedly has something there. Because the chap whom Mr. Harridge chose to call a "ballyhoo man" with some derision is none other than the portly gentleman known as Babe Ruth.

It ill becomes the president of the American League to cast any aspersions on Babe Ruth. In the dark days of big league baseball after the Black Sox scandal in 1920 when the game was threatened with the loss of public confidence and millions in stadiums and real estate were menaced, it was the Babe who recaptured public interest in the game with his home run feats.

If any one man pulled baseball out of the doldrums in that era—the National League as well as the American—it was Ruth. His homers gave the game a new peg on which to hang its bid for renewed faith. In baseball's hour of need the Babe came along to keep the game fresh and alive.

Baseball fans will never believe that the American League played fair with Ruth. He drew down nearly $500,000 in salaries and honorariums, it is true, but at the end of his playing career when he yearned for a crack at managing a big league club, the American League turned him down cold.

The National League it was which finally gave Ruth a chance as a player with the Boston Braves, and then after an unhappy term for Ruth there, the National gave the Babe another chance. That was two months ago when MacPhail signed him as a coach with the Dodgers.

Dodgers Win at Box Office.

It ill becomes Harridge, also, to criticize the National League for what he calls its sideshows and hoop-la. In baseball they pay off on results and the sixth-place Dodgers, with Ruth and their footraces and night baseball and yellow ball experiments, will probably show more of a profit at the end of the season than most first division clubs in the American League.

Without any shame whatsoever, MacPhail continues to give Brooklyn fans their shows along with their baseball. Last night for example, in an Ebbetts Field game against the Phillies, MacPhail lured the customers with a fat-man's race between the stoutest members o the two teams and a wheelbarrow race in which the contestants were blindfolded and spun around in the pitcher's box until they were dizzy and then sent on a hunt for home plate with the winner collecting a purse. And through the gate came three times as many fans as the number which ordinarily would watch a Brooklyn-Phillies game.

As for night baseball, which Harridge mentioned with some derision, the American League can assume no holier-than-thou attitude on that point. Because after ridiculing the entire idea four years ago, the A. L. last season voted permission for the St. Louis Browns to try the experiment. The American League would have night ball except for the fact that A. L. club owners are afraid to make the necessary outlay for lighting systems.

Harridge's Memory Lax.

When Harridge made his sarcastic mention of National League sideshow tactics he must have forgotten that his own league has not been exactly free from such stunts. In fact, it was the American League which first went in for the extra-curricular stuff in an effort to lure the fans into the park.

Harridge must have forgotten that he has in his league a gentleman named Clark Griffith, whose circus-stuff has been part and parcel of Washington baseball for several years. It was Griffith who first sponsored the clown act of Altrock and Schacht, and down through the years he has come up with his side-show stunts when interest in his team flagged.

Not so many years ago, when the Nats were drawing little besides their own breaths, Griffith packed 20,000 customers into his park by signing a bewhiskered House of David pitcher and starting him in the ball game. Even now, Griffith is offering Ben Chapman $200 to run against his man George Case in a 100-yard dash for the speed championship of the league.

If those kind of stunts are indeed a sin against baseball, then it behooves Harridge to set his own house in order before he makes any cracks about National League ballyhoo men.

Warneke Holds Bucs to 4 Hits As Cards Win by 5-to-0 Count

Gas House Gang Triumphs, 5 to 0, in 7-Inning Game Halted by Rain.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 10.—Lon Warneke rationed the ravenous Pittsburgh Pirates on four hits for seven innings today to give the St. Louis Cardinals a 5-to-0 triumph when rain halted the first game of a scheduled doubleheader.

Backed by Warneke's air-tight artistry which followed only six Pirates to get on base and none to pass second, the Cardinals clambered all over Rookie Bob Klinger, a former St. Louis farm hand, now nursing a sore arm.

Aided by Enos Slaughter's triple the Cards scored three times in the first frame and continued to knit their hits into runs—one in the fifth and another in the sixth—until Klinger finally gave way to Fireman Mace Brown in the latter inning.

The second contest was postponed, leaving the Buccaneers with an even break for the series and a day to rest tomorrow before they tangle with the Chicago Cubs, their Western worry.

It was Klinger's third successive loss since he rejoined the club after having a specialist treat his arm in Philadelphia. He now has won eight and lost four.

Rain Prevents Ambers, Armstrong Title Bout

Fight Re-Scheduled Wednesday Night; 8,000 Fans Greet Postponement Decision With Cheers, Boos.

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, Aug. 10.—Before even a single preliminary blow had been struck, rain descended in such sudden and copious quantity at the Polo Grounds tonight that it washed out the 15-round match between Lightweight Champion Lou Ambers, of Herkimer, N. Y., and his dusky challenger, Henry Armstrong, of Los Angeles.

The elements, adding a climax wallop to a fistic show already hard hit at the box office, knocked the match off the outdoor calendar completely. After a short confab with managers of the principals, Promoter Mike Jacobs announced the bout would be held in Madison Square Garden next Wednesday night, August 17. Official approval to this rearrangement came promptly from Brig. Gen. John J. Phelan, chairman of the State Athletic Commission.

Jacobs at first considered putting on the title match in the rain, dispensing with the preliminaries to do so, but he was overruled by his associates as well as by the gathering intensity of the downpour. It had been raining hard for nearly a half hour when the promoter at 7:30 p. m. (E. S. T.) announced the postponement to a crowd of approximately 8,000 onlookers, including about 1,500 ringside ticket-holders who had taken shelter in the lower sections of the grandstand.

Booes, Cheers Greet Decision.

Mingled booes and cheers greeted the suspension of all hostilities for the night, but it proved a practical decision. It was still raining hard an hour after the preliminary card was scheduled to get under way. Even though the spectators could have observed the proceedings from under cover, with plenty of room to spare, the ring would have been in no condition for fisticuffs.

Already a big financial disappointment, the bout had drawn an advance sale estimated at $25,000, notwithstanding the attraction of seeing Armstrong seek his third world championship within less than 10 months. The sensational Negro already holds the world featherweight and welterweight crowns.

Promoter Jacobs announced the cash customers, paying as high as $16.50 for ringside chairs, could get their money back or exchange their rain checks for tickets to the match under the Garden roof one week from tonight.

"I stood willing to take a loss, regardless of circumstances, if the fans, as well as others concerned, wanted me to put the show on," said Jacobs. "It's bad luck all around, but we want to be fair to the fighters, as well as the public."

Will Return to Camps.

Even before the weather took a sour turn the match, from a box office standpoint, was a fiasco as an outdoor show. The big National League ball park was semideserted.

Rain began to fall shortly after 7 p. m. The first pair of preliminary fighters reported with their handlers at the ringside, just before the downpour reached its height, but they never set foot in the ring.

Both principals will return to their New Jersey training camps tomorrow, Ambers to Summit and Armstrong to Pompton Lakes. They will weigh in again next Wednesday. Ambers just made the class limit, 135 pounds, on the official scales today. Armstrong weighed 133¼, a fraction under what he scaled two months ago, when he took the welter crown from Barney Ross.

Rally in 9th to Win Tilt; Allen Is Batted Out.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Aug. 10.—A ninth inning rally, climaxed with Hal Trosky's fifteenth home run of the year, gave the Cleveland Indians a 9 to 6 win over the St. Louis Browns today. Billy Sullivan hit for the circuit in the second before the Browns knocked out Johnny Allen.

Bees Wallop Giants, 8 to 2

Launch 16-Hit Attack; Rout Melton Early.

Boston, Aug. 10.—The weak-hitting Boston Bees exploded a 16-hit attack off five pitchers today to wallop the New York Giants 8 to 2.

Dick Errickson, although tagged for 11 Giant hits, was effective in the pinches in chalking up his second win of the season. The Giants left 13 runners stranded on the bags.

Cliff Melton, stringbean southpaw, lasted just through the first inning and was charged with the defeat when the Bees reached him for three runs in the opening frame. Melton's two-base wild throw let two of the runs score.

Vince DiMaggio, Johnny Cooney, Debs Garms and Elbie Fletcher paced the Boston attack with three hits each.

Argyle Ten Beats Murray for Title

With C. White pitching 3-hit ball, Argyle yesterday blanked Murray Co., 6-0, to win the championship of the Fourteenth Street Businessmen's Softball League.

The victory, its sixteenth in succession, qualified Argyle to enter the city-wide tournament to decide Washington's representative for the national championship at Chicago.

"Red" Fletcher hit a homer with one in the sixth.

Entries for D. C. Swim Meet to Close Tonight

Entries for the annual District of Columbia A. A. U. swimming championships, which will be held at Takoma Monday night, close tonight at 6 o'clock.

A double incentive is offered entries, for the Washington team that will meet Baltimore in a dual meet August 21 is to be selected from winners in this meet. These winners also will be recognized as local champions.

Race-Goer Wins $3,000 Contest.

Chicago, Aug. 10 (AP).—Miss June Marks, Kenosha, Wis., picked all the winners in Washington Park's first seven races today and won a $3,000 amateur handicapping contest prize.

It was the first time since inauguration of the contest that a racegoer had won the daily prize, which starts at $1,000 each Monday and increases $1,000 each day an entrant fails to pick the winners of the first seven races. On Saturdays the total of the prizes not awarded during the week is paid to the patron picking the most winners in seven races. Last Saturday two women split a $7,000 pool.

200 Watch Redskins In First Grid Practice

Thirty-Seven Players Report for Drills; Baugh Arrives by Plane for Afternoon Workout.

By Jack Munhall.

With a derisive whoop for the hot weather man, a daring band of Washington Redskins, swapped war paint and head dress for more comfortable shorts and jerseys yesterday to swelter through their first football practices of the season at Ballston Stadium.

Pointing for a second successive National Professional League championship and for the All-Star Collegiate game in Chicago August 31, the 'Skins were hustled through morning and afternoon workouts by Head Coach Ray Flaherty and Assistant Roy Baker.

Thirty-six players, of whom 18 were rookies, answered the morning call. Notable absentees were Slingin' Sam Baugh, Andy Farkas, Roy Young, Max Krause, Ed Britt and Johnny Sprida.

Baugh, however, arrived by plane just before lunch and participated in the afternoon drill. Farkas, the Detroit U. backfield sensation of last season, will join the team immediately after opposing it in the Chicago All-Star game. Young, Texas A. & M. tackle, will hook on in Dallas after a Redskin exhibtion there later this month. Krause is mysteriously A. W. O. L.; Sprida is expected soon, and Britt wired Coach Flaherty yesterday that he has been sick and will report in a few days.

The morning practice was not open to the public, but a shirt-sleeved crowd of about 200 was in the stands for the later session. The workouts consisted mostly of limbering exercises, although Baugh, Riley Smith and newcomers Jim Abitt and Leroy (Soup) Campbell passed to other backs and ends.

In anticipation of larger crowds which are expected when scrimmaging starts the middle of next week, Redskin officials have equipped the Stadium with an amplifying system which identifies the players.

Among the interested spectators were Cliff Battles, who has departed the Redskin line-up for a Columbia coaching position, and Tuffy Leemans, backfield ace of the New York Giants, the Skins' most formidable Eastern rivals.

Leemans, who said he was scouting the Redskins more closely this year because he gave the Giants the wring dope on 'em last season, seemed anxious to look over George (Automatic) Karamatic, the former Gonzagan who is expected to partially fill Battles' shoes.

Campbell also drew considerable attention as he southpawed accurate passes to Charley Malone and Wayne Millner. Campbell handled himself well and was as impressive as Baugh, himself, when on the throwing end of snappy, bulletlike heaves.

The squad in general appeared in excellent condition. Only Ed Justice, fullback, seems likely to offer a conditioning problem. Justice appears considerably underweight and drawn, although he insists he has not been ill.

The local contingent of Pat Brady and Clem Stralka, Georgetown guards; Joe Anthonavage, Catholic U. guard, and Jay Turner, George Washington fullback, was on hand. Brady and Turner appear in midseason shape already, due teo summer jobs, and for that reason are a jump ahead of the others in their efforst to stick with the team.

Workouts will continue daily at Ballston Stadium, in the morning at 10 and in the aftrenoon at 2:30.

Rick Ferrell Goes After Wild Throw

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Rick Ferrell, Washington catcher, goes after a wild throw as Joe Glenn, Yankee catcher, scores on Monte Pearson's hit in second inning of the game yesterday at New York. Basil is the umpire.

Kelley Walks Glenn in 10th To End Tilt

Case, Simmons, Lewis Hit Homers; Errors Prove Costly.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Aug. 10.—In a tragedy of errors, climaxed by a sour pitching demonstration in the tenth inning, the Nats lost two commanding leads and a ball game to the Kankees this afternoon.

The score was 12 to 11 in favor of the Yankees and it was one of the more horrible of their ball games that the Nats committed today. Playing as if grimly determined to lose the ball game, the Nats tossed five damaging errors into the proceedings—three by Buddy Lewis—and gave the Yankees eight unearned runs.

The sad denouement for the Nats in the tenth inning was quite in keeping with their pathetic fielding exhibition. After George Case, with an eighth-inning home run, had tied the score at 11-11, the Yankees won in the tenth almost without a struggle.

Kelley Fills Bases.

Patience was the chief virtue of the Yankees in that tenth inning. After Myril Hoag had led off the inning with a single and was forced at second base on DiMaggio's attempted sacrifice, Harry Kelley pitched the ball game away. He walked Gehrig and Selkirk to fill the bases, and then after Gordon popped up for the second out, Kelley sent the 8,100 customers home happy by walking Glenn to force the winning run across.

The finger of shame points strongly at Buddy Lewis. The Nats' young third baseman socked the Yankee pitching for a single, a triple and a home run, but he couldn't drive the runs in as fast as he let them in with his three misplays around third base. In the second inning, with errors on two successive plays, Lewis helped the Yankees to five unearned runs.

Elon Hogsett was the victim of three Washington errors in that second inning. The Nats had a 2-to-0 lead at the end of the first and came back in the third to go in front, 6 to 5. After the Yankees tied the score at 6 to 6, the Nats came up with three runs in the fourth and one in the fifth, to go in front, 10 to 8. But a four-run Yankee uprising in the sixth put the Yanks ahead, 11 to 10. Then, in the eighth, Case tied the game with his homer, which served only to delay the Nats' ultimate defeat.

Nats Weaken in Second.

The Nats began to operate on Monte Pearson right off the bat. Chase drew a walk, Lewis tripled to deep left-center and Bonura contributed a deep fly which put the team in a 2-0 lead.

But in the next inning the Nats' infield collapsed behind Chief Hogsett. The Yanks scored a legitimate run when Glenn doubled to left, but the rest of their runs for the inning were gift affairs. Glenn took third on a wild throw by Travis, and on Pearson's grounder, Lewis threw wild in an attempt to nip Glenn at the plate. On the next play, Crosetti's grounder was muffed by Lewis. Rolfe's single to center scored another pair of runs, an infield out accounted for a fourth and Gehrig's single drove in the fifth.

The Nats bounced right back to score four runs in the third and drive Pearson from the box. Travis drove in a pair with a single to right and Myer scored Travis with a single to left. After Joe Vance replaced Pearson, Rick Ferrell singled to score Myer.

That 6-5 lead shrunk to a tie score in the Yankees' half when

McLin Wins Rich Hambletonian Classic in Straight Heats

40,000 Trot Fans Watch Famed Race

Long Key, Favorite, Is Badly Beaten After Breaking Stride.

By the Associated Press.

Goshen, N. Y., Aug. 10.—Lawrence B. Sheppard proved the wisdom of his $20,000 investment today when McLin trotted to a straight-heat victory in the Hambletonian, blue ribbon event of light harness racing.

At home on Good Time Park's triangular track, where he received his preparation for trotting's richest race, the bay son of Mr. McElwyn—Ethelinda turned back the bid of nine other high-ranking 3-year-olds, including Long Key, the heavily played favorite, owned by E. J. Merkle, of Columbus, Ohio.

McLin earned the winner's share of $38,692, amounting to $19,944.30.

The crowd of more than 40,000, enjoying the sport under perfect weather conditions, made Long Key the even-money favorite and established McLin the second choice at 3 to 1. But when it came to racing, the favorite faded badly, while Henry Thomas drove McLin home in 2:02¼ in the first heat and 2:02¾ in the second.

Long Key, with Trainer-Driver Ben White seeking his third victory, received fifth money in the final standing largely because of his fourth in the final mile after finishing eighth in the opening brush. In both miles he broke stride and lost what chance he had of upholding his role as favorite.

Second money went to Earl F. Shropshire's Earl's Princess Martha, of St. Petersburg, Fla. a filly so lightly regarded that she was included in the unique system of auction betting. She finished second in the first mile and seventh in the second. Champlain, owned by William Hughes, of Cleveland, was third in the final recokoning; fourth went to Royal Spencer, flying the silks of Homer Biery, of Butler, Pa., and sixth and last to the Duchess, representing Count Mangelli, of Milan, Italy.

McLin, showing no tendency to break under Thomas' steady hand, did not leave the issue long in doubt in either heat. He figured in delaying the start of the first mile for 15 minutes, but when Steve Phillips gave the word "Go," the bay colt was away like a flash. Royal Spencer showed the way around the first turn. Then Thomas loosened up the reins, gave McLin his head for a few strides, and the brilliant blue and orange silks of Hanover were out in front, never to be headed.

Royal Spencer and Champlain trailed McLin in that order to the half-mile pole, but by that time the Hanover colt was two lengths in front and trotting mighty fast, as evidenced by the time of 1:$1¼. The field closed in on the run to the three-quarter pole, but McLin never faltered. Long Key made his bid just as McLin hit the three-quarter mile post in 1:32¼, but broke stride, and Thomas sent his horse on to score by three lengths over Earl's Princess Martha. The Princess just got up to nose out Royal Spencer and the Duchess.

The second heat was just a repetition of the first except that McLin

Trotting without a hobble, McLin, owned by Lawrence B. Sheppard, of Hanover, Pa., won the rich Hambletonian race, the harness world's racing classic, at Goshen, N. Y., yesterday. McLin here leads the field to the wire in the second and final heat. William Hughes' Champlain is second in this heat.

Steve's New Knockout Punch Sends George Into Real Work

By Lewis F. Atchison.

News that Steve Mamakos has developed a knockout punch overnight yesterday sent George Abrams, his prospective opponent, scurrying to the gym, where, behind locked and barred doors, he drilled on a righthand uppercut which he feels confident will jar the Greek loose from his tonsils.

Abrams himself is accustomed to developing surprisingly impotent kayo punches overnight, but this time he feels he has hit on the proper prescription for the durable Greek. George knows Steve is easy to hit. After his first fight with him he said Mamakos comes up before you like a big balloon and can be hit without fear of much in return.

The Greek walks in with arms held high and head slightly lowered. He's hard to hook with either hand, but an uppercut, well, that's an entirely different matter. A good puncher can almost drive an uppercut clean through his boiler-plate middle, and Abrams insists he's going to be a good puncher come Monday night.

He intends to knock Steve so cold even Admiral Byrd will wait for the spring before going after him with a dog sled, but that's a large order. The Southwest pugilist is a sturdy campaigner, and absorbs punishment like a bath sponge.

Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn, who is always comparing somebody with somebody else, yesterday likened Steve to old Joe Grimm, of Philadelphia, considered one of the greatest "takers" in history. (and please don't call him one of the greatest tankers in history, Mr. Printer). Grimm was no fairy tale author, but a good, rough gent who took it like a catcher's mitt. He thought nothing of giving away 15 to 25 pounds for a fight.

Musty old records recovered from old Ahearn files revealed that Grimm was a middleweight possessed of a granite-like jaw, a concrete tummy, and a marathon runner's endurance. He fought Jack Johnson, Stanley Ketchell and Bob Fitzsimmons, and none could budge him. Not until he was in the twilight of his career did he hit the deck, and then it took a good puncher, Sailor Burke, to send him down.

Mamakos, similar as he is to Grimm, is better in one respect—he hits back a little harder and more frequently than did the veteran. Grimm was strictly a catcher, but Mamakos throws punches like a windmill in a breeze, although he has yet to flatten any opponent. Still, you can't blame a guy for trying, as he will Monday night when Abrams comes out of his corner to meet him.

Link Stars In Practice

D.C. Golfers Prepare for National Tourney.

Washington's four qualifiers for the National Public Links championship, that gets under way in Cleveland August 22 and continues through the 27th, practiced over the Congressional course yesterday, and may play at Beaver Dam and Indian Spring before leaving for the tournament.

City Champion Andy Oliveri, Ted Burrows and Jimmy Gipe played Congressional and reported satisfactory rounds. Bob Morris, runner-up to Oliveri, was unable to play.

Burrows, three-time former city champion and eight times representative in the national event, plans to leave Sunday with his family, take a round-about trip via Niagara Falls, and arrive in Cleveland Wednesday, in time for four days of practice.

Oliveri and Morris are scheduled to leave early Tuesday morning, while Gipe is undecided whether to leave with the youngsters, or two days later. S. G. Loeffler, municipal course concessionnaire, who sponsors the local players in the championship, may take the trip later should the team make a good showing in the qualifying round.

It is not believed, however, that either Loeffler or a representative will seek the 1940 championship. Baltimore is supposedly in line for the 1939 tourney over the Mount Pleasant course.

Oliveri made the best showing of last year's contingent in San Francisco, losing in the second round of match play to Bruce McCormick, the 1938 champion. The year Claude Rippy, now member of Congressional, was finalist and co-medalist, losing to Pat Abbott in New York.

Pepper, Overnight Meet Tomorrow

The second chapter of the top softball feud of the Washington-Baltimore area will be presented tomorrow night at Ballston Stadium, where the Dr. Pepper ten, of Washington, faces the Overnight Transportation team, of Baltimore.

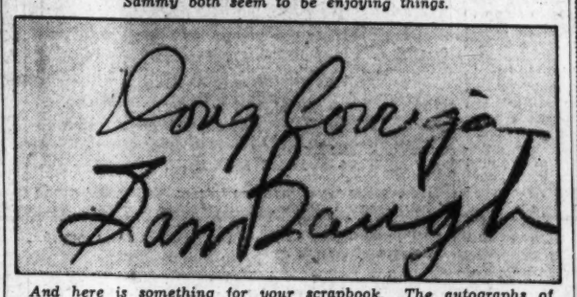
The two teams met in Baltimore a few weeks ago and the meeting at that time resulted in a perfect ball game—for each team. Not a man reached first base for either team in nine full innings, the game ending as a 0 to 0 deadlock.

Foes of that night were Abe Rosenfeld, for Dr. Pepper, and Izzy Katzen, for the Oriole City men, and these two gents will face on the mound tomorrow night.

A preliminary game is scheduled for 8 p. m. between Old Milwaukee and Maritime Commission.

Baugh and an Irishman!

Sammy Baugh (right), ace passer of the world champion Washington Redskins and the newest member of The Washington Post sports staff, took Doug Corrigan in tow last night at the reception held for the Atlantic flier at the National Press Club. Doug and Sammy both seem to be enjoying things.



And here is something for your scrapbook. The autographs of Sammy and Doug together. Baugh will stage a special peformance tomorrow on the Ellipse field, where the finals of the "Sammy Baugh Pass Competition" will be held.

Garcia Challenges Henry Armstrong

New York, Aug. 10 (AP).—George Parnassus, manager of hard-hitting Ceferino Garcia, today filed a challenge on Garcia's behalf for a welterweight championship match with Henry Armstrong and posted $2,000 with the New York State Athletic Commission as evidence of good faith.

The commission accepted the check but pointed out that Armstrong, who seeks Lou Ambers' lightweight title tonight, has a period of grace before he need defend the welterweight title.

Government Net Play Will Start August 20

The annual Government tennis tournament will get under way Saturday, August 20, on the Potomac Park courts. Competition will be in men's and women's singles and doubles.

nEtry fees are $2 for singles and $4 for doubles and must be paid before the draw. Entries are being received at the Tennis Shop, 1019 Fifteenth street northwest.

Tomorrow's Day Sam Baugh Reveals His Passing Prowess

Ace of Redskin Backfield Will Judge Contest for Youngsters and Show How He Does It.

Pass-catching by a pair of masters of the art as well as pass-throwing is on the program of "Sammy Baugh Day," scheduled or the Ellipse tomorrow from 3 to 4:30 p. m.

Assisting Slingin' Sammy in his demonstration of forward-passing technique will be the two star ends of the Redskins—Wayne Millner and Charley Malone.

Coach Ray Flaherty yesterday consented to excuse Millner and Malone from the Redskins' daily practice in order that they might participate in the reception to Baugh.

Slingin' Sammy, recent addition to The Post sports staff as a football commentator, will give his passing demonstration in conjunction with the forward-passing carnival sponsored by The Post.

Baugh's exhibition is scheduled on the latter part of the afternoen's program in order that Government workers may be able to view the show.

At 3 o'clock, following the introduction of Baugh over the loudspeaker system, 43 playground champions of Washington, 16 years old and under, will toe the mark in the finals of the championship tournament. Each youth will be limited to two throws with playground officials, headed by Richard S. Tennyson, supervising the competition.

Baugh will be the judge of the winning throws and will present the prizes to the winners.

With Malone and Millner on the receiving end of Baugh's passes, Washington fans will be viewing the combination which virtually brought the national professional championship to the city last season. It was the deftness of Malone at snaring Baugh's passes that won several early season games for the Redskins, and in the championship battle at Chicago it was Millner who twice grabbed Baugh passes and raced to touchdowns against the Bears.

Baugh, who will comment on both professional and college football in The Post sports pages as well as write a weekly instructive article, will start his series of stories in The Post on Sunday morning.

District Printers Win in Baseball Title Tourney

St. Louis, Aug. 10 (AP).—Five teams—St. Louis, Baltimore, Detroit, New York and Washington—remained in the running tonight for the twenty-eighth annual Union Printers international baseball championship.

St. Louis, by defeating Baltimore, 12 to 6, after piling up an early 7-to-0 advance, took full possession of first place in the standings with three victories and no losses. It was Baltimore's first defeat.

Trounced for the second time, entrants from Chicago, Cincinnati and the twin cities were eliminated today. Two defeats count a team out. Pittsburgh and Indianapolis were eliminated yesterday.

In other games today, Detroit nosed out Chicago, 12 to 11, New York defeated Cincinnati, 12 to 3, and Washington won from the Minneapolis-St. Paul aggregation, 5 to 3.

Baltimore, Detroit, New York and Washington now have a record of two victories and one defeat each. In tomorrow's play, St. Louis will meet Washington and Detroit will oppose Baltimore. New York drew a bye.

Durocher Fined.

New York, Aug. 10 (AP).—Shortstop Lippy Leo Durocher, of the Brooklyn Dodgers, was fined $50 today by National League President Ford Frick for a run-in with Umpire Tiny Parker in yesterday's Dodger-Phillies game.

Mrs. Willis Sharpe Kilmer's Lucky Omen Wins Feature at Saratoga

Mars Shield Game Second In Big Race

Cross Keys Takes Feature at Narragansett as 20,000 Watch.

By the Associated Press.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 10.—Lucky Omen, sporting the canary and white silks of Mrs. Willis Sharpe Kilmer's Fairfields Stable, raced to his second straight success here today when he easily defeated nine other class "C" horses in the 1-mile Northumberland Handicap. The iron gray son of Gino, which scored at 6 furlongs in his recent outing here, came from close off the pace to breeze home two lengths in the van under Eddie Arcaro.

Mars Shield, representing Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' Milky Way Farm, was a game second, after being freshened up since her Lincoln Fields campaign last June. To make it a monopoly for owners of the fair sex, Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs' Jesting annexed the show, another four lengths behind.

Racing over a dead track, Lucky Omen completed the 8 furlongs in 1:39 2-5 under 114 pounds. The light-coated colt paid 7 to 2, closing a slight favorite over Chocalula.

Cross Keys Wins Narragansett Feature.

By the Associated Press.

Pawtucket, R. I., Aug. 10.—Cross Keys, paired with Dixieland as the D. B. Midkiff entry, today led 13 rivals to the wire in the Betsy Williams Stakes' $5,000 added 6-furlong dash for 3-year-old fillies, feature at Narragansett Park.

A midweek crowd of about 20,000 saw Cross Keys, by Pharamond III out of Latch Key, close with a terrific rush through the stretch to just catch Wheatley Stable's Lassie, 6-5 favorite in the unwieldy field, and capture the big end of the purse, $5,330.

Custer Wins In Net Play

Bob Custer, Western High School tennis ace who is representing Gallinger Playground in the senior playgrounds tourney, yesterday was sent three stiff sets by Harvey Kushner, of Raymond, before advancing to the quarter-finals. The scores were 6—4, 4—6, 6—3.

Also moving into the round of eight were Arthur Abel, of Georgetown; Gus Plakas, of Columbia Recreation Center, and Buddy Watts, of Twin Oaks.

In today's feature match, Custer tackles Arthur Abel.

Boesch, Olson to Headline Mat Card at Griffith Stadium Tonight

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Paul Boesch, the sun-kissed Californian, and Cliff Olson, the sun-burned Swedish strangler, will air their troubles in public tonight at Griffith Stadium in one portion of a triple-decker attraction sponsored by Joe Turner.

Abe Coleman, underslung torso-twister, faces Emil Dusek in another featured bout, and for those who like their wrestling on a wholesale scale the promoter has arranged a battle-royal involving a half-dozen rugged individuals. All in all, it adds up to a big evening on the ball club's campus.

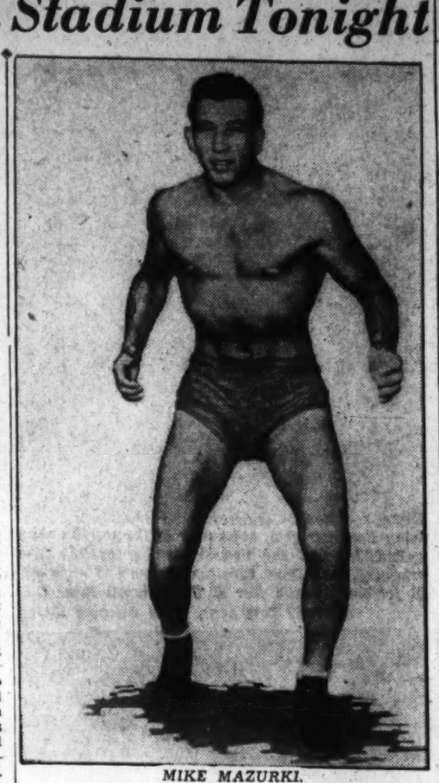
Olson, one of the most universally disliked villains since the rascally plantation owner who sold Uncle Tom to the neighboring ball club, has promised to flatten Boesch so quickly and completely the fans will think he's interwoven in the canvas. The closely-cropped Swede is hankering for a return bout with Ernie Dusek, whom he claims was handed a decision over him several weeks ago.

He also wants to meet Emil Dusek, and even went so far as to offer to wrestle him tonight after pinning Boesch. Turner, however, balked at the idea of putting all of his marble-heads in on ring the same evening, and promised to let Cliff beat up Dusek some other time. Olson, it is reported, has equipped himself with a fresh supply of cut glass, adhesive tape, peanuts, thumb tacks and other harmless odds and ends he usually employs during a match. His motto is, "Anything for a laugh."

But the laugh may be on the retired Adolphus Augustus football star, because Boesch is an artist of no mean ability—and an artist in every sense of the word. The bronzed Californian, who happens to be one of the most promising heroes graduated from training school in the last couple of years, still plays the game according to Hoyle, and refuses to stoop to foul tactics. Hoyle, of course, is regarded as something of an antiquated sissy by the more robust rogues.

But Boesch proved satisfactorily his ability to handle difficult situations in previous matches and should be a fairly even test for the Midwestern madman. A powerfully built man, light on his hoofs and handy with his dukes, he will be a sentimental favorite with the crowd. Olson at his best—or worst—will have his hands full—and not entirely of peanuts.

Coleman was a huge favorite here several years ago, but faded out of the picture when new faces appeared on the scene. He has been campaigning with unusual success in the East recently, and should regain much of his former patronage against Emil Dusek.



MIKE MAZURKI.

The battle-royal involves Bibber McCoy, 360-pound Thor Johnson, Slim Zimbleman, Ed Kibbons, Mike Mazurki and Ed White. The finalists will wrestle to a finish, and the first two men to go down will reappear in a special consolation bout.

Match Point Sets Track Record To Win Fifth at Cumberland

Fair Grounds, Cumberland, Md., Aug. 10.—A crowd of 7,000 today watched Victor P. Noyes' Match Point run a mile and one-sixteenth in a new track record time of 1:18 1-5, to win the Fort Cumberland Hotel purse feature race.

A dead heat for second money resulted between two Washington-owned thoroughbreds, H. M. Simpson's Lady's Favor, who followed the winner for a mile, just lasted to tie W. H. Denham's Kindacorn for the place. The latter came from last place in the final half mile.

The start was marred by Sun Crax lunging and unseating Jockey Red Butler.

The "graveyard for favorites," as one turf follower dubbed this track after six of yesterday's seven favorites were defeated, saw the long-shot players continue to collect.

Mrs. Robert H. Heighe's The Trout opened the sport by taking the five-eighths opener in 0:56, the fastest time ever registered here by a 2-year-old. She paid $59.30. Then when Tuleyries Lad, owned by Mrs. E. I. Bull, of Virginia, defeated seven opponents in the 6½ furlongs of the second race, he paid $10.20. Those who coupled him with The Trout in the daily double collected $242.10.

Ambrose Cremen's Chase him saved the "form" players by winning the 6½ furlongs of the third. However, the favorite players, who backed Bromide as a 3-to-5 favorite, again suffered a setback when Eddie Colvin's Brain Child, at $12.50, won the Knights of Columbus Purse, run as the fourth race.

Sam Chapman Hits for Circuit With Mate Aboard in 6th.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Aug. 10.—Sam Chapman celebrated his return to the Athletics' line-up with a home run in the sixth with Bob Johnson on base to give the Athletics a 5-3 victory over the Red Sox today. He had been benched several days ago because he wasn't hitting.

Boston threatened in the ninth by scoring two runs on Ben Chapman's walk, Tabor's triple and Bobby Doerr's long fly but Luther Thomas forced Cramer to fly out to end the game.

The Athletics made seven hits, just as many as Boston, but the home team hit when it counted. Earl Brucker's third-inning double cleared the sacks to score the Athletics' first three runs.

Seeded Net Players Win

Riggs, Grant Win Easily, Cooke Bows

Wilmer Allison Wins 3-Set Duel; Mako Is Victor.

By the Associated Press.

Rye, N. Y., Aug. 10.—Six of the eight seeded players in the Eastern grass courts tennis championships' men's singles, paced by Defending Champion Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, today reached the round of 16 with only Elwood T. Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., listed fifth, on the sidelines.

Cooke was eliminated today by Jack Kramer, 16-year-old Californian. In a second-round match that went three sets, with Kramer coming up from 2—4 in the final to win, 6—2, 4—6, 6—4.

Sidney B. Wood, jr., of New York, was eliminated late yesterday by Leonard Hartman accounting for the seventh seed. But the other seeded stars—Riggs, Frank Parker, Bitsy Grant, Wilmer Allison, Joe Hunt and Gene Mako—all came through without much difficulty.

Riggs raced through two sets to beat Frank Bowden, of New York, 6—0, 6—4. Parker soundly trounced Russell Bobbitt, of Atlanta, Ga., 6—1, 6—0, while Grant, playing improved tennis, downed Robert Low, another New Yorker, 6—3, 6—3. Allison whipped J. Gilbert Hall, of New York and South Orange, N. J., 8—6, 6—4, in a bitterly fought match. Hunt downed E. J. Filby, the newly arrived English player, 6—0, 12—10, in one of the day's best matches, and Mako whipped Bob Kamrath, of Austin, Tex., 6—2, 6—2.

Other players to reach the round of 16 were George Toley, of Coral Gables, Fla.; Charles E. Hare, of England; Wayne Sabin, of Portland, Oreg.; Hal. Surface, of Kansas City, Mo.; Frank D. Guersey, of Orlando, Fla.; A. Ronald Lubin, of Los Angeles; Gardnar Mulloy, of Miami; Gerard Podesta, of Montclair, N. J., and Owen Anderson, of Hollywood, Calif.

Five women players completed their third-round matches, joining Norma Taubele, Alice Marble and Barbara Winslow in the quarter-finals.

Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan played remarkably well to dispose of Helen Pedersen, te Stamford, Conn., ace, at 6—1, 8—6, while Dorothy Workman was too steady for Patricia Canning, of Alameda, Calif., by 6—2, 6—4.

Dorothy Bundy eliminated Mrs. Virginia Rice Johnson at 6—3, 6—4, and Mrs. John Van Ryn, in her first eastern tourney this summer, advanced by beating Eunice Dean, a fellow-Texan, 6—3, 7—5.

Mme. Sylvia Henrotin, of France, the top foreign seed, fashioned a three-set triumph over sensational young Virginia Wolfenden, of San Francisco, 7—5, 2—6, 6—3.

Don Budge and Gene Mako, the Wimbledon and former national champions, scored easily over John and Charles Shostrom, of Chicago, 6—1, 6—1, to pace the seeded men's doubles teams.

took the lead at the start and held it all the way. This time E. Roland Harriman's Prohibitor and Champlain offered the early opposition. Long Key, after faltering for a couple of strides, swung back into the battle and for a moment, nearing the three-quarter marker, it looked as if the favorite would make a race of it, but once again he found the pace too torrid and went into the air.

Man of the Month

By Arch McDonald.
(WJSV-Wheaties Baseball Commentator.)

(Each day, Arch McDonald distributes 10 points among the Nats whose play was most helpful to the Washington Club. At the end of each month The Washington Post will award to the leading player a gift in token of the honor of being The Post-Wheaties "Man of the Month.")

Zeke Bonura, making only one hit in the free-slugging game at Yankee Stadium yesterday, yielded the lead in the Man of the Month contest to Buddy Myer. The ten points awarded yesterday were distributed thusly:

To George Case, four points, because he made three hits and drew a walk in five times at bat, and because he tied the game in the eighth inning with a home run.

To Cecil Travis, two points, because he made two of the Nats hits and batted in a pair of runs.

To Buddy Myer, two points, because he made two of the Nats hits and batted in a run.

To Al Simmons, one point, because his lone hit of the day was a home run.

To Rick Ferrell, one point, because he was responsible for an important Washington run.

The Score:

Buddy Myer	15	Angelo Giuliani	4
Zeke Bonura	14	Harry Kelley	4
Buddy Lewis	8	Sammy West	4
Cecil Travis	8	Ossie Bluege	2
Ken Chase	7	Elon Hogsett	2
Al Simmons	7	Joe Krakauskas	2
George Case	6	Taft Wright	1
Dutch Leonard	5	Rick Ferrell	1

Two Titles Are Decided

Peewee, Junior Baseball Champions Crowned.

In the three-game All-Star baseball championships held at Griffith Stadium yesterday, two titles were decided—peewee and junior—while the third, the insect, was washed out. Some 1,500 fans watched the all-day proceedings.

The morning tussle saw the Washington Boys Club All-Stars defeat the Columbian League All-Stars, 4-2, to capture the District peewee crown. Both clubs did little damage at bat. The Boys Club could muster only two hits, while the Columbians were getting 4. Costly errors in the sixth frame by the Columbian Leaguers was the margin of victory. It was the first win in three years for the Boys Club nine.

With Maloney, Beal and Kendall leading the attack, the Columbian Leaguers garnered the crown in the junior class by downing the District Junior Colored All-Stars, 12-3. Rozelle, Birdman and Kendall limited the colored lads to five hits. Harris, loser's leftfielder, collected three hits in as many times at bat to register over half of his team's safe blows.

The tilt between the American Legion All-Stars and the Columbian All-Stars to decide the insect title was rained out at the beginning of the third. It will be played at a later date, which will be set by league officials.

Patty Berg Leads Derby

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 10.—The jinx which followed Patty Berg for three consecutive Women's Western golf derbies was on the run today and apparently due for a bad beating from the little Minnesota star tomorrow.

The freckle-faced Minneapolis girl, runner-up in the event for the past three summers, turned in her third straight sub-par round today for a 54-hole total of 226 strokes and an apparent stranglehold on the title won from 1935 through 1937 by Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky.

Miss Miley, whose 309 aggregate last year set a tournament record which is expected to go by the board in tomorrow's final 18 holes had a 54-hole total of 240 strokes for third place as the field headed into the home stretch. The second place holder was another Minneapolis star, Beatrice Barrett, who carded a two under par 78 today for a 239 aggregate.

Nats

Gordon, first up, hit his sixteenth homer of the year into the leftfield stands. Pete Appleton replaced Hogsett at that point.

In the fourth the Nats went to the front, 9-6, when Lewis swatted a homer into the rightfield seats, with Case on base, and Simmons followed with a similar clout into the same stands. They made it 10-6 in the fifth when Myer singled and raced to third, thanks to Hoag, who let the ball scoot between his legs. Ferrell's fly scored Myer.

The Yanks, after reclaiming a run in the fifth, staged a four-run uprising against Appleton in the sixth with the help of two more Washington errors. After Rolfe hit into the rightfield stands for a homer, Appleton disposed of the next two hitters and apparently had the side retired when DiMaggio popped to Lewis. But Lewis muffed the catch and DiMaggio reached second, scoring on a single by Gehrig. A bit later, after Selkirk walked, Gordon doubled and put the Yanks in an 11-10 lead.

Murphy got the pitching job for the Yanks in the seventh and it was against him that Case hit his game-tying homer in the eighth. But meanwhile Kelley took over the pitching for Washington, and you know what he did in the tenth.

Barbara Gets Marriage Proposal

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Barbara Carroll, who has figured sensationally in the trial of her father, Francis M. Carroll (inset), at South Paris, Me., finds relief and amusement in fan mail. She's shown in play suit at her home looking over a marriage proposal. She also got an offer to sing with a band.

9 Witnesses Back Carroll's 'Partial Alibi'

Dismissed Deputy Testifies in Own Defense in Murder Trial.

By the United Press.

South Paris, Me., Aug. 10.—Deposed Deputy Sheriff Francis M. Carroll, a former scoutmaster and church worker, today presented his partial alibi for the Littlefield murder, but he was not asked, and did not testify what his actions were between 7:30 p. m. and 9 p. m. last October 13, the interval in which Dr. James G. Littlefield was slain.

Nine witnesses corroborated the story Carroll did tell. They included his wife, Ruby, but not his pretty 17-year-old daughter, Barbara, whose romance with Carroll's accuser, Paul (Buddy) Dwyer, allegedly indirectly motivated the crime. Barbara was not among the two score witnesses sworn as the defense opened.

Dwyer, 19, pleaded guilty to the murder last December 2, and was sentenced to life imprisonment. Subsequently, he repudiated the confession, and only last week testified he was intimidated by Carroll —the "real slayer"—into pleading guilty.

The husky, 43-year-old defendant testified that on the night the doctor was slain he attended an American Legion dinner in Norway with his wife, but left "sometime before 8 o'clock" for the sheriff's office. At 9 p. m., he said, he served a summons on a Mr. Piper and then returned to the Legion Hall for his wife.

Though not charged with the crime, Carroll also was questioned about his activities on the night Dr. Littlefield's wife was slain. That slaying, the State contends, occurred shortly after midnight on the morning of October 15.

Carroll testified that he and his wife went to his mother's home the night of October 14, but he returned about 11 p. m. He was not asked and did not testify whether he left his home after 11 p. m. the night of October 14 and the morning of October 15.

Wife on Stand.

However, Mrs. Ruby Carroll, the defendant's 36-year-old wife, testified that her husband went immediately to bed that night and did not rise until after dawn next morning.

"You say you came home and went to bed and Carroll went to bed, too?" asked Prosecutor Ralph M. Ingalls in cross-examining Mrs. Carroll.

"Yes, sir," she replied.

"Didn't you tell me that he went out afterward?" pressed Ingalls.

"I don't remember telling you that," she replied.

"You say that when he came home, he went to bed and didn't get out till the next morning?"

"Yes, sir."

Testifies 3½ Hours.

Carroll testified for 3½ hours, two hours of which was under cross-examination.

In ending cross-examination, Ingalls asked Carroll whether it was true "that you had intimate relations with your daughter Barbara."

Defense Counsel Clyde R. Chapman jumped to his feet.

"I object, your honor," he said. "It had nothing to do relative to the murder of Dr. Littlefield."

Superior Judge William H. Fisher turned to Carroll and said:

"Your counsel has objected to your answering that question. Therefore, I shall exclude it."

"That is all," Ingalls said.

The State contends Carroll slew Dr. Littlefield when the physician threatened to expose him as the seducer of his own daughter.

Crowd Storms Courthouse.

The biggest crowd of the trial, now in its ninth day, stormed the Oxford County courthouse today. The courtroom filled soon after the doors opened at 8:30 a. m., two hours before the trial was resumed. Some 2,000 summer residents and tourists were unable to gain admission and waited outside, hoping for a glimpse of the principals during recesses.

Barbara Carroll sat with her mother in the spectators' section. Both Mrs. Carroll and Barbara hunched forward in their seats while Carroll was on the stand, straining to hear his every word.

As Carroll left the courtroom in custody of guards at the conclusion of today's session, Barbara stepped to his side and embraced him. They posed, smiling, for news photographers.

Carroll was called to the stand after his counsel completed a 25-minute opening address. He stood in the witness box, resting his hands on the rail, and testified in a low, but clear and firm voice.

Denies Knowledge of Letters.

Not once in his 3½ hours on the stand did he appear ruffled. He answered questions as rapidly as they were put to him and occasionally smiled.

He denied that prior to his arrest he knew of passionate love letters written by Barbara to young Dwyer. The State contends his desperate desire to recover these letters, some of which allegedly accused him of violating his daughter, led to the murder.

Neither had he prior knowledge that Paul and Barbara, as purportedly expressed in one of the letters, "were married under the trees."

He admitted ownership of a cigarette lighter found at the murder scene, but said he last had seen it some weeks prior to the murder.

Boston Bees Buy Blue Shortstop

Boston, Aug. 10 (AP).—The Boston Bees today announced the purchase of Shortstop Edward Miller, of the Kansas City Club of the American Association.

In exchange for the 22-year-old infielder who will be delivered next spring, the Bees gave up Gil English, infielder, and Catcher John Riddle. The latter already has been tourned over to Kansas City. Two other players, to be delivered later, and an unannounced amount of cash also were involved in the deal, according to Secretary John Quinn.

District to Carry G. H. A. Case to Appeals Court

Insurance Law Violation Is Charged; U. S. Drops Out of Affair.

The Group Heilth Association today faces a prolonged legal battle as a result of Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal's decision to carry to the Court of Appeals the charge G. H. A. is practicing insurance contrary to District laws.

The appeal from Justice Bailey's decision of July 2 upholding legality of G. H. A. will be taken by the District alone, as the Department of Justice yesterday announced its belief that the Bailey decision was "sound."

"The Department is of the opinion that the decision of Mr. Justice Bailey would be affirmed," it was stated, "and that, therefore, an appeal would be a departure from the department's general policy needlessly prolonging litigation."

The department, in the person of District Attorney David A. Pine, and the District, represented by Superintendent of Insurance J. Balch Moor, were co-defendants in G. H. A.'s suit for a declaratory judgment that it is not illegally engaged in the practice of medicine or acting as an insurance company.

Medical Issued Settled.

Inasmuch as the allegation of illegal practice of medicine concerned the Justice Department, and the department has now decided not to appeal, it appears that this aspect of the case has been settled.

According to Seal, the District is interested solely in the contention insurance laws are being violated.

In announcing it would not appeal Justice Bailey's decision, the Justice Department made no reference to the fact that it is, in effect, fighting the G. H. A. battle on another front. It is at present gathering data in an effort to show that the American Medical Association and the Medical Society of the District, archenemies of the G. H. A., are violating the antitrust laws. If the department had appealed it would virtually have been attacking G. H. A. and striking at co-operative medicine's foes at the same time.

Department Quotes Bailey.

However, a spokesman at the department yesterday insisted the decision not to appeal was made on legal grounds alone and involved no question of policy.

In its public statement, the department quoted Justice Bailey, who said:

"Such a corporation as G. H. A., not for profit but for the mutual benefit of its members, is in my opinion not engaged in the practice of medicine or holding itself out as doing so . . .

"The question here is one of statutory construction. It is evident that the purpose of the statute was to protect the public from quacks, from the ignorant and incompetent. The actions of the plaintiff in no way tend to commercialize the practice of medicine. Its membership is limited to employes of the Government in certain of the administrative branches. It is not in the business of making money by furnishing services to anyone who may come along."

"The department is of the opinion that this conclusion is sound," it said. "In fact, the courts of some States support the decision of Mr. Justice Bailey even in cases involving corporations which are operated for profit."

13 Errors Charged.

Extending its comment to the insurance aspect of the case, the department added, "the Group Health Association is engaged in providing a service rather than in selling insurance. Consequently, it does not act as an insurance company within the meaning of the District code or within the meaning of cases which have defined 'insurance companies!'"

The corporation counsel, however, took a different view. In the assignment of errors filed yesterday with the clerk of the District Court, 13 specific declarations of alleged errors by Justice Bailey were given.

The contention of Seal and Vernon E. West, principal assistant corporation counsel, is that the court erred in not holding G. H. A. engaged in insurance. Corporation counsel charged G. H. A. was failing to comply with five sections of the District Code of 1901, with provisions of Title II of the District revenue act of 1922 and with the District marine insurance act.

Seal said last night the District code contains a proviso exempting from the insurance laws relief organizations made up within a group. Failure of Justice Bailey to clearly base his decision upon that exemption, he said, was one of the factors prompting the District to carry the case to a higher court.

SEC Launches Savings Bank Trust Analysis

Mutual Institutions Study to Parallel Insurance Finance Inquiry.

By the Associated Press.

Securities Commission experts have begun the spade work for the antitrust investigation of $12,000,000,000 assets of the Nation's mutual savings banks.

In some respects the study probably will parallel the commission's analysis of the $30,000,000 assets of insurance companies and the relation of this huge reservoir of funds to the capital market.

The latter phase of the survey was authorized by Congress to determine whether concentration of enormous assets entailed monopolistic practices.

Insurance Analysis Outlined.

SEC experts already have outlined the job of analyzing the mechanics of marketing securities to insurance companies. Present indications are that the commission's monopoly staff will pattern its study of savings bank assets after its survey of the insurance field.

Executives in both fields may be called in to testify, although much of the raw material needed for the study is available in financial manuals and elsewhere.

Pointing up the savings banks inquiry is the fact that about $6,000,000,000, or 50 per cent, of all such assets are held in New York State, and about 90 per cent is piled up in banks in five States—New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

Interlocking Directorates Hinted.

Commission specialists searching for monopolistic practices and influences believe the job of analyzing interlocking directorates will present difficulties.

For instance, a railroad president may be a director of a savings bank and an insurance company, both of which may own bonds of the railroad. He may be in a position to influence the purchase of new bonds issued by the railroad through his power to direct part of the railroad's business to the bank and the insurance company.

Assuming such situations exist, SEC analysts said they might be hard to pin down. Some explain it will be no simple job to measure such factors with precision or to weigh their effect on the capital market.

Once the job of defining and measuring monopolistic forces is completed, the experts must go to work on the next step—devising remedies.

Federal Theaters Give Jobs to Reds, Thomas Protests

Representative J. Parnell Thomas (Republican), of New Jersey, member of the House committee investigating un-American activities, charged last night that the Federal Theater Project is a "patronage vehicle for Reds" and demanded a "thorough cleansing of it."

Thomas said he had uncovered evidence during the past three weeks revealing that officials of the project which is sponsored by the Works Progress Administration to furnish employment for professional actors, are supplying jobs to Communists without experience.

His allegations came as the investigating committee prepared to meet in initial session today to map a policy prior to beginning hearings Friday on "subversive" activities.

Cotton Rallies; December 8.44

New York, Aug. 10 (AP).—Cotton rallied today as complaints of boll weevil activity increased from the Southeast. December advanced from 8.38 to 8.44, closing at the high with final prices 7 to 10 points net higher.

The market opened 5 to 7 points higher in response to higher Liverpool cables and on moderate trade and foreign buying. Sellers were timid, it was said, partly because of fears insect activity had caused damage since the crop report was compiled as of August 1, due to continuous showers in parts of the belt east of the Mississippi River. The possibility any price decline would lead to the imposition of a Government loan still restricted offerings.

Final prices, at the highs for the day, were approximately $1 a bale above the low levels touched just after the Government cotton crop report was issued on Monday.

Wheat Prices Gain 1⅜ Cents On War Fears

Enlarged Export Sales Aid the General Upturn.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 10.—Uneasiness over persistent Russo-Japanese clashing, together with enlarged export buying from the United States and Canada, hoisted the Chicago wheat market 1⅜ cents today.

Some authorities said that as much as 900,000 bushels of North American wheat was taken today for shipment to Europe, and Liverpool quotations were much higher than due, a circumstance attributed here in great measure both to the Russia-Japan situation and to central European belligerence.

The United States Government crop report issued after trading was over for the day proved to be about as had been looked for regarding wheat, but was a surprise relative to corn.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were 1 cent to 1⅜ higher compared with yesterday's finish, September 64 ⅜-½, December 66 ⅜-½, corn ½ cent off to ⅜ up, September 51 ¼-⅜, December 48 ⅛, oats ⅜-⅝ advanced, rye showing ½-¾ bulge, and provisions varying from 50 cents setback to 5 cents gain.

Creditors' Petition Forces Stutz Sale

Indianapolis, Aug. 10 (AP).—Carl Wilde, Federal referee in bankruptcy, said today an order will be entered to dispose of the assets of the Stutz Motor Car Co., Inc., as a result of a hearing of a creditors' petition for the sale.

The trustee of the company reported its assets yere $370,000 in real estate and $86,827.20 in machinery and other property. The principal creditor is the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to which $266,000 is owed on a note for $300,000.

The Market

By C. Norman Stabler, A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Close Irregularly Lower as Late Rail Rally Fails to Advance the List.

New York, Aug. 10.—The stock market again appeared tired today and when a rally in the rails in the afternoon failed to carry the balance of the list forward, there was another irregularly lower movement. The action of the list was not far different from that of the preceding two days this week, the close being moderately lower, about a quarter point on the average, and the turnover amounting to only 809,880 shares.

Equipment shares showed some resistance, as did aviation and gold shares. In other divisions there were a few active favorites that managed to retain plus signs but the group movements were lower and of the 739 individual issues traded in, there were only 162 advances compared with 418 declines, while 159 issues were unchanged.

It was not a day to stir speculative enthusiasm and the session passed with traders watching the developments on foreign war fronts and waiting for some definite signs of the hoped-for improvement in business.

Automotive Buying.

Automotive buying for the production of new models has contributed to a better volume of business but railroad buying is still light. The steel and motor groups were two of the hardest hit in today's selloff, the motors reflecting some profit taking after their relatively better showing as compared with other industrial sections.

General Motors, selling ex-dividend, went down 1⅛ and Chrysler was off 1¼. Steel opened off a small fraction but then gave ground easily on heavy offerings, closing near its worst of the day, down 1¼, the same as Bethlehem. The steel corporation's report on July shipments showed a decrease of 36,487 tons from the June total and of 441,570 tons from a year ago.

Another rally in the gold shares reflected the increased interest in these mining stocks since the hoarding movement developed abroad. Dome made a new high and the others are selling near their best of the year, plus signs being carried today by Dome, Alaska Juneau and Homestake.

Aviation Reflects Fears.

Aviation issues also were firm, reflecting the war scares. Bendix was the most active, adding a half point, and Wright Aero, at the inactive post, was up 1½. Other members of the group gave ground grudgingly.

There were a number of special moves in widely scattered sections of the list. Gillette, which had been more or less dormant, came forward as the day's most active stock and added about a point. American Sugar broke 2¾ points on unfavorable dividend news. United States Rubber preferred made a new high but closed lower while the common was off 1⅜ after its bullish performance of the previous day. Speculation continued at a high rate in Delaware & Hudson and New York Central, with talk going the rounds of pool operations. Both reacted, in the face of favorable news.

Foreign news continues to disturb the peace of investors. Foreign currencies did slightly better than earlier in the week but there was no interruption of the hoarding movement and American banks were among the purchasers of the metal in London today for shipment to New York.

Uneasiness over the Russo-Japanese clashes contributed to a recovery in wheat, the commodity also being helped by a large export business from this country. The close in Chicago was up 1 to 1⅜ cents. Cotton moved ahead 7 to 10 points, helped by boll weevil complaints and a general absence of selling pressure.

High-grade money market listed bonds were firm today, while speculative varieties of senior obligations fluctuated irregularly. United States Treasury issues showed gains ranging from smallest fractions to one-fourth point, and some of the intermediate maturities began to push through to new highs.

Best rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds were firm, as bankers reported a quick sell-out for $36,500,000 Toledo Edison bonds and debentures, and premiums for the securities over the offering price. Turnover in all issues was $5,180,000.

Rails Generally Lower.

Railroad issues remained foremost in the speculative section, with gains more numerous, but losses more emphatic. The demand was selective and occasioned only small advances. Bonds that were offered plentifully found few buyers, however, and recessions ran to 5 points.

Borderline rails were among the weak spots, while better rated issues held their ground. Rail and utility holding bonds were dull, and communications issues irregular. Local tractions showed both gains and losses, and other special groups were equally uncertain.

Japanese Issues Dip.

In the foreign section Japanese issues drifted lower and in some instances dipped lower than previous nadirs. Italian bonds were soft, but Polish issues improved. The German group remained uncertain. Among Latin-American default bonds small gains were the rule. Highest grade foreigns were well maintained.

Steel Activity Is Unchanged At 40 Per Cent

Chicago and Pittsburgh Losses Offset by Upward Trend.

New York, Aug. 10.—Steel ingot production is substantially unchanged this week at 40 per cent of the country's capacity. While there was a loss of four points to 34 per cent at Chicago and a loss of one point to 30 per cent at Pittsburgh, the upward trend of operations in other areas virtually offsets these downward changes, says Iron Age today in its weekly survey of the steel industry.

"New business thus far in August has been running in excess of the July weekly average, which in turn exceeded that of June. While automotive buying for initial production of new models has contributed somewhat to the better volume, the bulk of current buying springs from widely diversified sources and is mainly attributed to inventory depletion. That production must still rise well above the present volume to wipe out steel companies' losses is indicated by analyses of July billings by three central district producers which show that net prices last month were approximately $7 a ton below those of June.

"No new development has occurred in the wage situation during the week so far as the steel companies are concerned, but a district convention of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee at Chicago voted unanimously not to accept any wage reductions. Meanwhile small steel companies are protesting to the public contracts board of the Department of Labor against the adoption of a minimum of 62½ cents per hour for the entire Northern and Eastern region, as proposed by the S. W. O. C.

"Railroad buying is still light, but the $5,000,000 loan for which the New York Central is seeking ICC approval indicates that needs may become pressing. This road will buy 28,600 tons of rails and fastenings and repair 1,000 freight cars, 300 passenger cars and 185 locomotives. The Southern Railway has added orders for 153 freight cars to the 5,500 cars on which builders are now working and may buy six diesel electric locomotives and two passenger car trains.

"Automobile companies are rushing work on new models, one press preview having been scheduled for August 19, an unusually early date. Some assembly lines will resume this week and motor car output by next week at least will start a gradually ascending scale."

Ludlum Steel Merger Voted

Pompton Lakes, N. J., Aug. 10 (AP). The Ludlum Steel Co. announced today its stockholders and those of the Alleghany Steel Co. of Pennsylvania had voted to merge the two alloy steel manufacturing companies into the Alleghany Ludlum Steel Corporation.

W. F. Detwiler, chairman of the Alleghany Steel Co., said the merger represented "a true merger of the assets and personnel of our respective companies." The statement, given out at the registered office by the Ldlum Cteel Co. here, said no elimination of plants was contemplated.

The statement listed the combined assets of the two companies as $31,815,000 as of December 31, 1937, and their combined working capital as $10,032,000 as of the same date. The Ludlum meeting here was delayed several hours by an unsuccessful move in New York by two small stockholders for an injunction to restrain it.

Cost of Living Continues Drop

New York, Aug. 10 (AP).—The cost of living of wage earners in the United States declined 0.2 per cent from June to July, according to a report made public today by the National Industrial Conference Board, an organization chiefly supported by large industries.

Living costs in July were 20.6 per cent higher than the 1933 depression low; 13.8 per cent lower than in July, 1929, and 2.7 per cent lower than in July a year ago.

The current change showed moderate decreases in all groups of expenditures except fuel and light, which increased slightly.

Medicine Leads Co-op Struggle, Priest Declares

Father McDonald Points to Group Health as the Front of Fight.

Co-operatives ranging from joint purchase of silk stockings and car tokens to groceries and housing were described yesterday by the Rev. G. A. McDonald, St. Louis "co-op" authority, who is teaching this week at the Catholic Action summer school in the Hotel Washington.

However, he said the "front" of the co-operative struggle is in the battle for co-operative medicine. "The issues involved in co-operatives are up for their real test in the fight over group health," he declared.

Father McDonald, who is associate editor of the Queen's Work, stated that at least 30 girls' schools throughout the country have co-operatives based on the wholesale purchase of silk stockings. In some cases, he added, these co-ops have expanded into handling other goods.

Buy Tokens Wholesale.

In one Chicago school, he said, the students banded together to buy car tokens at wholesale instead of retail rates. "A saving of $100 was effected in one semester," Father McDonald asserted.

Students at a Texas university, he said, co-operated in obtaining dormitory accommodations and brought the price of board and room down to $15 a month.

"People join in co-operatives only when there is evident need," he said. "For example, anybody could see that there was a need for group hospitalization. Hospitals were failing with their big overhead and yet without enough people to fill them. So co-operative hospitalization has become well established in the United States."

Glad of Federal Aid.

"The strange thing is," he observed, "that doctors and hospitals approve of group hospitalization but not co-operative medicine, which is based on exactly the same principle."

"It's lucky,' he said, "that though the Government is promoting socialized medicine, it also favors co-operatives." He added that one of the advantages of co-operation is that it forestalls socialization.

The co-operative principle is "one of the best ways of distributing wealth," said Father McDonald. "In co-operatives, the profits cannot all go to one person, as they are distributed in proportion to the size of each individual's purchase. And the profits remain within the community. Furthermore, no monopoly can grow up in co-operatives, as no single individual controls them."

SEC Man Tells Lions Of Laws on Business

Administration of new and old regulatory laws affecting businessmen by the Federal Trade Commission was explained in an address by R. E. Freer, commission member, at the weekly luncheon meeting of the Washington Lions Club in the Hotel Mayflower yesterday. He dealt particularly with fair trade practice conferences conducted by numerous industries under commission auspices in recent years.

R. L. Pollio, whose birthday it was, received a gift from his fellow club members. H. M. Brundage, jr., presided.

Scientific Jury Urged as Curb On Inventions 'Harmful' to Man

By the Associated Press.

London, Aug. 10.—The creation of a board of scientists and philosophers empowered to give or refuse permits for inventions likely to affect human life was proposed today by Prof. Cyril Edwin Mitchinson Joad, distinguished British philosopher, in a bitter attack on modern civilization.

"Science has given us powers fit for gods, yet we bring to their use the mentality of schoolboys and savages," the head of the department of philosophy and psychology in Birbeck College, University of London, told a teachers' summer school meeting.

"The symbol of this is the airplane, the greatest of man's inventions, which nevertheless threatens his civilization with destruction," he said.

"The superman made the airplane but the ape has got hold of it.

"To step on throttles, insert coins into metal slots, scan headlines, crowd through clicking turnstiles, turn on the radio, hurl ourselves over the surface of the earth in a mechanism propelled by petrol—these constitute the modern notion of entertainment.

"Men of genius by the dozen, men of talent by the hundred labored in order that the radio might be. A miracle was performed, but with what result? . . .

"Science, in short, has provided in abundance the means to the good life, but it has not taught us how to live."

IN THE MUNICIPAL COURT OF THE District of Columbia. J. Arthur Walters, trading as Takoma Funeral Home, 277 Carroll street northwest, Washington, D. C., plaintiff, vs. Adelaide Shupp, defendant. No. 377-415. Order of publication. The object of this suit is to recover judgment against the defendant, Adelaide Shupp, for funeral services rendered, pursuant to her order of June 16, 1938, to the deceased Mrs. Anna Elisabeth Boyle, in the sum of two hundred seventy-five ($275.00) dollars, and to have judgment of condemnation of certain property of the defendant levied on under attachment issued in this suit to satisfy the plaintiff's claim. It is therefore, this 10th day of August, 1938, ordered that the defendant appear in this court on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, after the day of the first publication of this order, to defend this suit and show cause why said condemnation should not be had; otherwise the suit will be proceeded with as in case of default. How to Torture Your Wife

Bob Burns Says—

You'd be surprised how many letters I get askin' my advice about matrimony or what to do for gumboils or how to make a feather mattress. Down home, nobody ever regarded me as a fountain of wisdom and I always tried to keep out of other people's affairs. I've found folks can do a sight of harm in giving advice. I've seen it proved, time and again, right in my own family.

Grandpa Snazzy met my Uncle Slug on the street one day and said, "Slug, you're just the man I've been lookin' for! I took your advice and told Grandma straight out that she couldn't boss and henpeck me any more." Uncle Slug slapped Grandpa on the back and said, "Good for you, Snazzy! Now you can hold your head up!" and Grandpa says, "Yes—but it's still pretty sore and bruised!"

729 Men's Fine OVERCOATS

Identical Garments Have Sold in Our Regular Stocks for $35

Gentlemen! Read the top of this page again! Yes, you actually save $13 on every one of these fine overcoats . . . garments that were made up by our regular manufacturer to keep his factory busy during the early summer season. Because he sells us thousands of garments yearly, we were allotted over 700 for our Annual August Sale! "BUT," he stipulated, "THE LABELS MUST COME OUT IF THEY'RE SOLD AT $22!" And did we cut them out . . . but fast! Here are identical overcoats that we've sold in our own stocks at $35. Every one an All-Wool Fleece or Melton! You'll see one of the best-balanced assortments of colors, models and patterns it has been our pleasure to show in a good many years.

If you have an eye for value, and we know that Washington men have, you should purchase your overcoat in August when the savings are greatest! We sincerely believe that you will not be able to duplicate coats of such excellent fabrics; such distinctive styling; such superb workmanship at this remarkably low price during the regular season.
